Under an indictment charging in one count a conspiracy to violate section 215, cited in the last preceding paragraph, the government has to sustain a heavier burden of proof as to the intent of the conspirators than under other counts in the indictment charging a violation of said section 215; in order to sustain the charge of conspiracy, it is necessary to prove an intent, not only to defraud, but also to defraud by the use of the mails. Farmer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 903, 139 C. C. A. 341.

In Elder v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 84, 155 C. C. A. 614, the evidence was held sufficient to sustain a conviction of conspiracy to violate said section 215 in using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud.

In Schwartzberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 348, 154 C. C. A. 228, it was held that while the mail was used quite extensively by the defendants and in execution of fraud, the record showed that the main reliance of the defendants was upon the "quick tongue and fertility in falsehood" of one of them, and the necessary intent, not proven by direct evidence, could not be inferred beyond a reasonable doubt, so that a conviction of conspiracy to violate said section 215 could not be sustained. See also where the evidence was held insufficient, Farmer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 903, 139 C. C. A. 341, reversing a judgment of conviction.

Where there was a single sentence upon counts sustained by evidence, judgment was not reversed on the ground that another count was unsupported by evidence. Brand v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 219, 149 C. C. A. 409.

Instructions.—Where the indictment clearly charged the overt acts as following the conspiracy and done to effect the object of the conspiracy, an instruction was sufficient which directed the jury to find the defendants guilty "if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a conspiracy as charged in the indictment, and that the defendants now on trial were parties to that conspiracy, and that any one of the overt acts as charged in the indictment was committed as therein alleged. Shepard v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 73, 149 C. C. A. 283, overruling the objection that the instruction did not state that the overt act must have been shown to have followed the conspiracy in point of time and must have been done to effect its object.

Verdict.—On a trial for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, the verdict "guilty of conspiracy," was a general and not a special verdict, and was to be understood as referring to the conspiracy charged in the indictment, and was sufficient. Huff v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 892, 143 C. C. A. 290.

Conviction.—In a prosecution for violation of PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 464, § 215, on an indictment also containing counts for conspiracy to violate that section, where the conspiracy counts set forth as overt acts the mailing of letters, some of which appeared in the counts under said section 215, yet each of the conspiracy counts also set forth as overt acts the mailing of letters not set out in the counts under section 215, as the letters mailed in execution of the scheme, conviction on all the counts did not constitute a double conviction. Preeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 156 C. C. A. 429.

COPYRIGHT

Vol. II, p. 274, sec. 3.

Chromos.—As chromos are plainly omitted from this section, they do not come under the provision relating to registration in the Patent Office. Stecher Lithographic Co. v. Dunston Lithograph Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 601.

1909 Supp., p. 81, sec. 1(b).

Right to novelize play.—The right to novelize a play was created by this section. Under the old copyright statute the right to novelize a play in such form as did not result in a "copy" was a right in the public domain and inhered in the first novelizer whether he were the author of the play, or another. Fitch v. Young, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 230 Fed. 743.

Right of dramatization.—An exclusive right to dramatize a novel "for presentation on the stage" was held to mean an exclusive right to dramatize a spoken play and did not comprehend the independent right to dramatize the novel for a moving picture play. Klein v. Beach, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 240, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 108, 151 C. C. A. 282.

1909 Supp., p. 81, sec. 1(d).

Playright distinguished from copyright.—Under the old copyright statute the distinction between playright and copyright was recognized although printed publication would forfeit both and one statutory copyright would protect both. So, the author of a play could reserve his common-law playright from the assignment of the play, and the assignee could, by the necessary formalities on the printed play, create a statutory copyright held beneficially by the assignee. Fitch v. Young, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 230 Fed. 743.

1909 Supp., p. 81, sec. 1(e).

"Performance for profit."—The performance of a copyrighted musical composition in the dining-room of a hotel or restaurant, open to guests without charge for admission to hear it, infringes the exclusive right of the owner of the copyright to perform the work publicly for profit. Herbert v. Shanley Co., (1917) 242 U. S. 591, 37 S. Ct. 232, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 511, reversing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 229, 136 C. C. A. 639, reversing (1915) 229 Fed. 340, 143 C. C. A. 460.

Construing this phrase in Hubbell v.

Royal Pastime Amusement Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 242 Fed. 1002, the court said: "I am entirely satisfied that a semicolon should precede the words 'and for the purpose of public performance for profit.' This is borne out by a reading of the committee reports and a reading of the statute. [See article Statutes and Statutory Construction, vol. 1, par. 6, p. 50, as to the rules of construction where punctuation is involved.] If the semicolon is not inserted at the place above indicated, subdivision 'e' of section 1 does not seem to make sense. Eliminating the semicolon, the most, however, that the section amounts to is a protection in favor of those persons who do not perform publicly for profit the musical composition—as in the case of street parades, school, educational, or similar public occasions and exhibitions."

Musical composition.—A musical composition would seem, in connection with section 3 providing for the protection of all copyrightable component parts of the work copyrighted, to include both words and music. Standard Music Roll Co. v. Mills, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 360, 154 C. C. A. 240, affirming (D. C. N. J. 1915) 223 Fed. 849.

Failure to file notice as defense.—"In order to compel the owner to make the license public by filing a notice in the office at Washington, the statute provides as a penalty that failure to file shall be a complete defense to any suit, action, or proceeding for any infringement of 'such copyright.' What does 'such copyright' refer to? Manifestly, as we think, some particular right to reproduce the musical work mechanically. Just how the reproduction is to be made, and whether it is to be confined to the music or shall extend to the words also, is in the first instance left for the owner to determine. But after he has determined it, and has granted a license to one person, he thereby opens the field to all others to do the same, or a similar, thing. If he license one person to reproduce both words and music by the phonograph method, other persons may reproduce them both by using the phonograph. If he license one person to reproduce the music by the automatic roll, others also may use the roll, but they do not thereby acquire the right to print the words. In brief, 'such copyright' means the particular right covering mechanical reproduction that happens to be in controversy—in the present case, the right to reproduce, not the words but the music, mechanically." Standard Music Roll Co. v. Mills, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 360, 154 C. C. A. 240, affirming (D. C. N. J. 1915) 223 Fed. 849.

Object of provisos.—The object of the provisos in this section seems to be the prevention of monopoly or favoritism in granting the right to reproduce a musical work mechanically. If the owner authorize one person to reproduce the work mechanically, other persons also may reproduce it in a similar mechanical manner, subject to the payment of the statutory royalty. Standard Music Roll Co. v. Mills, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 360, 154 C. C. A. 240, affirming (D. C. N. J. 1915) 223 Fed. 849.

What may be copyrighted.—See the notes to 1914 Supp., p. 48, § 5, infra, p. 1183.

1909 Supp., p. 83, sec. 8.

Question of ownership of copyright.—The legal title to a copyright vests in the person in whose name the copyright is taken out. It may, however, be held by him in trust for the true owner, and the question of true ownership is one of fact, dependent upon the circumstances of the case. Harms v. Stern, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 42, 145 C. C. A. 2.

1909 Supp., p. 86, sec. 18.

Notice—Legality of name.—The proprietor of a copyright may use either his real name or an assumed name on his notice of copyright but the name must be legal where he uses it. So where a state statute (N. Y.) prohibits the use of a fictitious partnership name, and the copyright proprietor, instead of his own name, used that of a company of which he was not a member and which in fact did not exist, it was held that a suit for infringement would not lie under the notice of copyright in that form. Haas v. Feist, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 105.

1909 Supp., p. 86, sec. 20.

Effect of defective notice.—Where in a notice of copyright, the letter C enclosed in a circle as required by section 18, and affixed to a published illustration, was so defective as not to convey to any one the existence of a copyright, it was held, although there had been a technical and incidental infringement, that by reason of the improper and defective notice, no damages would be awarded against the infringers, but they would be enjoined only from the future use of the copyrighted illustration. Alfred Decker Cohn Co. v. Etchison Hat Co., (E. D. Va. 1915) 225 Fed. 135.

Application of section.—For a case held to be within the application of this section, see Stecher Lithographic Co. v. Dunston Lithograph Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 601, holding a certain number of copyrighted chromos infringed although they were published without the copyright mark.

1909 Supp., p. 87, sec. 25.

What constitutes infringement.—See the notes to section 36, infra, this page.

1909 Supp., p. 91, sec. 36.

What constitutes infringement—Similarities in dramatic compositions.—Resemblances between two dramatic compositions in fundamental plot and minor and unimportant instances, does not involve infringement where the fundamental dramatic feature common to both, had long been common property. While copyright will of course protect the author who adds elements of literary value to an old plot, it will not prohibit the use by some one else of the same old plot without the particular embellishment. Eichel v. Marcin, (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 241 Fed. 404.

Mere similarities in plot and lines, developed from a common source and accounted for by reference to the common source, does not constitute infringement. Bachman v. Belasco, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 817, 140 C. C. A. 263, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 224 Fed. 815.

Dramatization of novel.—An exclusive right to dramatize a novel "for presentation on the stage" was held to mean an exclusive right to dramatize a spoken play and did not comprehend the independent right to dramatize the novel for a moving picture play. Klein v. Beach, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 240, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 108, 151 C. C. A. 282.

The exhibition of a series of photographs of persons and things arranged on films as moving pictures, and so depicting the principal scenes of an author's work as to tell the story, is a dramatization of such work as held by the Supreme Court in Kalem Co. v. Harper, (1911) 222 U. S. 55, 32 S. Ct. 20, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 92, Ann. Cas. 1913A 1285. And an agreement granting the exclusive right of dramatizing an author's work would include the right to make a "movie play" as well as a spoken play. But if a grant made by an agreement is limited as "for presentation on the stage," or is limited to one version only and that in a particular manner or prohibits any change in the manner of performance or text, the right of dramatization for a moving picture play would not be comprehended. Harper v. Klaw, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 609, where it held that an agreement authorizing the defendant to dramatize the novel "Ben Hur" and giving the "exclusive right of producing such dramatic version on the stage" did not confer on the defendant moving picture rights in the play and that its production in that mode and method would be an infringement of the plaintiff's copyright. The language of the agreement was held to be incapable of application to any method of producing photo plays in commercial use and to be not only inconsistent with but repugnant to the thought of making "movies" out of "Ben Hur."

Second-hand books.—One may sell a second-hand copyrighted book for what it is. He may rebind or otherwise improve its condition or appearance for the purposes of a resale. But if he supplies missing parts by copying the maps and of reprinting portions of the original text and incorporates these reproduced parts with the old books, and sells them as the publications of the original publishers, it constitutes an infringement of copyright. Ginn v. Apollo Pub. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1914) 215 Fed. 772.

A photograph of a street scene, held to be a proper subject of copyright, is infringed by a lantern slide reproduction. Pagano v. Chas. Besseler Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 963.

Infringement of musical composition.—Where two compositions were considerably different both in theme and execution, except as to the particular phrase "I hear you calling me" and the music accompanying those words was practically identical in both compositions, it was held that the use of this similar phraseology and the similar bars of music was sufficient to warrant the charge of piracy and infringement of copyright. Boosey v. Empire Music Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 646.

Bill or complaint—Misjoinder of parties plaintiff.—The misjoinder of a party plaintiff having no interest, and to whom no relief can be granted, renders the complaint multifarious and devoid of equity, and the complaint must be dismissed. Tully v. Triangle Film Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 297.

Exhibits.—In accordance with rule 2 of the Supreme Court adopted pursuant to section 25 (1909 Supp., p. 96) a copy of the work alleged to be infringed must accompany the complaint or its absence be explained. "It sometimes happens that redress by injunction in cases of this kind must be speedily obtained in order to prevent irreparable injury, and that the plaintiff may not have at hand a copy of the manuscript, whereas he can describe, for all practical purposes, the substance of the subject-matter of his copyrighted work; but the rule must be followed, and, if the work cannot be produced, satisfactory reasons for its absence must be presented." Tully v. Triangle Film Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 297.

Preliminary injunction.—Where the author of a story conferred the whole copyright privilege upon its publisher to hold the same for its own benefit as to serial publication and as trustee for him, the author, as to all other rights, and the publisher thereafter released motion picture rights in the story, it was held that a preliminary injunction against the producers of the pictures was properly denied the author where there was no actual notice or sufficient evidence of constructive notice to them. "When one clothes another with apparent ownership, though actually as trustee, he cannot defeat the title of those who in good faith, for a valuable consideration and without notice deal with the trustee." Brady v. Reliance Motion Picture Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 137, 143 C. C. A. 413. See also Brady v. Reliance Motion Picture Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 259.

Where a novel and an alleged infringing photoplay had some marked similarities, but neither was wholly original, and the principal theme and many incidents were derived from common sources and the question of infringement was therefore by no means clear, a preliminary injunction was denied. Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Equitable Motion Pictures Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 791.

Suspension of temporary injunction.—Where the sale of defendant's composition cannot interfere with the sale of plaintiff's composition by virtue of the inherent difference, generally speaking, of the tastes to which they appeal, and the case is therefore not one where the plaintiff's commercial exploitation of their composition is interfered with, but one which involves solely the rights under the statute, a temporary injunction will be suspended on the filing of a bond and periodical statements of sales, pending final hearing on appeal. Boosey v. Empire Music Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 646.

Computation of profits recoverable.—In copyright cases under this section the plaintiff may show only the receipts, or debit side of the account, and put upon the defendant the burden of proving the cost of production, or the plaintiff may exact the penalty. Ginn v. Apollo Pub. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 228 Fed. 214.

1909 Supp., p. 91, sec. 40.

Counsel fees.—The allowance of counsel fees is a matter peculiarly within the discretion of the court awarding the same. S. C. Hendricks Co. v. Thomas Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 37, 154 C. C. A. 629, wherein the court declined to disturb an award of counsel fees fixed by the trial judge.

1914 Supp., p. 48, sec. 5.

What may be copyrighted—An English translation of an original French play, with such modifications as the translator's ingenuity might suggest, is copyrightable. But such translator has no right to transfer into his adaptation, variations from and additions to the French play which were original with a prior translator who copyrighted his translation. Stevenson v. Fox, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 990.

A manual of instruction, illustrating, by designs and explanatory matter, the uses of a complicated mechanical toy, is copyrightable. Meccano v. Wagner, (S. D. Ohio 1916) 234 Fed. 912.

A photograph of a street scene is copyrightable when the result evidences originality in bringing out the proper setting for both animate and inanimate objects, with the adjunctive features of light, shade, position, etc. Pagano v. Chas. Beseler Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 963.

Photo-play presentation.—The copyright of a dramatization covers a photograph presentation of the same subject. U. S. v. Motion Picture Patents Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 800.

Chromos are copyrightable and it makes no difference that they are intended for advertising articles of commerce. Stecher Lithographic Co. v. Dunston Lithograph Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 601.

What cannot be copyrighted.—Title or name.—"It is well settled that the owner of the thing copyrighted acquires through the copyright no property in the name by which it is designated." Wilson v. Hecht, (1915) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 33.

A plan of medical instruction illustrating practice in general use and embodying previous medical knowledge which was common property to any writer, is not copyrightable. Chautauqua School of Nursing v. National School of Nursing, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 151, 151 C. C. A. 227, reversing (W. D. N. Y. 1914) 211 Fed. 1014.

A statue or structure built for public free exhibition cannot be copyrighted. Carns v. Keefe, (D. C. Mont. 1917) 242 Fed. 745.

1914 Supp., p. 49, sec. 25.

What constitutes infringement.—See the notes to 1909 Supp. p. 91, § 36, supra, p. 1182.

1914 Supp., p. 49, sec. 25(b).

Purpose of section.—The language of this section is a growth of years, resulting from the efforts of Congress to avoid that strictness of construction which historically attaches to any statute inflicting penalties and to confer upon an injured copyright owner some pecuniary solace even when the rules of law render it difficult, if not impossible, as it often is, to prove damages or discover profits. S. E. Hendricks Co. v. Thomas Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 37, 154 C. C. A. 629.

Consolidation of suits.—Where one copyrights separately ten cuts, and finds each one of the ten infringed on separate days by the same newspaper, and then brings ten separate damage suits, on application to compel consolidation, the court would look into the facts and ascertain whether there were really ten controversies involving ten questions or whether there was just the one dispute involving one question, and probably would consolidate or not, according as it decided this question. If these suits were consolidated upon a finding that they were really only one controversy and injury to the plaintiff's business, or if the plaintiff in the first place brought one consolidated suit, minimum damages as for one infringement would satisfy the statute. L. A. Westermann Co. v. Dispatch Printing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 609, 147 C. C. A. 417.

Joint tortfeasors.—All parties who unite in an infringement are, under the statute, liable for the damages sustained by the owner of the copyright. Gross v. Van Dyk Gravure Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 412, 144 C. C. A. 554. See also Haas v. Feist, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 105.

Quantum of damages.—The maximum and minimum limitations unquestionably apply to the "in lieu" damages. Whether they apply to the actual damages which may be proved and established, under the first part of this section, was mooted, but passed over, as not requiring decision in L. A. Westermann Co. v. Dispatch Printing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 609, 147 C. C. A. 417.

In consolidated suits.—On a consolidated suit the statute may be satisfied by awarding the minimum damages as for one infringement. L. A. Westermann Co. v. Dispatch Printing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 609, 147 C. C. A. 417.

Damages.—"Actual" and "in lieu."—"Actual" damages means "real" as opposed to "nominal." It means "existent" without precluding the thought of change. "In lieu" means in place of the thing modified by the quoted phrase. What a plaintiff is entitled to ask of the court in its discretion is something in place of his real—i. e., legally existent and legally ascertained damages. S. E. Hendricks Co. v. Thomas Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 37, 154 C. C. A. 629.

By the clause "in lieu of" this section contemplates an election or discretionary choice between actual damages and profits on the one side, and, on the other side, an assumed or somewhat arbitrary award of such damages as may be just. L. A. Westermann Co. v. Dispatch Printing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 609, 147 C. C. A. 417.

Infringement under minimum damage clause.—"The 'infringement' which calls for minimum damages is that conduct of the defendant, whether being one act or many, which constitutes a connected and fairly unitary invasion of the proprietor's rights." L. A. Westermann Co. v. Dispatch Printing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 609, 147 C. C. A. 417.

Nominal damages.—Nominal damages may be awarded for proven infringement where little or no actual injury appears. S. E. Hendricks Co. v. Thomas Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 37, 154 C. C. A. 629.

Computation of profits recoverable.— See note under 1909 Supp., p. 91, § 38, supra, p. 1182.

COSTS

Vol. II, p. 278, sec. 824.

"For each deposition," etc.—Examination before commissioner.—There is not a uniformity of opinion in the courts as to whether an examination before a commissioner shall be treated as a deposition under this section. See the original annotations. In The Mary, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 233 Fed. 121, on a motion to disallow proctor's fees on taking testimony before a court commissioner of 10 witnesses, the tax of $2.50 was allowed as to all the witnesses except one, as to whom it was disallowed on the ground that his testimony was immaterial.

Disbursements for transcribing deposition.—The allowance of disbursements for transcribing a deposition pertains directly to testimony intended to be used in the case, and when the deposition has been taken in good faith and under apparent necessity therefor, the fee for transcribing it so that it can be used may be allowed in the discretion of the court, even though the witness himself is produced and for this reason the deposition is not used. Alaska Steamship Co. v. Gilbert, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 715, 150 C. C. A. 47.

"Admitted in evidence in a cause."—In respect to depositions in the admiralty court, no proctor's fee is recoverable in a cause unless the deposition is admitted in evidence. Alaska Steamship Co. v. Gilbert, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 715, 150 C. C. A. 47.

Docket fee—Entry of decree by consent.—A docket fee cannot be allowed in a suit in admiralty where the decree was entered as a matter of course upon consent of the parties and not by reason of the submission of any question of law or fact to the court. The Dwinsk, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 958.

Vol. II, p. 289, sec. 974.

"Costs"—Preliminary examination.—In U. S. v. Smith, (M. D. Tenn. 1917) 240 Fed. 756, the court said: "Under this section the word 'costs' as used in reference to prosecutions for fines or forfeitures, means the 'taxable costs of the trial before the court and petit jury in which defendants have been convicted.' United States v. Wilson, (C. C.) 193 Fed. 1007. That is, in effect, in such cases the word 'costs' means merely the taxable costs of the court cause. The preliminary proceedings before the Commissioner are, it is settled, not a part of the cause in the court itself. There is no 'cause' in the court until an indictment or information is filed; the filing therein of the Commissioner's transcript not being the institution of a suit, but having as its object the giving of information to the District Attorney that the defendant has been held to bail or committed to await the action of the grand jury." See to the same effect U. S. v. Briebach, (E. D. Ark. 1917) 245 Fed. 204.

Conviction for criminal contempt.—On a conviction for criminal contempt it is within the power of the trial judge to require payment of costs, not as a fine but as an incident of the judgment of conviction. Oates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 201, 147 C. C. A. 207.

Cited without specific application in American Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 680, 152 C. C. A. 514, wherein costs were included as part of a judgment of conviction for rebating.

Vol. II, p. 291, sec. 982.

Dismissal on eve of trial.—Waiting until the moment of trial to dismiss a proceeding furnishes ample ground for the court to tax as costs every item which the law permits. In fact the circumstances may justify a court of equity in going as far as possible in compelling reimbursement for expenditures defendant made in good faith, in preparation for the trial of the case. Bone v. Walsh Constr. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1916) 235 Fed. 901.

But, upon dismissal, the court cannot tax any costs which could not be taxed if the case had gone to trial and there had been a decree for the defendant. There is no authority for permitting a penalty to be assessed because of the dismissal of the case on the eve of the trial. Bone v. Walsh Constr. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1916) 235 Fed. 901.

Expense for expert witnesses.—In Bone v. Walsh Constr. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1916) 235 Fed. 901, on motion to tax costs, the defendant's disbursements for expert witnesses in the preparation of a case and in attendance for the trial were denied. The statutory witness fees were allowed.

Vol. II, p. 291, sec. 983.

Cases where costs are recoverable.—This section, when it refers to "trials in cases where by law costs are recoverable," means that costs are recoverable in all cases where by any provision of statute any costs are recoverable. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Film Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 263.

Exemplification and copies.—For exemplifications and copies of papers necessarily obtained for use on a trial, "necessarily" must be limited to mean those exemplification and copies of papers which are essential to the cause. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Film Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 263.

For an extended memorandum of items of copies of papers, in a suit for infringement of patent, considered and held to be taxable, see Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Film Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 263. See also Bone v. Walsh Constr. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1916) 235 Fed. 901.

Stenographer's minutes.—A copy of the stenographer's minutes of a trial furnished to one of the parties is not a copy of a paper necessarily obtained for use on the trial within the meaning of this section. Stallo v. Wagner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 636, 158 C. C. A. 64.

A docket fee is unquestionably costs. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Film Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 263.

1912 Supp., p. 45. [Act of June 25, 1910.]

Liability of government for costs.—Congress did not intend that the United States should be liable for any of the costs incurred under the provisions of this Act. U. S. v. Fair, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 235 Fed. 1015, wherein it was held that the court was without power to order the transcription of the testimony at the expense of the government or at the expense of the reporter, where he was not an officer of the court.

CRIMES AND OFFENSES

Vol. II, p. 321, sec. 1014.

Nature of proceedings.—Proceedings before a commissioner, or other magistrate authorized to conduct examinations under R. S. sec. 1014, are merely preliminary for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is reasonable cause to believe that the person brought before the examining officer has violated a statute of the United States, and, if he so finds, it is his duty to hold or admit him to bail, to await the action of the grand jury. In no sense can it be said that this is a trial, for no judgment or sentence can be pronounced or imposed by the commissioner, or any judge, sitting as an examining magistrate, even if it is the district judge, who holds the examination. U. S. v. Briebach, (E. D. Ark. 1917) 245 Fed. 204.

Following state practice.—Mode of process.—It has been assumed that the phrase "agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders in such state" found in this section, regulates and controls the steps to be taken upon bailing one who has been indicted by a grand jury of the United States as well as those preliminary examinations to which parts of the section are particularly appropriate. Ewing v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 241, 153 C. C. A. 167.

Liability upon forfeiture of bail bond.—Where a state statute enumerates the causes which will exonerate a defendant and his sureties from liability upon a forfeiture taken, the state procedure will govern the federal courts in a proceeding by the government for forfeiture of a bail bond. De Orozco v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 1008, 151 C. C. A. 70.

Removal of accused to trial district.—Offense against the United States.—An offense under the Alaska Criminal Code is not an offense against the laws of the United States and an offender thereunder, present in a federal district, cannot be removed to the district court of Alaska under the provisions of this section. Ex parte Krause, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 547.

Vol. II, p. 335, sec. 1028.

A certified copy of order of sentence and record of conviction is sufficient to authorize the retention of the prisoner without any warrant or mittimus. Ex parte Thurston, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 233 Fed. 847.

Vol. II, p. 337, sec. 1024.

Election of counts.—Where the different counts of an indictment, charge different offenses, but all violations of the same statute, and all relate virtually to the same transaction, so that the evidence offered to sustain one is also admissible under the others, the court may properly refuse to require the government, at the close of its case, to elect upon which of the counts conviction would be sought. Wallace v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 300, 156 C. C. A. 80.

Offenses held to have been properly joined.—In one count of the indictment the defendant was charged with embezzling money, and in the other with embezzling property, both belonging to the United States. It was held that these two offenses, being of the same class of crimes, were properly joined in one indictment. McNeil v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 827, 159 C. C. A. 129.

Consolidation.—For a case giving a statement of matters embraced in two indictments, one charging acts in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman Act and the other charging a conspiracy to begin and set on foot certain military enterprises to be carried on from within the United States against a foreign power, which sufficiently showed that the charges contained in them were charges for acts and transactions connected together and which might be properly joined, within the meaning of this section, see U. S. v. Bopp, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 237 Fed. 283.

Vol. II, p. 340, sec. 1025.

Effect of section.—This section, in effect, directs that the existence of irregularity, if error of form, shall not be presumed a wrong to the accused; but it must be shown to be so. Moffatt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 522, 146 C. C. A. 480.

Selection of grand jury.—The designation made by the statute of the officials charged with the duty of selecting the names to be drawn from to make up grand and petit juries is a means adopted to prevent the pollution of the stream of justice at its source. The provision was intended to guard the administration of the criminal law against improper influences. The court is not vested with a discretionary power to dispense with a compliance with an essential feature of a safeguard prescribed by law. An impeachment of an indictment because of a noncompliance with the requirement that the names put in the jury box be selected by specified officials is not a suggestion of a defect or imperfection in matter of form only under this section, but goes to the vital question of the legality of the existence of the body by which the charge was made, and of its right or power to make a charge which the party charged can be required to defend against. Dunn v. U. S. (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 508, 151 C. C. A. 444.

Indictment—Sufficiency in general.—In its last analysis the question of the sufficiency of an indictment under this section is: Does the indictment contain a sufficient accusation of crime, and do its averments furnish the accused with such a description of the charge, as will enable him to make his defense and avail himself of his conviction or acquittal for protection against future proceedings for the same offense. And is the indictment sufficient to inform the court of the facts alleged, so that it may decide whether they are sufficient in law to sustain a conviction if one should be had. Knauer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 8, 150 C. C. A. 210.

Particularity.—In Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 535, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 912, the indictment, charging a violation of section 32 of the Penal Code (1909 Supp., p. 414) alleged that at a stated time the accused "unlawfully, knowingly and feloniously did falsely assume and pretend to be an officer of the Government of the United States, to-wit, a member of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America, that is to say, A. Mitchell Palmer, a member of Congress representing the Twenty-sixth District of the State of Pennsylvania, with the intent, then and there, to defraud Lewis Cass Ledyard," and other persons who were named and others to the grand jury unknown, "and the said defendant, then and there, with the intent and purpose aforesaid, did take upon himself to act as such member of Congress; against the peace," etc., etc. It was urged that the indictment was defective because of its failure to describe the circumstances of the offense. But it was held that the case was clearly covered by this section.

Allegation of incorporation.—In view of this section it was unnecessary to charge in an indictment, that a railway company, whose car was broken into for the purpose of committing larceny, was an incorporated company, as such omission could have no tendency to prejudice the defendant. Morris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 516, 143 C. C. A. 584.

So, an indictment for use of the mails to defraud a bank, which fails to charge that the bank was incorporated, will not be quashed since the omission can in no wise prejudice the defendant. McClendon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 523, 143 C. C. A. 591. And see further to the same effect, Kasle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 878, 147 C. C. A. 552.

Indictment held sufficient.—An indictment charging a violation of the Anti-Drug Act, in that the defendant, on a specified date, gave an order for opium, which "was thereafter accepted" and "after acceptance" he failed to preserve a duplicate thereof "in such a way as to be readily accessible" contrary to law, was held saved under this section from the objection that the offense was not alleged of a day certain, since the indictment referred to things past and an offense completed and at least of date between acceptance of the order and indictment, an allegation of some unnamed date within the essential period could not tend to the prejudice of the defendant. U. S. v. Gaag, (D. C. Mont. 1916) 237 Fed. 728.

Rule applicable to information.—The rule applicable to an information is no less liberal than that applicable to an indictment under this section. Its averments of facts constituting the offense need be only so certain and specific as fairly to inform defendant of the crime intended to be alleged, and as to make the judgment of conviction or acquittal thereon a complete defense to a second prosecution of the defendant for the same offense. Simpson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 841, 154 C. C. A. 543.

Vol. II, p. 345, sec. 730.

For larceny of fish from a pound in the Atlantic ocean more than three miles off the coast of New Jersey, where the accused were taken into custody while fishing with hook and line from a boat moored to the pound and were immediately brought ashore within the state, the federal District Court of New Jersey was the proper tribunal to try whatever offense had been committed. Miller v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 907, 155 C. C. A. 495.

Vol. II, p. 347, sec. 731.

General statement.—"Undoubtedly where a crime consists of distinct parts which have different localities the whole may be tried where any part can be proved to have been done; or where it may be said there is a continuously moving act commencing with the offender and hence ultimately consummated through him, as the mailing of a letter; or where there is a confederation in purpose between two or more persons, its execution being by acts elsewhere, as in conspiracy. It may be that where there is a general duty it may be considered as insistent both where the 'actor' is and the 'subject' is, . . . as in the case of the duty of a father to support his children; and if the duty have criminal sanction it may be enforced in either place." U. S. v. Lombardo, (1916) 241 U. S. 73, 36 S. Ct. 508, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 897.

Fraudulent issuance of certificate of deposit.—Where a certificate of deposit was signed in blank by the cashier of a bank in the district of Idaho, was filled in by another person in the state of Mississippi and was negotiated in Kentucky it was held that a prosecution of the cashier for issuing or putting forth a certificate of deposit without the proper authority and with intent to injure or defraud the banking association in violation of R. S. sec. 5209 (see the title NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 5, p. 145) fell within the provisions of this section and could be maintained in the federal court for Idaho. Simpson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 940, 144 C. C. A. 222.

Conspiracy.—"The rule is now well settled that prosecutions for conspiracy may be maintained either in the district in which the conspiracy was entered into or in any district in which an act was done to effectuate the object of the conspiracy." Shea v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 97, 149 C. C. A. 307.

White slavery prosecution.—The offense of failing to file a statement with the commissioner of immigration as required by section 6 of the White Slave Traffic Act, 1912 Supp., p 421, is not a continuing one within the meaning of this provision which may be prosecuted in a federal court for the district at which the woman is kept, maintained or harbored. U. S. v. Lombardo, (1916) 241 U. S. 73, 36 S. Ct. 508, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 897.

CUSTOMS DUTIES

Vol. II, p. 585, sec. 2630.

Special deputy collector.—The powers and duties of collectors of customs are equally vested in their special deputies; so the special deputies' right and power to liquidate and reliquidate are without question. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

Vol. II, p. 760, sec. 21.

Construction.—A liquidation by the collector pending appeal to reappraisement is not voidable merely, but void. Such action does not constitute a "settlement of duties" within the purview of this section, providing that a settlement of duties shall be final a year after entry in the absence of fraud and in the absence of protest. Stubbs v. U. S., (1917) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 399.

"Absence of fraud."—The statute makes the liquidation final "in the absence of fraud." This does not necessitate a finding of fraud by the collector to justify reliquidation, but directs him not to reliquidate in "the absence of fraud." If he suspects fraud, he cannot say that fraud is absent. A well founded suspicion of fraud is sufficient to move him to reliquidation. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

The words "in the absence of fraud and in the absence of protest by the owner, importer, agent, or consignee" do not restrict the fraud to the owner, importer, agent, or consignee. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

Reliquidation—Goods beyond collector's control.—The power of the collector to reliquidate when the goods have gone beyond his possession or control has been administratively, legislatively, and judicially recognized from the earliest time. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

Collector's decision.—The law restricts a collector's findings to rate and amount of duty. He can make no conclusive finding as to fraud or anything else than rate and amount of duty. A reliquidation involves nothing except a different finding as to rate and amount of duty. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

Within year from entry.—The collector's power to reliquidate within a year after entry has received uniform administrative, legislative, and judicial recognition prior to, and since, the passage of this Act. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

After year from entry in case of protest.—The collector's power to reliquidate after the expiration of a year from entry in case of protest has received uniform administrative, legislative, and judicial recognition prior to, and since, the passage of this Act. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

Evidence—Burden of proof.—In the trial before the board of general appraisers of a protest against a reliquidation made more than a year after entry, the legal presumption is, as in all cases, that the collector of customs acted within the powers conferred upon him by law, and the burden is on the protestant to show the invalidity of the reliquidation. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

In the trial before the board of general appraisers of a protest against a reliquidation made more than a year after entry, evidence that the goods had been bought and sold by importers at weights greater than the entered ones, is sufficient to establish a prima facie case of fraud and put upon the protestants the burden of overcoming it. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

Due process of law.—The customs administrative procedure, in case of reliquidation for fraud more than one year after entry, gives the importer notice and abundant opportunity to defend. The record shows that such notice and opportunity were had in these cases. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

Liquidation pending appeal.—The collector has no power to liquidate pending appeal to reappraisement. Stubbs v. U. S., (1917) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 399.

Power of special deputy collector.—The right and power of a special deputy to liquidate and reliquidate are without question. Vitelli v. U. S., (1916) 7 U. S. Cust. App. 243.

1914 Supp., p. 130, sec. IV, J, subsec. 7.

Discount—Reciprocity treaties.—The 5 per cent tariff discount given to merchandise imported in American bottoms by this section with its proviso, is inoperative so long as the present reciprocity treaties with foreign countries remain in force. U. S. v. M. H. Pulaski, (1917) 243 U. S. 97, 37 S. Ct. 346, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 617.

ELECTIONS

1912 Supp., p. 69, sec. 1.

Primary laws.—This Act recognizing primary elections and limiting the expenditures of candidates for senators in connection with them is not in effect an adoption by Congress of all state primary laws. U. S. v. Gradwell, (1916) 243 U. S. 476, 37 S. C. 407, 61 U. S. (L. ed.)

857, affirming (D. C. R. I. 1916) 234 Fed. 446; (S. D. W. Va. 1916) 236 Fed. 993.

Primary elections.—The word "election," as used without qualification, refers to a general election and not a primary election. U. S. v. O'Toole, (S. D. W. Va. 1916) 236 Fed. 993, affirmed (1917) 243 U. S. 476, 37 S. Ct. 407, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 857.

EVIDENCE

Vol. III, p. 2, sec. 724.

Production "in the trial" as meaning "on or at the trial."—A court of law is not empowered to compel one party to an action to produce books and papers in advance of trial for his adversary's examination and inspection, by the provisions of this section; as the words "in the trial" "on or at the trial" and the statute may well be regarded as affording a short and quick way of obtaining documentary evidence for use "in the trial" of an action at law, leaving the parties to a bill of discovery if they desire the production before the trial for the purpose of preparing for it. General Film Co. v. Sampliner, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 95, 146 (C. C. A. 287, following Carpenter v. Winn, (1911) 221 U. S. 533, 31 S. Ct. 683, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 842.

Vol. III, p. 8, sec. 863.

Depositions, when taken—Rule 47 of the Federal Equity Rules was not intended to vary or be a limitation upon this section. Iowa Washing Mach. Co. v. Ward, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 1004.

The rule would seem to be that to take depositions under this section within the time provided by equity rule 47, it is not necessary that previous authorization be obtained from the court. But if the depositions are not taken within the time limited by rule 47, they will be suppressed, unless previous permission from the court to take them has been obtained. Audiffren Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. General Electric Co., (D. C. N. J. 1917) 245 Fed. 783.

In Block v. Arrowsmith Mfg. Co., (D. C. N. J. 1917) 243 Fed. 775, the question before the court was whether or not plaintiff, long after the time had elapsed for taking and filing depositions under rule 47, and after the case had been placed on the trial calendar for two terms, may take depositions by notice to defendant, or its counsel, without "some strong reason shown by affidavit" therefor, and without application to court for an order to do so. The court said: "Depositions under such circumstances may not be taken. Before depositions under such circumstances may be taken, the litigant must, upon application to court, show by affidavits some strong reason why the testimony of the witnesses cannot be had orally on the trial, and why their depositions have not been taken before. This the plaintiffs have not done, and so far as the court is informed there is no reason why the depositions were not taken within the time required by the equity rules."

Use of deposition of deponent available at trial.—This section is so limited by R. S. sec. 865 that if the deponent is available at the trial his deposition cannot be read. Vagaszi v. Consolidation Coal Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 913, 141 C. C. A. 37.

Notice.—Where appellants had due notice of the taking of a deposition under this section, but did not appear, and there was no examination of witnesses, they cannot complain that they had no opportunity for objection, or that they were not notified of the filing of the depositions, it not appearing that by the local law where the deposition was used, that they were entitled to such notice of filing. The D. J. Sawyer, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 913, 150 C. C. A. 175.

Motion to vacate.—If the depositions are not taken in conformity with the law, the court has power, on motion, to vacate the notices in advance of the taking of the testimony. Audiffren Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. General Electric Co., (D. C. N. J. 1917) 245 Fed. 783. Compare Kline v. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 969, wherein the court declined to vacate the notice of the taking of depositions, considering that the plaintiff (who moved to vacate) would be proected by a motion to suppress the depositions after they had been taken.

Witness outside territorial limits of district—Equity, rule 46.—Equity rule 46 (198 Fed. xxxi, 115 C. C. A. xxxi), providing that testimony shall be taken by oral examination in open court, does not deprive the court of power to take depositions, in a proper case, under the provisions of this section. Jennings v. Smith, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 244 Fed. 836.

Re-examination of witness.—The same witness may be examined de bene esse, under this section, more than once in saits in equity as well as in actions at law. Of course, the court may restrain the taking of depositions of witnesses who have been previously examined when the purpose of examining them again is to harass or oppress. Audiffren Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. General Electric Co., (D. C. N. J. 1917) 245 Fed. 783.

Vol. III, p. 22. [Act of March 9, 1892.]

Following state practice.—Where it appears that a considerable saving will be effected thereby a motion to take depositions under the state practice will be granted, since if the complainant is not fully practiced, depositions could afterward be taken under R. S. sec. 863. Cook v. Flag, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 713.

By virtue of this section certificates from the comptroller's office authenticated by his seal are admissible in evidence. Weitzel v. Brown, (1916) 224 Mass. 190, 112 N. E. 945.

Vol. III, p. 37, sec. 905.

Full faith and credit—Generally.—Except for the question of jurisdiction, the judgment of a court of another state is put upon the same footing as a domestic judgment, and no inquiry can be made as to the accuracy of the record as the conduct of the trial. Lucas v. Vulcan Iron Works, (M. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 823.

A judgment entered upon a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, contained in the instrument evidencing the obligation, without personal service on the obligor, is a judgment entitled to full faith and credit. Miller v. Miller, (1916) 90 Wash. 333, 156 Pac. 8.

"Records and judicial proceedings"—Foreign judgments.—This section applies only to the authentication of records of judicial proceedings had in the states and territories. It has no application to foreign judgments. American Surety Co. v. Sandberg, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 225

Fed. 150, wherein the court said: "It is conceded that there is no statute providing for the authentication of judicial proceedings in foreign countries. No treaty touching the question has been called to the court's attention. Justice Gray in Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 228, 16 S. Ct. 139, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 95, intimates that there is neither statute law nor treaty on the subject of foreign judgments."

Foreign judgment—Authentication.—Shufeldt v. Mound City Bank, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 923, the certified copy of a foreign judgment was made up of the petition, summons, with the return of the sheriff thereon, answer of the defendant and the judgment of the court. It did not show that the judgment was signed and filed in the court where the judgment was rendered. The certificate of the clerk showing that the judgment was of record in his office, was held to be a sufficient authentication.

Certificate of judge.—A copy of a judgment of a state court, certified by the clerk alone without the certificate from the judge of the court to the effect that the attestation by the clerk is in due form, is not admissible in evidence. Arndt v. Burghardt, (1917) 165 Wis. 312, 162 N. W. 317.

Authentication—Exclusiveness of statutory method.—A state may adopt any other method of authenticating records admitted in their own courts. It may prescribe a less requirement but it cannot require more. Block v. Schafer, (Okla. 1917) 162 Pac. 456.

1914 Supp., p. 141. [Act Feb. 26, 1913.]

Admissibility of writing for comparison.—Handwriting, admitted to be used as a basis of comparison under the Act of Congress, is not required to be proven genuine in any other way than is any other document offered in evidence. Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 568, 158 C. C. A. 538.

The principle of admitting a memorandum book, diary or other writing for the purposes of comparison should apply only to the class of documents or books which are customarily and of common knowledge kept personally by the owner. Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 568, 158 C. C. A. 538.

It is proper under this Act in order to prove a signature, to admit for comparison, documents which witnesses testify they have seen signed by the one whose signature is questioned. Bowers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 641, 157 C. C. A. 89.

EXECUTION

Vol. III, p. 46, sec. 989.

Application of section.—This section is in aid of the collector only who received and turned over the tax to the Treasury Department. It has no application to the succeeding collector. Roberts v. Lowe, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 236 Fed. 604; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 184.

Vol. III, p. 54, sec. 1.

Statute directory.—Following Godchaux v. Morris, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 482, 57 C. C. A. 434, cited in the original annotation, it was held in Lans- burgh v. McCormick, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 874, 140 C. C. A. 296, wherein a sale was attacked as a nullity because under the order of the court the sale was made in the city of Charleston and not as required by the statute on the premises or at the courthouse door of the county in which the land was situated, that the court having jurisdiction to order the sale, the mistake of directing that it be made at a place different from that required by statute did not make the sale void for want of jurisdiction but was an error to be corrected by appeal or by direct application to the trial court.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

Vol. III, p. 58, sec. 161.

Regulations of Postmaster-General—Mail matter as property—Designating depository.—Mail matter, while continuing as such, is "property" appertaining to the Post-Office Department and the postmaster is authorized to prescribe requirements, not inconsistent with law, for its custody and preservation. He may determine what shall be regarded as a depository for mail, and the depository so designated becomes an authorized depository as a receptacle for the receipt or delivery of mail matter. Pakas v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 350, 153 C. C. A. 276.

Vol. III, p. 61, sec. 177.

Assistant head of departments—Assistant Attorney-General.—This section is cited generally in May v. U. S., (C. C. A.

8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 495, 149 C. C. A. 547, on the question of the power of an assistant Attorney-General to take part in a grand jury investigation.

Vol. III, p. 62, sec. 178.

A deputy comptroller of the currency may exercise the power and discharge the duties attached to the office of comptroller during a vacancy in that office or in the absence or inability of the comptroller. If necessary the court will also take judicial notice that a certain person was deputy comptroller and will assume that at the date of his certificate he was authorized to exercise the powers and discharge the duties of the comptroller and was therefore at the time acting comptroller. Weitzel v. Brown, (1916) 224 Mass. 190, 112 N. E. 945.

EXTRADITION

Vol. III, p. 68, sec. 5270.

Treaty as affecting right to extradition.—Where a complaint charges an offense covered by treaty and another offense not included in the treaty, the court will assume that the foreign jurisdiction will respect its convention and not try the person charged with the crime upon other charges than those upon which extradition is allowed. Kelly v. Griffin, (1916)

241 U. S. 6, 36 S. Ct. 487, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 861.

Offense not included in treaty.—Must be a crime in both countries.—The general principle of international law is that in all cases of extradition the act done on account of which extradition is demanded must be considered a crime by both parties. Wright v. Henkel, (1903) 190 U. S. 40, 23 S. Ct. 781, 47 U. S.

(L. ed.) 948. And it is enough if the particular variety of crime is criminal in both jurisdictions. So where the charge was perjury, the treaty would not be made a dead letter because some possible false statements might fall within the Canadian law, that would not be perjury by the law of Illinois. Kelly v. Griffin, (1916) 241 U. S. 6, 36 S. Ct. 487, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 861.

Political offenses.—It is seldom that persons are surrendered for mere political offenses. Matter of Sheazle, (1845) 1 Woodb. & M. 66, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,734. The question as to whether the accused is wanted (in the legal sense of that term) upon a criminal charge and that it is not sought to secure him from a country upon which he is depending as an asylum because of political matters and that the treaty is not actually used as a subterfuge, is to be determined by the government of the United States through the Secretary of State. In re Lincoln, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 228 Fed. 70.

Review of decision on habeas corpus.—The rule is well established that if the committing magistrate has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the accused, and the offense charged is within the treaty, and the magistrate has before him legal evidence on which to exercise his judgment as to the sufficiency of the facts to establish the criminality of the accused for the purpose of extradition, his decision cannot be reviewed on habeas corpus. McNamara v. Henkel, (1913) 226 U. S. 520, 33 S. Ct. 146, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 330; Bingham v. Bradley, (1916) 241 U. S. 511, 36 S. Ct. 634, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136.

Trial for different offense.—Where a complaint charges an offense covered by treaty and a second offense not included in the treaty, the court will assume that the foreign jurisdiction will respect its convention and not try upon other charges than those upon which the extradition is allowed. Kelly v. Griffin, (1916) 241 U. S. 6, 36 S. Ct. 487, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 861.

Vol. III, p. 76, sec. 5271.

Object of section.—It is one of the objects of this section to obviate the necessity of confronting the accused with witnesses against him, and a construction of the section that would require a demanding government to send its citizens to another country where the fugitive is found, to institute legal proceedings, would defeat the whole object of an extradition treaty. Bingham v. Bradley, (1916) 241 U. S. 511, 36 S. Ct. 634, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136.

Vol. III, p. 78, sec. 5278.

Any state or territory.—Territories are in the same position as states in regard to interstate extradition, and the executive of a territory has the same rights and is subject to the same duties as is the executive of a state. Ex parte Krause, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 547.

Alaska.—The executive authority of Alaska under this section has the same rights and bears the same duties as the governor of a state, the extradition laws being open to all the states and territories. Ex parte Krause, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 547.

Who is "a fugitive from justice."—The law is well settled that, if the alleged fugitive was in the demanding state at the time when the offense was committed, he is, whenever he is thereafter found in another state, presumed to be a fugitive from justice, no matter for what purpose or reason nor under what circumstances he left the state. Ex parte Montgomery, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 967.

Surrender of fugitive after requisition, to a third state.—Where the accused is brought into a state as a fugitive from justice he may be surrendered to the authorities of a third state as a fugitive without opportunity to return to the state in which he is domiciled. Ex parte Innes, (Tex. Crim. 1915) 173 S. W. 291, affirmed (1916) 240 U. S. 127, 36 S. Ct. 290, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 562. And see to the same effect, Kelly v. Mangum, (1916) 145 Ga. 57, 88 S. E. 556.

And in Kelly v. Mangum, (1916) 145 Ga. 57, 88 S. E. 556, following Innes v. Tobin, (1916) 240 U. S. 127, 36 S. Ct. 290, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 562, it was held that where a fugitive from justice from the state of Missouri was convicted for crime in a United States District Court of Alabama, and was committed to the United States penitentiary in Georgia to serve his sentence, upon his release therefrom at the expiration of such term, upon requisition from the governor of Missouri, the governor of Georgia could issue his warrant and have such person arrested for rendition to the demanding state.

Fugitive serving sentence in asylum state.—After the expiration of the term of sentence in the asylum state the governor of such state may issue his warrant and have such person arrested for rendition to the demanding state. Kelly v. Mangum, (1916) 145 Ga. 57, 88 S. E. 556.

Interstate rendition.—Where a person charged with crime is brought into a state, under requisition, as a fugitive from justice, he may be surrendered to the authorities of another state as a fugitive, without opportunity to return to the state in which he is domiciled. Ex parte Innes, (Tex. Crim. 1915) 173 S. W. 291, affirmed under the title Innes v. Tobin, (1916) 240 U. S. 127, 36 S. Ct. 290, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 562.

"Charging" with crime—Question of law.—The question as to whether the person demanded and detained on an extradition warrant is substantially charged with a crime is a question of law, which on the face of the papers is open to inquiry on writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Wildman, (Okla. Crim. 1917) 168 Pac. 246.

Effect of warrant as prima facie evidence of legal prerequisites.—The extradition warrant is prima facie proof, but not conclusive proof, that the requirements of the statute were complied with before the issuance of the warrant. Ex parte Wildman, (Okla. Crim. 1917) 168 Pac. 246.

Proceedings in demanding state—Questions raised on habeas corpus.—On habeas corpus testimony will not be weighed as to the presence in, or absence from, the demanding state of an alleged fugitive from justice, at the time of the stated commission of a crime therein by him; and on habeas corpus it is not competent to try the question of alibi, or the guilt or innocence of the accused. In re Thompson, (1915) 85 N. J. Eq. 221, 96 Atl. 102.

The question of an alleged bar by the statute of limitations of the demanding state will not be determined on habeas corpus, but will be left to the decision of the courts of such state. Reed v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 378, 140 C. C. A. 64.

Technical sufficiency of indictment.—The questions of the technical sufficiency of the indictment and of the procedure under it are not open to inquiry on habeas corpus to review the issuance of a warrant of arrest in interstate extradition proceedings. Munsey v. Clough, (1904) 196 U. S. 364, 25 S. Ct. 282, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 515; Reed v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 378, 140 C. C. A. 64; People v. Police Com'rs, (1905) 100 App. Div. 483, 91 N. Y. S. 760; Coleman v. State, (1908) 53 Tex. Crim. 93, 113 S. W. 17.

Bail on habeas corpus.—In New Jersey there is no statute authorizing a person charged with crime in another state, and arrested on the governor's warrant of extradition, to be admitted to bail. In re Thompson, (1915) 85 N. J. Eq. 221, 96 Atl. 102.

Vol. III, p. 90, sec. 5.

"Similar purposes"—Under treaty.—Where extradition is demanded by a foreign country, under international treaty, the words "similar purposes," when limited to an attempt to prove a criminal charge, refer to the crimes so denominated in the treaty and not to an extradition hearing in the country making the demand. In re Lincoln, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 228 Fed. 70.

FALSE PERSONATION

Vol. III, p. 92. [Act of April 18, 1884.]

See notes to PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 414, § 32, infra, this volume.

FINES, PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES

Vol. III, p. 94, sec. 732.

Venue of an action by an informer to recover a penalty given by a federal statute is governed by this section (now Judicial Code, § 43, 1912 Supp., p. 152) and not by Judicial Code, § 51, 1912 Supp., p. 153. Tomkins v. Paterson, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 238 Fed. 879.

Vol. III, p. 101, sec. 5292.

Summary investigation—Conditions precedent.—The imposition of a fine or forfeiture is not a necessary condition precedent to the filing of a petition for summary investigation. In re Beloochistan Rug Weaving Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 283.

Vol. III, p. 104, sec. 5294.

Scope of section.—In Findlay v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 337, 139 C. C. A. 207, the court commented at considerable length on the scope of this section.

FOOD AND DRUGS

Vol. III, p. 120, sec. 3.

Manufacturer of oleomargarine.—The term "manufacturer of oleomargarine" applies not only to one who completes the whole process of manufacture for sale, including the use of artificial coloration, but to one who adds artificial coloration to oleomargarine manufactured by others and sells or disposes of it. U. S. v. Orr, (D. C. R. I. 1916) 233 Fed. 718.

Wholesale dealer.—A person, firm, or corporation may be a wholesale dealer in oleomargarine, although the sales are confined to one individual, firm, or corporation. To constitute a wholesale dealer, it is not necessary that the seller have two or more customers. Mitchell v. Cole, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 824.

Vol. III, p. 122, sec. 6.

Constitutionality.—"The Oleomargarine Law was enacted under the power of Congress (Constitution, art. 7, § 8, par. 2:) 'To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes.'" Brougham v. Blanton Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 503, 156 C. C. A. 201.

Relation to Meat Inspection Law.—As a matter of common and judicial knowledge, oleomargarine is a meat product, and therefore its manufacture comes within the language of and is governed by the Meat Inspection Law of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913, 34 Stat. 676, forbidding the use of a "false or deceptive name," repeated in and superseded by the provision in the Meat Inspection Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907, 1909 Supp., p. 46. Brougham v. Blanton Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 503, 156 C. C. A. 201.

Vol. III, p. 123, sec. 8.

Manufacturer of oleomargarine.—The term "manufacturer" applies not only to one who completes the whole process of manufacture for sale, including the use of artificial coloration, but to one who adds artificial coloration to oleomargarine manufactured by others. And the tax of ten cents per pound is payable by the manufacturer whether he is one who completes the product by adding artificial coloration to oleomargarine made by others or is one who adds it to oleomargarine wholly of his own production. U. S. v. Orr, (D. C. R. I. 1916) 233 Fed. 718.

"Removed."—Where defendant constructed a "cave" under the back room in one of his places of business, there colored oleomargarine without paying the government tax, and then transferred it from the "cave" to the salesroom in the same building, the oleomargarine was "removed" in violation of the statute as fully as though he had shipped it to an adjoining city. Marhoefer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1917, 7th Cir.) 241 Fed. 48, 154 C. C. A. 48.

Vol. III, p. 126, sec. 17.

Who may commit offense.—In Marhoefer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 48, — C. C. A. —, affirming a conviction for violation of this section, the court said: "The contention that the defendant Walsh should have been dismissed, because he was merely an employee, and not a manufacturer, is answered against the appellant in May v. U. S., supra [(C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 199 Fed. 42, 117 C. C. A. 420], and ample reasons for so holding are given."

Criminal prosecution as bar to forfeiture.—Acquittal of a stockholder of a corporation under an indictment for violating this section is not bar to a proceeding against the corporation for forfeiture for the same alleged offense charged against it. U. S. v. Manufacturing Apparatus, etc., (Colo. 1916) 240 Fed. 235.

Indictment.—In an indictment for violation of this section it is not essential, in order to charge the defendants as manufacturers of oleomargarine, that the indictment should indicate whether the defendants manufacture by adding coloring matter to the oleomargarine made by others or add it to oleomargarine made entirely by themselves. U. S. v. Orr, (D. C. R. I. 1916) 233 Fed. 718.

In an indictment charging unlawful conspiracy to defraud the United States of sums to become due for internal revenue taxes on oleomargarine having artificial coloration, by causing it to be unlawfully removed from the place of its manufacture, without there being affixed coupon stamps representing payment of the tax of ten cents per pound and without such tax having been paid or secured by any person, it was held to be not necessary to allege that the defrauding of the United States was to be accomplished by deceit, misrepresentation or concealment. The object of the conspiracy being to defraud the United States by an act prohibited by law, the intent to defraud is supplied by the allegation that the prohibited act was to be done unlawfully and knowingly. Tillinghast v. Richards, (D. C. R. I. 1915) 225 Fed. 226.

Where an indictment charged that defendants were engaged in carrying on the business of manufacturing oleomargarine and did defraud and attempt to defraud the United States of the tax on a quantity of oleomargarine "provided and manufactured and removed from the place of manufacture for consumption and sale by them . . . that is to say, . . . did manufacture, produce and furnish for the use and consumption of others a large quantity" of oleomargarine artificially colored to look like butter, which, "at the time it was so manufactured, produced, removed, and furnished" was subject to a tax, which they did not pay, it was held that, construing all the language together, the so-called specific allegations following the words "that is to say," did not narrow or restrict the general charge, but amplified and in greater particularity described how the defendant violated the requirements of section 8, and was sufficient to support a conviction. Marhoefer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 48, 154 C. C. A. 48.

In Marhoefer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 48, 154 C. C. A. 48, the indictment there quoted in full was held to be sufficiently specific and definite in charging an "attempt to defraud" the United States out of a tax on artificially colored oleomargarine.

Vol. III, p. 128, sec. 4.

"Absorption of abnormal quantities."—"Any departure from methods appropriate to the circumstances of the particular churning, departure from methods calculated to result in a product of appropriate quality, with intent and effect to increase moisture over what it would have been, but for such departure, has caused 'absorption of abnormal quantities of water, milk, or cream,' within the statute, whether the increase be one to retention of moisture throughout, or by elimination and reincorporation." Henningsen Produce Co. v. Whaley, (Mont. 1917) 238 Fed. 650.

A regulation of the commissioner of internal revenue that "butter having 16 per cent or more of moisture contains an abnormal quantity and is classed as adulterated butter," the regulation not applying to a farmer, was unauthorized and void, since it was legislative in character and not simply a rule of procedure and administration. Henningsen Produce Co. v. Whaley, (Mont. 1917) 239 Fed. 650.

Evidence.—For the competency of evidence to establish a claim that an alkali was used for the purpose or with the effect of deodorizing or removing rancidity from certain butter particles, see DeWitt v. Skinner, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 443, 146 C. C. A. 437.

Vol. III, p. 131, sec. 6.

Admissibility of books and returns in evidence.—In U. S. v. Elder, (W. D. Ky. 1916) 232 Fed. 267, the defendants were charged with various violations of the Oleomargarine Law. In support of the charges, and with especial reference to the charge of manufacturing oleomargarine, the United States offered in evidence certain of the monthly returns of a manufacturer and wholesale dealer in oleomargarine. These returns, on blanks furnished by the internal revenue bureau, were made to the collector of internal revenue for the proper district, and to each return was attached an affidavit or verification of its truth, signed and sworn to by an employee of the manufacturer. Whether the employee personally knew the facts thus recited or whether he ascertained them from the books of the manufacturer did not appear. It was held that such papers were not admissible in evidence.

Purpose of Act.—The primary purpose of the statute was to prevent injury to the public health by the sale and transportation in interstate commerce of misbranded and adulterated foods. The legislation, as against misbranding, intended to make it possible that the consumer should know that an article purchased was what it purported to be; that it might be bought for what it really was and not upon misrepresentations as to character and quality. As against adulteration, the statute was intended to protect the public health from possible injury by adding to articles of food consumption poisonous and deleterious substances which might render such articles injurious to the health of consumers. U. S. v. Lexington Mill, etc., Co., (1914) 232 U. S. 399, 34 S. Ct. 337, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 658, L. R. A. 1915B 774, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1913) 202 Fed. 615, 121 C. C. A. 23; U. S. v. Forty Barrels, etc., of Coca Colo., (1916) 241 U. S. 265, 36 S. Ct. 573, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 995, Ann. Cas. 1917C 487.

State statutes.—This Act is directed against the adulteration and misbranding of articles of food transported in interstate commerce, and a state statute directed to the manner of selling a certain product at retail is not repugnant to it. Armour v. North Dakota, (1916) 240 U. S. 510, 36 S. Ct. 440, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, Ann. Cas. 1916D 548, affirming (1913) 27 N. D. 177, 145 N. W. 1033, Ann. Cas. 1916B 1149, L. R. A. 1916E 380.

Application to interstate and foreign commerce.—A manufacturer who sells adulterated goods to a wholesale dealer engaged in interstate commerce is involved in a transaction pertaining to interstate commerce and is subject to the provision of the Food and Drugs Act. Glaser v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 84, 139 C. C. A. 566.

Conspiracy to violate Act.—In Mitchell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 357, 143 C. C. A. 477, a judgment was affirmed convicting the defendants of conspiracy to violate this Act by misbranding coffee.

Information—Generally.—Offenses arising under this Act may be prosecuted upon information supported by the oath of some one having knowledge of the facts showing the existence of probable cause. An information signed merely by a district attorney is insufficient. U. S. v. Wells, (W. D. Tenn. 1913) 225 Fed. 320. See to the same effect, U. S. v. Weeks, (S. D. N. Y. 1912) 225 Fed. 1017.

But an information bearing the signature of the district attorney and attached to which and made a part of it are affidavits sworn to before notaries public, is sufficient to support a judgment. Abbott Bros. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 751, 155 C. C. A. 339.

And where no warrant of arrest is sought, an information signed by the district attorney is sufficient without any verification and without supporting affidavits. In such case it is not necessary for the district attorney who signed the information in his official character, to assert in the body of that document that he informed the court upon his oath as a government official of the facts therein set forth. It will be presumed that he acted on his oath as an officer of the government. Abbott Bros. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 751, 155 C. C. A. 339.

On a prosecution by information against a corporation where no warrant of arrest is applied for or can be issued, an information filed by the United States attorney under the sanction of his official oath, and without verification, will be sufficient, but where the information is not so filed but is upon the oath of several parties named in annexed affidavits, these affidavits cannot be considered by the court to help out the information if taken before a notary public, because such an officer has no authority under the laws of the United States to administer any oaths in connection with criminal proceedings. U. S. v. Schallinger Produce Co., (E. D. Wash. 1915) 230 Fed. 290.

In U. S. v. Hopkins, (S. D. N. Y. 1912) 228 Fed. 173, the court said: "It is the invariable practice in this district to prosecute under the pure food law by criminal information; that is, the government alleges a misdemeanor."

Waiver of defects.—Defects in the verification of an information or in the acknowledgment of its supporting affidavits, are waived if not raised by suitable objection before trial. Abbott Bros. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 751, 155 C. C. A. 339.

Sufficiency of information alleging misbranding as to curative effects.—An information was not insufficient in law because it failed to show that the alleged misrepresentations as to the curative effects of the article were in the "ultimate container," that is to say, in the package as it reached the ultimate consumer. So, where the information alleged that the shipment consisted of "certain packages" and that the packages contained the circular or pamphlet later described therein; that one of the alleged misrepresentations appeared "on the label of the carton aforesaid" and that the other was "included in the circular or pamphlet aforesaid" the information should be interpreted to mean that the misrepresentations were intended to accompany the bottles into the hands of the consumer. Simpson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 841, 154 C. C. A. 543.

Pleas to information.—The pleas to an information must be either in abatement, in bar, or the general issue. A motion to quash is not a pleading and therefore is not included. U. S. v. Hopkins, (S. D. N. Y. 1912) 228 Fed. 173, wherein it was held that a pleading labeled "Plea and Answer" and containing merely a statement of evidence intended to support a plea of not guilty, was not a plea at all.

Question for jury.—It is for the jury to say from the evidence submitted to it whether the defendant's articles were adulterated, and they are to determine the weight to be given expert evidence on the question. Glaser v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 84, 139 C. C. A. 566.

1909 Supp., p. 138, sec. 7.

Construction of sections 7 and 8.—In Weeks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 64, 139 C. C. A. 626, Lacombe, J., said: "The case calls for the construction of sections 7 and 8 of the Pure Food and Drugs Act. Prior sections forbid in general terms of the manufacture and shipment in interstate commerce of any article of food or drugs which is adulterated or misbranded. Those two sections (7 and 8) undertake to define the words 'adulterated' and 'misbranded' as used in the statute. Had they been phrased in general terms, it might not be difficult to construe and apply them to the concrete facts of each case as they are developed on a trial. But the draftsman apparently thought that the more words he used the more plainly would he express the meaning intended. Not unnaturally an opposite result has been accomplished. The sections are most difficult of construction; possibly the phrasing of some of their provisions may operate to defeat the object probably intended. But we cannot rewrite the sections; if amendment be needed to make the act effective, that will be a matter for the consideration of Congress."

"Added" ingredient injurious to health —An ingredient may be an "added" one though it is a constituent of a food product having a distinctive name, as for example, caffeine in coca cola. U. S. v. Forty Barrels, etc., of Coca Cola, (1916) 241 U. S. 265, 36 S. Ct. 573, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 995, Ann. Cas. 1917C 487, reversing (E. D. Tenn. 1911) 191 Fed. 431, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 535, 132 C. C. A. 47.

Whether an added ingredient is poisonous or deleterious is a question for the jury where the evidence is conflicting. U. S. v. Forty Barrels, etc., of Coca Cola, (1916) 241 U. S. 265, 36 S. Ct. 573, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 995, Ann. Cas. 1917C 487, reversing (E. D. Tenn. 1911) 191 Fed. 431, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 535, 132 C. C. A. 47.

Injurious to health.—So the question whether the added ingredients would "reasonably have a tendency to injure health" should be left to the jury. Weeks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 69, 139 C. C. A. 631, following U. S. v. Lexington Mill, etc., Co., (1914) 232 U. S. 399, 34 S. Ct. 337, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 658, L. R. A. 1915B 774.

An article labeled "Grain Alcohol Varnish" consisting of shellac dissolved in alcohol and used for a glazing on cheap candies was held an adulterated article, it appearing that it contained an added ingredient, to wit, arsenic, which the jury considered sufficient in quantity to make it an article which "may be injurious to health." Weeks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 69, 139 C. C. A. 631.

Macaroons are not adulterated by the addition of glucose. Washburn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 395, 140 C. C. A. 81.

Imitation of grape essence.—A bottled article labeled "Compound Ess Grape" but which in fact contained nothing from grapes and was a mere imitation artificially prepared, it was held, must be deemed adulterated within the general terms of this section. U. S. v. Schides, (1918) 246 U. S. 519, 38 S. Ct. 369, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1909 Supp., p. 139, sec. 8.

State statute on subject of misbranding.—Since Congress has not covered the field of disclosure of the ingredients of a food product designed for human consumption and moved or moving in interstate commerce from one state into another for sale there the several states in the exercise of the police power are at liberty and free to legislate on that subject, and lawfully provide by law for a disclosure of the name of the ingredients entering into the composition or compounding of such food mixtures, so long as the disclosure of the formula for compounding such food mixture is not required. Crescent Mfg. Co. v. Wilson, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 282, following Savage v. Jones, (1912) 225

U. S. 501, 32 S. Ct. 715, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 1182.

Illustrations of misbranding—"Fruit Wild Cherry Compound."—An article of food labeled "Fruit Wild Cherry Compound" is misbranded if it consists chiefly of an imitation wild cherry essence artificially colored, but not if the dominant element is genuine fruit wild cherry, for "compound" indicates that the "fruit wild cherry" is in composition or combination with something else. U. S. v. Weeks, (S. D. N. Y. 1912) 225 Fed. 1017.

Lemon, etc.—An article labeled "Special Lemon. Lemon Terpene and Citral" was held not misbranded in Weeks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 64, 139 C. C. A. 626.

Macaroons.—In Washburn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 395, 140 C. C. A. 81, it was held that whether an article of food labeled "macaroons" was misbranded by the fact that such article contained glucose depended on whether the jury found that glucose was an ingredient of macaroons. If it was not, then a misbranding occurred.

Macaroni.—In U. S. v. Two Hundred and Sixty-Seven Boxes of Macaroni, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 79, the question involved was whether the labeling of each of many boxes of macaroni was misbranding as conveying the impression that the macaroni, which was in fact a domestic product, was foreign. The label read as follows: "Gusto Igiene Nettezza Pastificio Moderno Elettrico Con Prosciugazione Artificiale Vitello Brand Torre Annunziata (Italy Method) Mfg. U. S. A." It was held that a misbranding was shown. "Ohio Claret Wine."—Where barrels branded and labeled "Ohio Claret Wine" contain only pomace wine there is a misbranding. U. S. v. Sixty Barrels Wine, (W. D. Mo. 1915) 225 Fed. 846.

"A distinctive name is a name that distinguishes." U. S. v. Forty Barrels, etc., of Coca Cola, (1916) 241 U. S. 265, 36 S. Ct. 573, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 995, Ann. Cas. 1917C 487, reversing (E. D. Tenn. 1911) 191 Fed. 431, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 535, 132 C. C. A. 47.

Offering for sale under distinctive name—principal and agent.—This section defines misbranding as, inter alia, "offering an article for sale" under the distinctive name of another article, even though no label describing it as such other article be actually affixed to it, and since intent is not an element of the offense a principal may be held liable for an act of his sales agent although he had told him not to misdescribe the article. Weeks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 64, 139 C. C. A. 626.

1909 Supp., p. 141, sec. 10.

Shipment for use by consignee as raw material.—For a case wherein the remedy in rem provided by this section was invoked, where adulterated butter had been shipped, not for sale, but intended for use by the consignee in the bakery business, see U. S. v. Nine Barrels of Butter, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 499, following Hipolite Egg. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 220 U. S. 45, 31 S. Ct. 364, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 364, cited in the note to this section par. in 1912 Supp., p. 1098.

Libel—Sufficiency.—A libel to condemn cases of "Buffalo Lithia Water," which alleges in effect that the seized property is branded, labeled and sold as lithia water, when in fact it is not lithia water, and that by reason of such branding the public is deceived and misled, is sufficient. Particular characterization of the water as a mineral water or a spring water is not necessary. Goode v. U. S., (1915) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 162.

Rules and regulations inconsistent with statute.—For certain regulations providing for the so-called "Read test" to determine whether tea contains "artificial coloring or facing matter," held to be inconsistent with the statute, see Macy v. Browne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 359, 140 C. C. A. 45, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 215 Fed. 456.

1909 Supp., p. 144. [Act of May 16, 1908.]

Construction.—The question to be answered upon every examination is: Are the teas of inferior purity, quality and fitness for consumption to the standards. Although the sentence is conjunctive, it may fairly be construed disjunctively, as providing that tea shall be prohibited which falls below the standard either in purity, in quality or in fitness for consumption. Macy v. Browne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 359, 140 C. C. A. 45.

Coloring or facing matter.—Tea which is fully equal or superior to the standard, in purity, in quality and in fitness for consumption is not subject to rejection merely because it contains coloring or facing matter, "unless the coloring matter plus other impurities makes the tea below standard in purity, or the coloring matter makes the tea below standard in quality or the coloring matter makes the tea less fit for consumption than the standard." Macy v. Browne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 359, 140 C. C. A.

45, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 215 Fed. 456.

Powers of board of examiners.—Within the field of investigation confided to them the board of examiners are the sole judges; but they have been given no authority to extend the field of investigation beyond the limits staked out by Congress. Macy v. Browne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 359, 140 C. C. A. 45, distinguishing Butterfield v. Stranahan, (1904) 192 U. S. 470, 24 S. Ct. 349, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 525.

Misleading statements as to curative effects—Constitutionality.—The Sherley amendment is constitutional. Seven Cases v. U. S., (1916) 239 U. S. 510, 36 S. Ct. 190, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 411, L. R. A. 1916D 164.

The phrase "false and fraudulent" in the Sherley amendment must be taken with its accepted meaning, and then it must be found that the statement contained in the package was put there to accompany the goods with actual intent to deceive, an intent which may be derived from the facts and circumstances but which must be established. Seven Cases v. U. S., (1916) 239 U. S. 510, 36 S. Ct. 190, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 411, L. R. A. 1916D 164.

Circulars contained in a package are affected by the Sherley amendment. Seven Cases v. U. S., (1916) 239 U. S. 510, 36 S. Ct. 190, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 411, L. R. A. 1916D 164.

Issues.—In a proceeding to forfeit drugs on the ground that they were misbranded as to their curative effects, the issues under this Act resolve themselves into two questions: First, were the statements regarding the curative or therapeutic effects false; and second, were they fraudulent? Eleven Gross Packages, etc., v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 71, 147 C. C. A. 141.

Misbranding—Imitation grape essence.—A bottled article labeled "Compound Ess Grape," but which in fact contained nothing from grapes, and was an imitation artificially manufactured, was held misbranded. U. S. v. Schides, (1918) 246 U. S. 519, 38 S. Ct. 369, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

GAME ANIMALS AND BIRDS

1914 Supp., p. 148. [Migratory game birds, etc.]

Materiality in state prosecution.—In State v. Carey, (S. D. 1917) 165 N. W.

539, the appellant was tried and convicted upon an information charging him with the shipment of fifteen wild ducks to a point within the state in violation of a state statute making it unlawful to ship, or caused to be shipped, wild ducks by any private or common carrier to any person within or without the state. Several reasons why the conviction was illegal were urged by appellant, but the principal ground relied upon was that the Act of Congress, commonly known as the federal Migratory Game Bird Law, placed all migratory game birds under federal protection, and thereby suspended all state laws in regard to the same subject; while, on the other hand, it was contended by the Attorney General that the said federal Act is unconstitutional and did not have the effect claimed for it by the appellant. The court said: "But it nowhere in the record appears that the ducks in question were killed in violation of this law [the federal Act] or of any regulation made thereunder. So far as appears from the record, said ducks were lawfully killed and lawfully in the possession of the defendant at the time of the alleged shipment. Therefore it is immaterial to the issues in this case whether the said federal act is constitutional or not."

HABEAS CORPUS

Vol. III, p. 162, sec. 751.

Scope of writ.—Inquiry as confined to jurisdiction.—If a court has jurisdiction of the case, the writ of habeas corpus cannot be employed to retry the issues, whether of law, constitutional or other, or of fact. Collins v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 495, 156 C. C. A. 193.

As substitute for writ of error.—It is a familiar rule that a writ of habeas corpus cannot be used as a writ of error, but only for the consideration of fundamental and jurisdictional questions. Collins v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 495, 156 C. C. A. 193.

Review of proceedings of special tribunals.—Court-martial.—It is settled law that, if a military tribunal has jurisdiction to try a person charged with an offense against military law, the civil courts cannot interfere by writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Dostal, (N. D. Ohio 1917) 243 Fed. 664.

Enlistment of minors.—A minor, who enlists without the written consent of a parent or guardian, when such consent is required, becomes a soldier. His enlistment is not void, nor is it voidable in any event by him. He may be released from the service by a timely application of the parent or guardian having a superior right to his custody or control. But this application must be made with reasonable diligence, after the parent or guardian has acquired knowledge of the actual enlistment, and before an offense has been committed by him. After an offense has been committed by the minor against the Military Law, and especially after he has been placed under arrest and charges have been preferred against him, it is too late for the parent or guardian to oust the jurisdiction of the military authorities by an application to the civil courts for a writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Dostal, (N. D. Ohio 1917) 243 Fed. 664.

Habeas corpus lies to obtain the discharge of minors who have fraudulently enlisted in the United States army or navy, but the merits of the case will not be inquired into. Hoskins v. Dickerson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 275, 152 C. C. A. 263, Ann. Cas. 1917C 776, L. R. A. 1917D 1056.

Immigration.—Defects in warrant of deportation.—Where a writ of habeas corpus is sued out after the hearing and the issuing of the warrant of deportation, an objection to the original warrant, as that it was signed by the Assistant Secretary of Labor and not by Secretary of Labor, comes too late, as the only object of the writ is to ascertain whether the petitioner can lawfully be detained in custody. Moy Wing Sun v. Prentiss, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 24, 148 C. C. A. 40.

Duplicious indictment.—A double charge in a single count of an indictment is no ground for discharge on habeas corpus. Collins v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 495, 156 C. C. A. 193.

Vol. III, p. 167, sec. 753.

General principles.—Under the terms of this section, in order to entitle the applicant to the relief sought under writ of habeas corpus, it must appear that he is held in custody in violation of the Constitution of the United States. Second. That he cannot have relief on habeas corpus if he is held in custody by reason of conviction upon a criminal charge before a court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the offense, the place where it was committed and the person of the prisoner. Third. Mere errors of law, however serious, committed by the court in the exercise of its jurisdiction, cannot be reviewed by habeas corpus. The writ cannot be employed as a substitute for a writ of error. Fourth. A criminal prosecution in the courts of a state, based on the law not repugnant to the federal Constitution and conducted according to the settled course of proceedings under the law of the state, so long as it includes notice and a hearing, or an opportunity to be heard, before a court of competent jurisdiction, according to established modes of procedure, is "due process of law" in the constitutional sense. Fifth. The federal courts cannot review irregularity or erroneous rulings upon the trial, however serious, and habeas corpus will lie only where the judgment under which the prisoner is detained is shown to be absolutely void for want of jurisdiction in the court, either because such jurisdiction was absent at the beginning, or was lost in the course of the proceedings. Sixth. In determining the question whether the jurisdiction of the court was lost, the inquiry must not be confined to the proceedings and judgment of the trial court. The proceedings in the appellate tribunal are to be regarded as part of the process of law, and are to be considered in determining any question of deprivation of life or liberty under the federal Constitution. Seventh. Questions arising under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, instead of involving merely the jurisdiction of some court, in a broad sense involve the power and authority of the state itself. The prohibition is addressed to the state itself, and if a violation be threatened by one agency of the state, but prevented by another agency of higher authority, there is no violation by the state; and as the state determines what courts shall be established for the trial of offenses against her laws, it follows that the question whether a state is depriving a prisoner of his liberty without due process of law, under a law not violative of the federal Constitution, cannot be determined ordinarily, with fairness to the state, until the conclusion of the course of justice in its courts. Eighth. Under the liberal procedure on habeas corpus, a prisoner in custody pursuant to the final judgment of a state court may have a judicial inquiry in the federal courts into the very truth and substance of the causes of his detention, and, if necessary, to look beyond the record of his conviction sufficiently to test the jurisdiction of the state court to proceed to judgment against him. But the court should take into consideration the entire course of the proceedings in the state courts, and not merely a single step in the proceedings, and that consideration must be given, not only to the averments of the petition, but to the proceedings which the petition attacks. Fier v. Steele, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 228 Fed. 242, summarized from the opinion by Pitney, J., in Leo M. Frank v. Mangum, (1915) 237 U. S. 309, 35 S. Ct. 582, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 969.

Soldiers—Jurisdiction of federal court.

—A federal court has power to issue a writ of habeas corpus for the purpose of an inquiry into the cause of detention of a prisoner held by a state to answer to a criminal charge, where it is alleged by the petitioner that the act charged as a crime was committed by the prisoner in the performance of his duty as a soldier of the United States. It has authority to determine summarily, as a fact, whether or not such allegation is true, and, if found to be true, to discharge the prisoner on the ground that the state is without jurisdiction to try him for such act. In re Wulzen, (S. D. Ohio 1916) 235 Fed. 362.

But the writ should issue only in urgent cases, since the general jurisdiction in time of peace, of the civil courts of a state, over persons in the military service of the United States who are accused of a crime, or an offense against the person of a citizen, committed within the state, is not denied. In re Wulzen, (S. D. Ohio 1916) 235 Fed. 362.

Vol. III, p. 173, sec. 755.

When writ need not be awarded.—Where the petition for the writ sets out the cause of detention, the issuance of the writ is unnecessary to bring that upon the record by a return to the writ. Horn v. Mitchell, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 819, 147 C. C. A. 13.

Right of prisoner to appear in person at hearing of application.—A prisoner applying for a writ of habeas corpus is not entitled to appear in the District Court in person for the purpose of prosecuting his application for the writ. Murdock v. Pollock, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 392, 143 C. C. A. 512.

Person confined in insane asylum.—In Hammon v. Hill, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 228 Fed. 999, the facts were held insufficient to show that the relator, who was confined in an insane asylum, was entitled to a writ of habeas corpus.

Demurrer.—In Horn v. Mitchell, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 223 Fed. 549, affirmed (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 819, 147 C. C. A. 13, the question arising whether a demurrer lay to a petition for habeas corpus, the court said: "It is contended by the petitioner that it does not, and that the court should not consider such cases, except upon the actual facts as established at a hearing. This petition is unusually full and explicit. I see no reason to doubt that it sets forth accurately and completely the substantial facts upon which the petitioner relies. No request to amend it has been made on his behalf; and it has not been suggested that any further material facts would or might be developed upon a hearing. It may be assumed, as was done in Frank's Case, infra, that the petition states all facts helpful to the prisoner. I greatly doubt whether a formal demurrer is necessary or proper in a case heard upon a petition and an order to show cause why the writ should not issue. In view of Revised Statutes, § 755, it is, I think, sufficient if the respondent orally demurs, or, what amounts to the same thing, suggests to the court that the petition does not state a case entitling the petitioner to the writ."

Vol. III, p. 174, sec. 761.

"Dispose of the party as law and justice required.—It has been held that a defect in the warrant is no ground for the discharge of the petitioner on a writ of habeas corpus. The rule in all such cases made obligatory by this section is that the judge granting the writ shall on the hearing "dispose of the party as law and justice require." This means not as law and justice required at the time of the arrest, but as law and justice require at the time of the hearing. Ong Seen v. Burnett, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 850, 147 C. C. A. 44.

Military enlistment.—Where habeas corpus is brought by a parent to obtain the custody of a minor child for the purpose of avoiding his enlistment in the National Guard, the court will not order his surrender to the parent, where such minor was charged with the commission of military offenses while he was a soldier. The election by the father, evidenced by the writ of habeas corpus, to avoid his son's enlistment, terminated the right of the military authorities to detain the latter under the enlistment. But it did not terminate the right of such authorities to continue their custody of the minor for the time reasonably required for the exercise of the military jurisdiction brought into play by duly made charges of the commission of military offenses by the minor while he was a soldier. Hoskins

Dickerson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 275, 152 C. C. A. 263, Ann. Cas. 1917C 776, L. R. A. 1917D 1056. See, also Ex parte Dostal, (N. D. Ohio 1917) 243 Fed. 664.

Vol. III, p. 175, sec. 763.

Superseded—Appeals to Circuit Court of Appeals.—In Hoskins v. Funk, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 278, 152 C. C. A. 266, the court said: "It is not an order of the District Judge in vacation which is made subject to review by this court by section 129 of the Judicial Code. No statute has been found which purports to confer on this court the jurisdiction which section 763 of the Revised Statutes conferred on the Circuit Court to review 'the final decision of any court, justice, or judge inferior to the circuit court, upon an application for a writ of habeas corpus or upon such writ when issued.' The conclusion reached in the case of Webb v. York, 74 Fed. 753, 21 C. C. A. 65, that, notwithstanding the absence of such a statute, the Circuit Courts of Appeals have in some way succeeded to the jurisdiction which the statute just quoted conferred on another court, is one in which we are unable to concur. The reasoning by which that conclusion was reached does not seem to us to be convincing. We have found no statute having the effect of conferring upon this court appellate jurisdiction to review such an order made by a District Judge in vacation as the appeal in this case seeks to present for review."

Vol. III, p. 176, sec. 764.

Effect of Act of March, 1891, creating Circuit Courts of Appeals.—The right of appeal direct to the Supreme Court exists in habeas corpus cases where a question is involved under section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, now constituting Judicial Code, § 238, 1912 Supp., p. 231. Otherwise there is not such right of direct appeal, especially as the abolishment of the Circuit Courts by Judicial Code, 289, 1912 Supp., p. 249, "removed the last vestige of authority for an appeal" under R. S. sec. 764. Horn v. Mitchell, (1917) 243 U. S. 247, 37 S. Ct. 293, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 700.

HEALTH AND QUARANTINE

Vol. III, p. 226, sec. 1.

Purpose of Act.—The Department of Agriculture, realizing the losses that were resulting to the hog raisers of the country from the promiscuous manufacture and distribution of anti-hog cholera serum, secured the enactment of the above law intended to regulate the preparation, sale, and distribution of such serum. Hall v. State, (1916) 100 Neb. 84, 158 N. W. 362, L. R. A. 1916F 136.

Validity of state statute giving licensed manufacturers exclusive right to sell serum.—This Act provides that plants manufacturing serum shall be licensed and that they may not prepare it for shipment unless they are licensed. A United States veterinary license does not appear to have been provided for the use of a person, but for manufacturers of the serum. The license is to the plant, and therefore a state statute seeking to give to those manufacturers the exclusive right to sell the serum denies to the citizens of the state the right to sell it. Hall v. State, (1916) 100 Neb. 84, 158 N. W. 362, L. R. A. 1916F 136.

HOSPITALS AND ASYLUMS

Vol. III, p. 274, sec. 4844.

Indigency.—Indigency is a question of fact. To be indigent does not mean that a person must be a pauper. An insane person with insufficient estate to pay for his maintenance in the hospital for the insane, after providing for those who could claim his support, is indigent within the terms of the Revised Statutes. Depue v. District of Columbia, (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E 414.

And if a person can pay only "a portion, but not the whole," of the expense of maintenance, he is an indigent person within the provisions of this section. Depue v. District of Columbia, (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E 414.

Commitment under this section.—See Depue v. District of Columbia, (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E 414.

IMMIGRATION

1909 Supp., p. 162, sec. 2.

Countries affected by Act—Philippine Islands.—The immigration laws of the United States have been by Act of Congress carried to the Philippine Islands and authorized to be there put into effect under appropriate legislation by the Insular Government. See Sui v. McCoy, (1915) 239 U. S. 139, 36 S. Ct. 95, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 183.

Persons likely to become a public charge.—The term "persons likely to become a public charge" is not limited to paupers or those liable to become such; "paupers" are mentioned in a separate class. Lam Fung Yen v. Frick, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 393; 147 C. C. A. 329, following the construction in U. S. v. Williams, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 175 Fed. 274, where it was construed as including "not only those persons who through misfortune cannot be self-supporting, but also those who will not undertake honest pursuits, and who are likely to become periodically the inmates of prisons."

For evidence held insufficient to support a finding that an alien was likely to become a public charge, see Greenwood v. Frick, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 629, 147 C. C. A. 437; Ex parte Callow, (D. C. Colo. 1916) 240 Fed. 212.

Prostitution—Evidence.—For evidence held insufficient to establish the offense of prostitution, see Chan Kam v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 855, 147 C. C. A. 49; reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 990, 145 C. C. A. 184.

Crime involving moral turpitude—Evidence.—For evidence held insufficient to support a finding that an alien had been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, see Greenwood v. Frick, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 629, 147 C. C. A. 437.

Bond for admission of alien children.—

The fact that this section contains no direct provision for a bond for the admission of alien children under the age of 16 years does not preclude the acceptance of a bond for such purpose. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 527, 143 C. C. A. 595; Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 533, 143 C. C. A. 601.

1909 Supp., p. 164, sec. 4.

Persons excluded.—It was not the intention of Congress to restrict the prohibition to manual laborers and not to apply it to those engaged in other employment. By this section all persons are excluded who do not come within the specified exemptions. The provisions are not limited to "labor" or "service" but are limited expressly by the exemptions. Ex parte Toguchi, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 238 Fed. 632.

The gist of the offense consists in the prepayment of transportation and the offense is committed when that is done, whether the contract laborers succeed in getting into the United States or not. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 179, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 130, 152 C. C. A. 172.

Soliciting importation.—And accordingly it has been held that soliciting the importation of a contract laborer, although there is no actual entry into the United States, is an offense under the statute and the fact that the alien was prevented by the government from entering, would not make the offender guiltless. U. S. v. Morrisey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 923, 158 C. C. A. 211, following New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 130, 152 C. C. A. 172.

But in U. S. v. River Spinning Co., (D. C. R. I. 1917) 243 Fed. 759, the court took the view that there must be an actual and completed migration or importation.

Issuing pass to alien contract laborer.—The issuing and delivering of a pass to an alien contract laborer by a corporation owning and operating lines reaching into a foreign country is a prepayment of transportation within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., & Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 179.

Alien seamen.—While the public and private vessels of every nation while on the high seas, and without the territorial limits of any state, are subject to the jurisdiction of the state to which they belong and are in many respects considered a part of its territory, it does not follow from this that a merchant vessel flying the American flag is a part of the United States within the immigration laws or that a sailor whose home is on the sea is a contract laborer within the purview of these laws. Scharrenberg v. Dollar Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 970, 144 C. C. A. 252.

Salesman.—In Ex parte Toguchi, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 238 Fed. 632, which was an application for writ of habeas corpus, it appeared that the petitioner came from Japan to the United States to take a position as salesman in the store of his uncle who conducted a Japanese silk and dry goods and bamboo business in Detroit. The uncle sent to petitioner $100 to apply on his expenses and told him to apply for more money on landing if needed. No salary was agreed upon to be paid to the petitioner. The Board of Immigration found that he came to the United States in violation of the alien contract labor provision of the Immigration Act, rejected him on that ground and ordered his deportation to Japan. The Secretary of Labor affirmed the finding of the Board. It was contended that the intent of Congress was to restrict the prohibition to manual laborers and not to apply it to those engaged in other employment. But, in denying the writ, the court held that all persons are excluded who do not come within the exemptions specified in the provisos of section 2; that the provisions are not limited to "labor" or "service" but are limited expressly by the exemptions. The fact that no salary is agreed upon is immaterial as a reasonable compensation would be implied.

1909 Supp., p. 164, sec. 5.

Contract laborer.—A section foreman without authority to go into a foreign land to secure laborers, was not acting within the line of his duty or scope of his authority, in arranging with and encouraging an alien to enter the country in violation of the Contract Labor Law, so as to charge a railroad company with a violation of the Act, where there was no knowledge of nor acquiescence in the unauthorized act of such employee. U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 554.

Venue of action.—In an action to recover the statutory penalty provided by this section, the place of bringing suit is governed by section 43 of the Judicial Code (1912 Supp., p. 152) a re-enactment without change of R. S. sec. 732 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. 94). Tomkins v. Paterson, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 238 Fed. 879.

1909 Supp., p. 165, sec. 6.

Failure of alien to enter country.—The solicitation, by advertisement, of an alien to enter the country, constitutes the offense although such alien was prevented from entering the country by the government. U. S. v. Morrissey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 923, 158 C. C. A. 211, following New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 130, 152 C. C. A. 172, which affirmed (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 179.

But in U. S. v. River Spinning Co., (D. C. R. I. 1917) 243 Fed. 759, the court took a contrary view, holding that the penalty is incurred only when the migration or importation is a completed act.

1909 Supp., p. 165, sec. 7.

Jurisdiction of offense under White Slave Traffic Act.—Failure to file with the Commissioner General of Immigration the statement required by section 6 of the White Slave Traffic Act of June 25, 1910, (title WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC, 1912 Supp., p. 419) is an offense committed at Washington, D. C., the office of such commissioner, and a person charged with such offense has the right to a trial within the District of Columbia, the District Court for the district of a state being without jurisdiction. U. S. v. Lombardo, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 980.

1909 Supp., p. 166, sec. 10.

Fair hearing.—While the board's decision, based upon the certificate of the examining medical officer, shall be final as to the rejection of aliens affected with mental or physical disability which would bring them within the excluded classes, this does not mean that the certificate is to take the place of a fair hearing by the board. Such a construction would result in giving the inspecting medical officer, instead of the board, the power of final decision. Billings v. Sitner, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 315, 142 C. C. A. 607.

1909 Supp., p. 169, sec. 19.

Power of Congress.—It was within the power of Congress to provide for or authorize delay in the execution of an order of deportation and a suspension of action thereunder for a reasonable time to serve some public purpose. In re Aliens, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 335.

Detention of alien.—It is not required that the detention of the alien be necessary or desired for the prosecution of a criminal offense under the Act. If his detention be necessary for the prosecution of a suit to recover a penalty for the violation of some provision of the immigration laws, such alien may be detained. In re Aliens, (N. D. N. Y. 1916). 231 Fed. 335.

Bail.—An alien subject to deportation but detained to be used as a witness may be admitted to bail pending his appearance in court as a witness. In re Aliens, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 335

1909 Supp., p. 170, sec. 20.

Entering in violation of law—Surreptitious entry.—The entry into the United States surreptitiously and without inspection, is sufficient in itself, irrespective of other considerations, to justify an order of deportation. Singh v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 557, 156 C. C. A. 255; Singh v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 559, 156 C. C. A. 257.

Limitation of time for deportation.—The jurisdiction of the Secretary of Labor depends upon the fact that the alien has entered the United States within the period of three years preceding his arrest by the immigration authorities. Backus v. Owe Sam Goon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 847, 149 C. C. A. 159.

In Bun Chew v. Connell, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 220, 147 C. C. A. 226 (affirming [S. D. Cal. 1915] 220 Fed. 387), it was held that the secretary has the full three years in which to begin proceedings, holding that the statute should be construed in analogy with the statutes of limitations in criminal cases.

Warrant of deportation—Designating place of deportation.—The warrant must designate the country to which the alien shall be taken on deportation. It is not enough that it directs deportation "to the country whence he came." An alien is not without right simply because he is subject to deportation. He cannot simply be sent away. He has a right under the Act to be returned to the country from which he came, and to be protected in that right, the warrant which authorizes the deportation should expressly name the country to which he is to be taken; and that right should not be left to the determination of the officer executing the warrant or to the transportation company which brought him in, as their judgment or convenience might dictate. Ex parte Callow, (D. C. Colo. 1916) 240 Fed. 212.

Postponing deportation pending proceedings in state court.—In the case of

In re Andrews, (D. C. Vt. 1916) 236 Fed. 300, it appeared that while the petitioner was in the custody of the United States Inspector of Immigration, confined in jail at St. Albans, Vt., awaiting her deportation to Canada, the Department of Labor, at the request of the state, postponed her deportation and surrendered her to the state authorities for the purpose of insuring her appearance as a witness for the state before a county court. The petitioner claimed that the Department of Labor had no right to allow her to be taken out of the custody of the immigration inspector and that she had the right to be deported forthwith. It was held that such surrender to the state authorities was proper on the well-settled rule that as a matter of comity between the federal and state governments either may surrender its custody of a prisoner to the other without the prisoner's consent. In such a case, the question of the jurisdiction and custody of the prisoner is one of comity between the governments, and not a personal right of the prisoner.

Place of deportation—Country whence he came.—In proceedings for the deportation of Chinese persons under this Act where it is shown that they came into this country from Canada, and there is no proof that they were born in China, evidence that they are Chinese is no proof that China is the land from whence they came and they should be returned to Canada instead of China. U. S. v. Sisson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 599, 146 C. C. A. 557; Yee Suey v. Berkshire, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 143, 146 C. C. A. 335.

Where an alien, a native East Indian, entered the United States surreptitiously from Canada and it appeared that he had never acquired a domicile in Canada, it was held that he was properly ordered deported to India, the country whence he came. Singh v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 557, 156 C. C. A. 255; Singh v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 559, 156 C. C. A. 257.

Habeas corpus—Review by court.—On habeas corpus to determine the legality of detention in deportation proceedings, the court's inquiry is limited as to whether the applicant was accorded an impartial hearing, and cannot inquire into the sufficiency of probative facts or consider reasons for the conclusions reached by the immigration officers. The question is not, Would the court have come to the same conclusion? but, Was the petitioner accorded a fair hearing? Ex parte Chin Doe Tung, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 1017.

Where an immigrant is ordered deported on the ground that there is danger of such immigrant becoming a public charge, the court cannot disturb this finding if there is evidence however slight to support the finding, but when there is nothing to support such a charge, the court may rightfully hold that the detention and deportation of the immigrant is an abuse of power. U. S. v. Howe, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 235 Fed. 990, wherein a writ of habeas corpus was sustained and the immigrant released on the ground that there was no evidence to hold the applicant for deportation.

Deportation of Chinese—Violation of Chinese Exclusion Act.—The Immigration Act applies to Chinese persons as well as other aliens and it applies to them when the ground of the proceeding is a violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act as distinguished from the Immigration Act. Ex parte Woo Shing, (N. D. Ohio 1915) 226 Fed. 141; Ex parte Wong Yee Toon, (D. C. Md. 1915) 227 Fed. 247; Sibray v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 1, 141 C. C. A. 555; Ex parte Chun Woi San, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 230 Fed. 538; Lam Fung Yen v. Frick, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 393, 147 C. C. A. 329.

But in Ex parte Woo Jan, (E. D. Ky. 1916) 228 Fed. 927, in an exhaustive discussion of this question, the court distinguishing U. S. v. Wong You, (1912) 223 U. S. 67, 32 S. Ct. 195, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 354, held that the Immigration Act was not intended to apply to Chinese laborers when the ground of a proceeding for their deportation is a violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act. And see to the same effect U. S. v. Prentis, (N. D. Ill. 1916) 230 Fed. 935; Lee Wong Hin v. Mayo, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 368, 153 C. C. A. 294.

In proceedings to deport a Chinese under the provisions of the Immigration Law for a violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act, an omnibus charge that the alien is in the country in violation of such Act is so broad as to convey no idea of the specific reason for which the alien has been ordered deported. It should be made apparent on the record, that the alien knew just what was specifically urged against him and that he was given an opportunity to meet the specific charge. See Ex parte Chun Woi San, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 230 Fed. 538.

The court will not undertake to prescribe rules of evidence for the immigration department, but where the jurisdiction of the department depends upon the establishment of a certain fact, which fact, when established, takes the alien's case out of the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States where it is placed by the Chinese Exclusion Law, the court is entitled to regard, not perhaps the weight of the evidence but certainly the character of the evidence, by which such a transfer of jurisdiction is effected. Ex parte Owe Sam Goon, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 654.

After the expiration of three years the deportation of a Chinese person, under the Immigration Act, for a violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act, is unauthorized. Moy Wing Sun v. Prentis, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 24, 148 C. C. A. 40; Wong Yuen v. Prentis, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 28, 148 C. C. A. 44; Backus v. Owe Sam Goon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 847, 149 C. C. A. 159.

If more than three years have elapsed since the entry, the government may proceed under the special Chinese Exclusion Act alone. Wong Chung v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 410, 157 C. C. A. 36.

Violation of Immigration Act.—A Chinese alien who secures admission into the United States in violation of this section, is subject to deportation under the provisions of this Act, at any time within three years after the date of his entry. Mok Nuey Tau v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 742, 157 C. C. A. 190; Quan You v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 746, 157 C. C. A. 194.

1909 Supp., p. 170, sec. 21.

It is the duty of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to satisfy himself that the alien has been found in the United States in violation of law and therefore subject to deportation, and being so satisfied, shall cause such alien to be returned to the country whence he came. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor cannot delegate or depute to a commissioner of immigration these duties nor leave it to such commissioner to be satisfied whether the law has been violated. Low Kwai v. Backus, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 481, 143 C. C. A. 549, wherein it appeared that the acting commissioner of immigration undertook to satisfy the Secretary of Commerce and Labor that the alien in question had violated the law.

Review by court.—On habeas corpus to determine the legality of detention in deportation proceedings, the court's inquiry is limited as to whether the applicant was accorded an impartial hearing, and cannot inquire into the sufficiency of probative facts or consider reasons for the conclusions reached by the immigration officers. The question is not, Would the court have come to the same conclusion? but, Was the petitioner accorded a fair hearing? Ex parte Chin Doe Tung, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 1017.

1909 Supp., p. 172, sec. 24.

Limitation on authority to administer oath.—Under this section immigration officers have power to administer oaths and take and consider evidence touching the right of an alien to enter the United States; but they have no power to administer oaths in an inquiry relating to the deportation of an alien. Backus v. Owe

Sam Goon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 847, 149 C. C. A. 159.

1909 Supp., p. 172, sec. 25.

Hearing—"Public."—Counsel for a party are not "the public" as that word is used in this section. In re Madeiros, (D. C. Mass. 1914) 225 Fed. 90.

The term "officials" as used in this section includes "clerks." Ex parte Momo Tomimatsu, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 232 Fed. 376.

Due process of law.—Due process of law does not necessarily require a judicial trial and Congress may intrust the decision of an immigrant's right to enter to an executive officer, even though denial of admission may deprive him of his liberty. Ex parte Chin Own, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 239 Fed. 391, following U. S. v. Ju Toy, (1905) 198 U. S. 253, 25 S. Ct. 644, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1040.

Decision of collector of customs.—A favorable decision by a collector of customs permitting a Chinese person to enter the United States is not a final or conclusive adjudication but is subject to re-examination by the courts. Ex parte Chin Own, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 239 Fed. 391.

Finality of decision of secretary.—The long series of decisions holding that hearings before the executive officers, and their orders made within the authority of the statute are final, is continued in Chu Tai Ngan v. Backus, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 446, 141 C. C. A. 276; Ex parte Chin Him, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 131; Ung Bak Foon v. Prentiss, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 406, 142 C. C. A. 102; Lam Fung Yen v. Frick, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 393, 147 C. C. A. 329.

1909 Supp., p. 175, sec. 35.

Deportation to China.—For evidence held sufficient to support the deportation of aliens to China, the land of their nativity, rather than to Canada, through which country they entered the United States, see Wallis v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 71, 144 C. C. A. 369. See also Wallis v. Fei Nei, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 77, 144 C. C. A. 375. See further the note Place of deportation—Country whence he came, under section 20, supra, p. 1205.

1909 Supp., p. 175, sec. 36.

Purpose of section.—The plain purpose of this section, when considered with other pertinent parts of the Act, is to require all aliens who enter the United States to submit themselves to inspection when they so enter. If they enter at seaports they are inspected at the place of landing, and if not at seaports, they must present themselves for inspection at the places designated by the secretary for that purpose. The Act justly places the burden on the alien to present himself at the proper place. It does not contemplate nor permit that he shall walk by, and if unobserved, then be entitled to claim that he is in by right; but to the contrary, the section expressly declares that he is thus unlawfully in the country and shall be deported. Ex parte Callow, (D. C. Colo. 1916) 240 Fed. 212.

Expatriated citizen.—Where a citizen of the United States, who with his family goes to Canada, and there later enlists in the army of that country for oversea service, making the necessary declarations, and takes an oath of allegiance that he will be faithful and bear true allegiance to His Majesty King George the Fifth, his heirs and successors, and that he will as in duty bound honestly and faithfully defend His Majesty, his heirs and successors, in person, crown, and dignity, against all enemies, and will observe and obey all orders of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, and of all the generals and officers set over him, so help him God, and actually enters the service, he thereby effectually expatriates himself. Ex parte Griffin, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 237 Fed. 445.

1909 Supp., p. 175, sec. 37.

Right to hospital treatment.—In Ex parte Momo Tomimatsu, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 232 Fed. 376, it was held that the petitioner, a Japanese woman afflicted with trachoma, was not entitled to hospital treatment as a matter of right under this section, as her husband had not filed his declaration to become a citizen, and was incapable of doing so.

1909 Supp., p. 178, sec. 43.

The proviso of this section was not inserted for the purpose of giving a special form of trial or special privilege to Chinese immigrants, but for the express purpose of imposing upon such immigrants the obligations of the Immigrant Act, and also of making sure that the additional obligations of the Chinese Exclusion Act would not be disturbed or affected. Ex parte Woo Shing, (N. D. Ohio 1915) 226 Fed. 141. See also the note Deportation of Chinese under section 20, supra, p. 1206.

1912 Supp., p. 90, sec. 2.

Construction.—Application to alien residing in Hawaiian Islands.—In U. S. v. Kimi Yamamoto, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 390, 153 C. C. A. 316, it appeared that the appellee came to the Hawaiian Islands in 1897 and had since been a resident thereof. She was ordered deported upon proof of the charge that she practiced prostitution after entry into the United States. The court below, upon writ of habeas corpus issued to determine the legality of the order of deportation, entered an order of discharge, holding that persons who admittedly were residents of the territory of Hawaii before annexation thereof by the United States did not enter the United States within the meaning of this section. But the court on appeal reversed the order of discharge. To the same effect see U. S. v. Sui Joy, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 392, 153 C. C. A. 318.

Time for deportation—Vessel owner's liability after three years.—The amendment of 1910 struck out the three-year limitation. When, therefore, the time limit for deportation of this particular class of aliens was removed and they were ordered to be deported "in the manner provided in section 20," the three-year period mentioned in the later section was to be disregarded for all purposes. In other words, this particular class is to be deported at any time from the port of deportation at the expense of the owners of the vessel which brought them in. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 591, 146 C. C. A. 549.

Owner of premises used for purpose of prostitution.—An alien landlord who leases to a prostitute the house in which she practices prostitution and who receives from her rent therefor, is not within the classification of this section. Katz v. Immigration Commissioner, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 316, 157 C. C. A. 508, wherein error was assigned on account of the holding in the court below that the owner of a house in which prostitution was practiced and carried on and who received rent thereon from an inmate thereof was within the statute as one "deriving benefit from the earnings of a prostitute."

Evidence.—For evidence held to be insufficient to support a finding and recommendation of deportation of an alien on the ground that he was deriving benefit from the earnings of a prostitute, see Katz v. Immigration Commissioner, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 316, 157 C. C. A. 508; Backus v. Katz, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 320, 157 C. C. A. 512.

Fair trial.—Where, in proceedings to deport an alien woman on the ground that she was practicing prostitution, she admitted the charge in a signed and sworn statement and was then asked if she desired counsel, and the counsel then appearing in her behalf stated that he did not desire to offer any further evidence or to file a brief, an objection that she had no fair hearing before the immigration authorities was untenable. Toku Saki v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 492, 152 C. C. A. 370.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

Vol. X, p. 115, sec. 27.

Purpose of provision.—The obvious purpose of this provision is to protect the public and to prevent any one from importing goods identified by their registered trademark which are not genuine. But it does not protect the owner of a registered trademark against the importation by third parties of the genuine article under that trademark. Fred Gretsck Mfg. Co. v. Schoening, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 780, 151 C. C. A. 630.

1916 Supp., p. 62, sec. 1.

Constitutionality.—This Act is not unconstitutional in so far as it attempts to make penal the keeping and transportation of opium within the limits of a state and as being in conflict with the police power of the state. Shepard v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 73, 149 C. C. A. 283, following Brolan v. U. S., (1915) 236 U. S. 216, 35 S. Ct. 285, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 544, wherein this objection to the statute was held to be so utterly devoid of merit as to be frivolous. To the same effect, see U. S. v. Ah Hung, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 243 Fed. 762.

Cited without specific application in a comparison with section 8 of the Act of Dec. 17, 1914, ch. 1 (see title INTERNAL REVENUE, 1916 Supp., p. 106); in Wilson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 344, 143 C. C. A. 464.

1916 Supp., p. 62, sec. 2.

Validity of statute—Possession proof of guilt.—"The statute has laid down a rule, not of substantive law at all, but merely of evidence. It does not in any way conclusively shut out all evidence from defendant; it has declared that, a prima facie case being made, the duty of producing evidence to avoid the effect of such prima facie case is upon the defendant. The great weight of authority confirms our belief that such a law is in no way in excess of power." Ng Choy Fong v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 305, 157 C. C. A. 497.

Effect of statute.—The effect of this law is to put upon every person in the United States the burden of refusing to deal with what is upon its face contraband, unless he can show its innocent character. If, under those circumstances, he takes into his possession an article which is thus labeled contraband, he commits a violation of the statute which renders him liable to punishment unless thereafter he can save himself by obtaining the proof which he should have required before purchasing the article. U. S. v. Ah Hung, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 243 Fed. 762.

Instructions.—In a prosecution on an indictment for conspiring to commit a crime against the United States by importing opium from Mexico, the Trial Court, in charging the jury, quoted the provisions of this Act. Error was assigned to that portion of the charge, but the court declined to review it, no exception having been taken. Andrews v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 418, 139 C. C. A. 646.

1916 Supp., p. 63, sec. 3.

Effect of section.—By the provisions of this section the opium itself is presumed to have been imported illegally, and the burden of rebutting that presumption is on the defendant as well as the burden of explaining his possession so as to relieve himself of knowledge as to the importation. This leaves the defendant in the situation of being liable to an accusation that he was in the possession of material presumed to be contraband and presumed to have been brought into the country unlawfully, unless he can show either a certificate or clear chain of title and history of the article, carrying it back of a possible contraband source. U. S. v. Ah Hung, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 243 Fed. 762.

INDIANS

Vol. III, p. 384, sec. 1.

"Indian country."—A station platform on a railway right of way through the heart of the Crow Indian Reservation is Indian country within the meaning of this Act. U. S. v. Soldana, (1918) 246 U. S. 530, 38 S. Ct. 357, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Introducing liquor into Indian country.—The mere transportation of liquor across an Indian allotment is not by itself a violation of this Act. Butterfield v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 556, 154 C. C. A. 332.

Vol. III, p. 385, sec. 2140.

Forfeiture.—By the construction of the courts forfeiture, under this section, has been confined to the interest only of the person guilty of the introduction, so that only where the vehicles were actually owned by the person using them in violating the law, could they be condemned and forfeited. See U. S. v. One Buick Roadster Automobile, (E. D. Okla. 1917) 244 Fed. 961.

Amendment.—The Act of March 2, 1917, effected an amendment of this section by an extension of its provisions, so that as to seizure, libel and forfeiture of vehicles it was operative, not only in what is strictly Indian country but also in any other places where the introduction of such intoxicants is prohibited by treaty or federal statute. U. S. v. One Buick Roadster Automobile, (E. D. Okla. 1917) 244 Fed. 961.

Vol. III, p. 406, sec. 31.

Effect of Arkansas laws in Indian Territory.—See Gidney v. Chappel, (1916) 241 U. S. 99, 36 S. Ct. 492, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 910.

Vol. III, p. 414, sec. 38.

Evidence.—Evidence that an Indian man and woman held themselves out as man and wife and were reputed to be married and that it was customary to disregard solemnization before a judge or clergyman, warrants a finding of compliance with all the requisites to validate the marriage under this section. Carney v. Chapman, (1917) 247 U. S. 102, 38 S. Ct. 449, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 595.

Vol. III, p. 424, sec. 8.

Gist of the offense.—The gist of the offense denounced by this section is the carrying of liquor into the Indian Territory from without the state of Oklahoma. The mere possession of whisky by any person within that part of the state known formerly as Indian Territory, without any proof of where it came from, or when it was brought into that territory, constitutes no federal offense and is wholly insufficient to justify conviction under this Act. Collier v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 64, 137 C. C. A. 86; Lewellen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 18, 138 C. C. A. 432.

Vol. III, p. 449, sec. 21.

Conclusiveness of decree of Dawes Commission.—Where the decision of the Commission to place the name of an Indian on the roll of Creek citizens by blood, as one entitled to be enrolled and to participate in the division of the tribal lands, it cannot be retried in the courts when not impeached for fraud or mistake, where such decision has been followed by the action of the Interior Department confirming allotment and ordering the patents conveying the lands. U. S. v. Wildcat, (1917) 244 U. S. 111, 37 S. Ct. 561, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1024.

Vol. III, p. 453, sec. 29.

Rights of occupancy.—Any existing rights of occupancy of a Chickasaw town site lot, except such as coincided with the ownership of permanent improvements thereon, terminated upon the taking effect of the Atoka Agreement of April 23, 1897, embraced in this section, conferring a preferential right of purchase upon owners of such improvements on Choctaw and Chickasaw town site lots, or at least when its town site provisions were put in operation at Chickasaw. Johnson v. Riddle, (1915) 240 U. S. 467, 36 S. Ct. 393, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 752.

Vol. III, p. 490, sec. 15.

Restrictions on alienation.—An Indian who had made a homestead entry under this Act and had substantially performed the conditions entitling him to a patent, except the making of final proof, at the date of the passage of the Act of July 4, 1884 (vol. 3, p. 491), is not affected by the provisions of the latter Act that such Indians as might then be located on the public lands, or should thereafter so locate, might avail themselves of the homestead laws, but that patents issued thereunder should contain a twenty-five years' limitation upon alienation. U. S. v. Hemmer, (1916) 241 U. S. 379, 36 S. Ct. 659, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1055, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 204 Fed. 898, 123 C. C. A. 194.

Vol. III, p. 491. [Act of July 4, 1884.]

This Act did not repeal, amend or modify any of the provisions of the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 131, § 15 (vol. 3, p. 490), and did not extend from five years to twenty-five years the restriction of the lands acquired by an Indian homesteader under the earlier Act. U. S. v. Hemmer, (1916) 241 U. S. 379, 36 S. Ct. 659, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1055, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 204 Fed. 898, 123 C. C. A. 194.

Cancellation of patents.—The land office has no authority to cancel a trust patent to a homestead obtained under this Act and issue a new patent without restriction on alienation under section 6 of the Act of Feb. 8, 1887 (vol. 3, p. 496). Seaples v. Card, (E. D. Wash. 1915) 246 Fed. 501.

Vol. III, p. 496, sec. 6.

Restrictions on alienation.—Where a trust patent to a homestead was obtained under the Act of July 4, 1884 (vol. 3, p. 491), the land office has no authority to cancel such patent and issue a new one without restrictions on alienation under this section. Seaples v. Card, (E. D. Wash. 1915) 246 Fed. 501.

Vol. III, p. 500, sec. 3.

Oil and gas lease of Indian lands.—Taxation.—A state may not, when assessing for purposes of taxation the corporate assignee of an oil and gas lease of Osage lands, made under the authority of this Act, include in such assessment the lease and rights thereunder, either as separate objects of taxation, or as represented or valued by the stock of the corporation. Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co. v. Oklahoma, (1916) 240 U. S. 522, 36 S. Ct. 453, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 779.

Vol. III, p. 503, sec. 1.

Jurisdiction.—Repeal.—In Hallowell v. Commons, (1916) 239 U. S. 506, 36 S. Ct. 202, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 409, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 210 Fed. 793, 127 C. C. A. 343, the court said: "This Act [Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 431, 1912 Supp., p. 96] restored to the secretary the power that had been taken from him by Acts of Aug. 15, 1894, ch. 290, 28 Stat. L. 305, and Feb. 6, 1901, ch. 217, 31 Stat. L. 760 (vol. 3, p. 503); McKay v. Kalyton, (1907) 204 U. S. 458, 468, 27 S. Ct. 346, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 566, 570. It made his jurisdiction exclusive in terms, it made no exception for pending litigation, but purported to be universal and so to take away the jurisdiction that for a time had been conferred upon the courts of the United States."

Vol. III, p. 505, sec. 7.

Validity.—Congress had power to remove the restrictions originally imposed upon alienation by heirs. Egan v. McDonald, (1918) 246 U. S. 227, 38 S. Ct. 223, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 36 S. D. 92, 153 N. W. 915.

Vol. X, p. 150, sec. 16.

Surplus lands in possession of heirs.—Surplus lands when in the hands of the heirs of a Chickasaw allottee, as well as when in the ownership of the original allottee, are bound by all the restrictions on alienation imposed by this and the preceding section 15. Gannon v. Johnston, (1917) 243 U. S. 108, 37 S. Ct. 330, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 622.

Vol. X, p. 150, sec. 19.

Excessive inclosure of holdings.—Indian citizens were not given the right under sections 19–21 of this Act, to revive and reassert long dormant claims to Choctaw and Chickasaw lands after others had entered into possession of and highly improved the lands. Hill v. Reynolds, (1917) 242 U. S. 361, 37 S. Ct. 163, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 363.

Vol. X, p. 151, sec. 23.

Nature of title.—The title conferred by the allotment is an equitable one with supervisory power remaining in the Secretary of the Interior. Duncan Townsite Co. v. Lane, (1917) 245 U. S. 308, 38 S. Ct. 99, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Allotment certificates as evidence.—The provision that allotment certificates issued by the Commission to the Five Civilized tribes shall be conclusive evidence of the right of any allottee to the tract described therein, has relation to rights between the holder and third parties. Duncan Townsite Co. v. Lane, (1917) 245 U. S. 308, 38 S. Ct. 99, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Certificates of allotment, like receiver's receipts under the general land laws, entitle the holder to exclusive possession of the premises. Duncan Townsite Co. v. Lane, (1917) 245 U. S. 308, 38 S. Ct. 99, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1909 Supp., p. 192, sec. 3.

Effect of enrollment.—Enrollment confers rights which cannot be taken away without notice and opportunity to be heard. But enrollment may be canceled by the Secretary of the Interior for fraud or mistake. Duncan Townsite Co. v. Lane, (1917) 245 U. S. 308, 38 S. Ct. 99, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1909 Supp., p. 198, sec. 19.

Osage Indian allotments.—Restrictions on alienation by nonmembers of tribe.—The restrictions on alienation of Osage Indian allotments, imposed by Act of June 28, 1906, ch. 3572 (1909 Supp., p. 219), do not apply to lands or any interest therein which have come into the possession of a white man not a member of the tribe, under allotments made in the right of certain deceased Indians to their respective heirs: Levindale Lead, etc., Min. Co. v. Coleman, (1916) 241 U. S. 432, 36 S. Ct. 644, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1080.

Taxation.—The exemption from taxation of lands allotted to an Indian under former acts is not, in view of this section, available to his grantees. Sweet v. Schock, (1917) 245 U. S. 192, 38 S. Ct. 101, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1909 Supp., p. 200, sec. 22.

Validity of statute.—A statute requiring approval by the Secretary of the Interior of conveyances made by a tribal Indian is not unconstitutional, even as applied to land upon the conveyance of which no such obstruction existed at the time of its enactment, and notwithstanding the admission of its owner to citizenship. Brader v. James, (1918) 246 U. S. 88, 38 S. Ct. 285, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 49 Okla. 734, 154 Pac. 560.

Allotment to representative of deceased Indian.—Restrictions.—The restrictions made by the provisions of this section apply as well in a case where selection has been made as provided by section 20 of the Cherokee Agreement (32 Stat. L. 716, ch. 1375), by the duly appointed executor or administrator of an Indian who died before receiving his allotment, as to a case where the land was selected by the ancestor in his lifetime. Talley v. Burgess, (1918) 246 U. S. 104, 38 S. Ct. 287, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 46 Okla. 550, 149 Pac. 120.

Approval by Secretary of Interior.—The approval of the Secretary of the Interior is, by this section, made a condition of a valid conveyance by the heirs of a deceased allottee of either of the Five Civilized Tribes and must be obtained in the case of land as to which the original restriction upon alienation by the allottee or his heirs had expired before its enactment. Brader v. James, (1918) 246 U. S. 88, 38 S. Ct. 285, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 49 Okla. 734, 154 Pac. 560.

Conveyance by minor heir of allottee.—Approval by court.—Read as a whole and construed in the light of the purpose to be accomplished this section requires approval by the United States court for the Indian Territory of conveyances made by the guardian of minor heirs of a deceased Indian allottee. Talley v. Burgess, (1918) 246 U. S. 104, 38 S. Ct. 287, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 46 Okla. 550, 149 Pac. 120.

Conclusiveness of citizenship roll.—The approved Seminole citizenship roll must be deemed conclusive as to the amount of Indian blood of an enrolled member of that tribe when testing his right under this section to convey his lands. U. S. v. Ferguson, (1917) 38 S. Ct. 434, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 592, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 974, 141 C. C. A. 96.

1909 Supp., p. 216. [Alienation restrictions removed, etc.]

Avoiding conveyances of Indian allotments.—The United States without capacity to bring suit in behalf of Indian grantors to set aside, because of the fraud of the grantees and the incapacity of such grantors, certain conveyances by adult mixed-blood Chippewa Indians of their patented allotments in the White Earth Indian Reservation, where such conveyances were made after the adoption of this Act. U. S. v. Waller, (1917) 243 U. S. 452, 37 S. Ct. 430, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 843.

1909 Supp., p. 228. [Noncompetent Indians]

Avoiding conveyances of Indian allotments.—The United States was without capacity to bring suit on behalf of Indian grantors to set aside, because of the fraud of the grantees and the incapacity of such grantors, certain conveyances by adult mixed blood Chippewa Indians of their patented allotments in the White Earth Indian Reservation, where such conveyances were made after the adoption of the Act. U. S. v. Waller, (1917) 243 U. S. 452, 37 S. Ct. 430, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 843.

1909 Supp., p. 233, sec. 2.

Discretionary power of Secretary of Interior.—The discretionary power of the Secretary of the Interior, under this section, with respect to the approval of oil and gas leases on Indian lands, was not exceeded when he gave such approval to that one of two leases for the same premises which was earlier in time, but later in filing for record with the Indian agency. Anicker v. Gunsburg, (1918) 246 U. S. 110, 38 S. Ct. 228, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 176, 141 C. C. A. 174.

Renewal of lease for agricultural purposes.—A valid lease for agricultural purposes of a restricted Creek allotment may be made during the existence of a prior, valid lease, provided that it is made for a fair rental, near the termination of the existing lease, and that it does not extend the term more than five years from the date of the last lease. But where a lease by a Creek citizen of his restricted allotment is made for agricultural purposes, and before it expires another lease for agricultural purposes is made to the same lessee for a period of five years, to commence in the future, the last lease, not being approved by the Secretary of the Interior, is void. Hudson v. Hildt, (Okla. 1915) 151 Pac. 1063.

1909 Supp., p. 233, sec. 3.

Enrollment records as conclusive evidence of age.—The enrollment records of the Commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes are conclusive evidence as to age of the members of said tribes and freedmen, on transactions had after the taking effect of this Act. Miller v. Thompson, (Okla. 1915) 151 Pac. 192.

1909 Supp., p. 233, sec. 4.

Taxation.—The exemption from taxation of lands allotted to an Indian under former Act is not, in view of this section, available to his grantees. Sweet v. Schock, (1917) 245 U. S. 192, 38 S. Ct. 101, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1912 Supp., p. 96, sec. 1.

Power and jurisdiction of Secretary of the Interior.—The Secretary of the Interior has exclusive jurisdiction under this statute to ascertain the legal heirs. Hallowell v. Commons, (1916) 239 U. S. 506, 36 S. Ct. 202, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 409, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 210 Fed. 793, 127 C. C. A. 343.

Reopening decisions of Secretary of Interior.—An order of the Secretary of the Interior, recognizing the adopted children of a deceased Indian allottee as his heirs, though made final and conclusive by this Act, does not exhaust his power so as to permit the courts by mandamus to interfere with his action in reopening the matter for further consideration, where the property to which the order relates is still in the administrative control of the department because of the trust imposed by the law of the United States until the expiration of the statutory period. Lane v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 201, 36 S. Ct. 599, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 956.

1912 Supp., p. 103, sec. 32.

Purpose of section.—"The intent and meaning of this statute, in our opinion, was to make the patented land part of the estate of the nominal patentee quoad hoc—the most important words being 'as if the deed had issued to the deceased grantee during life. The section was not intended to exclude other provisions of law otherwise applicable, and to give a title at all events to the heir or other party named in the Act as purchaser.'" Erryman v. Woodward, (1915) 238 U. S. 148, 35 S. Ct. 830, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1242.

1914 Supp., p. 164, sec. 5.

Governmental control.—The Secretary of the Interior is not empowered by this section to exercise control over private property purchased with trust funds released by him to an Osage Indian allottee. McCurdy v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 263, 38 S. Ct. 289, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

State taxation.—Lands purchased from their private owners with trust funds released to an Osage Indian allottee by the Secretary of the Interior and conveyed first in trust and later by the trustee to the Indian individually, could not be exempted from state taxation by a clause in the deed from the trustee making the land inalienable without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior. McCurdy v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 263, 38 S. Ct. 289, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

INTERNAL REVENUE

Vol. III, p. 577, sec. 3173.

Compelling production of books.—Under this section the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may compel the production of books by one who has become subject to the stamp tax on agreements of sale imposed by the War Revenue Act of Oct. 22, 1914, ch. 331, § 22, 1916 Supp., p. 95; and an order to produce books is not violative of any constitutional right. Calkins v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 240 Fed. 138.

This section was amended in the War Revenue Act of Sept. 8, 1916, ch. 463, § 16, ante, this volume, title INTERNAL REVENUE, p. 280.

Vol. III, p. 583, sec. 3182.

Power to assess stamp taxes is given by this section, and is not taken away by R. S. sec. 3176, vol. III, p. 580, as amended in Act of Sept. 8, 1916, ch. 463, § 16, ante, this volume, title INTERNAL REVENUE, p. 281; "section 3182 is most general, comprehensive, and inclusive, and was unquestionably intended to give, and did give, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue authority to make assessments 'of any tax imposed by this title,' being 'Title XXXV—Internal Revenue' . . . In other words Congress gave the Commissioner of Internal Revenue authority to make assessment of all taxes that were imposed by Congressional enactment, and which came under the heading of 'Internal Revenue.'" Calkins v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 240 Fed. 138.

This section authorizes assessment of penalties arising under the Act of Oct. 22, 1914, ch. 331, 1916 Supp., p. 80, et seq., when the section is construed with other provisions of the statutes. Kohlhamer v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 239 Fed. 408.

Vol. III, p. 597, sec. 3220.

Statutory remedy exclusive.—The remedy to recover back an internal revenue tax after paid is exclusively as specified in the statute, and the provisions of this section and R. S. secs. 3226, 3227 and 3228 (vol. III, pp. 601, 603) must be strictly complied with. Public Service Gas Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 496.

Limitation.—Two years after the payment of an illegal tax is the time within which, under R. S. sec. 3228, vol. III, p. 603, the right of recovery provided for by this section may be pursued. Public Service R. Co. v. Herold, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 902, 144 C. C. A. 184.

An adverse decision by the commissioner does not operate to extend the time within which to begin suit for a refund. Public Service R. Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 496.

Vol. III, p. 600, sec. 3224.

The only redress for an aggrieved taxpayer is the method provided in R. S. sec. 3226, vol. III, p. 601. Calkins v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 240 Fed. 138.

"The word 'assessment,' as used in this section, cannot fairly be limited to the mental act of the officer who determines the amount. It must include the preliminary investigation as well as the final determination, for one is as important as the other." Calkins v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 240 Fed. 138.

The inhibition of this statute applies to the collection by the Internal Revenue Collector of penalties assessed under the Act of Oct. 22, 1914, ch. 331, § 23, 1916 Supp., p. 100. Kohlhamer v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 239 Fed. 408.

Income Tax Law.—This section was held to be applicable to the Income Tax Law of 1913. Dodge v. Osborn, (1916) 240 U. S. 118, 36 S. Ct. 275, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 557.

An application by a receiver for instructions whether to make a return under the federal Income Tax Act of 1913 was not affected by this section, such proceeding not being a suit to restrain the assessment or collection of a tax. Scott v. Western Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 545, 158 C. C. A. 515.

Vol. III, p. 601, sec. 3226.

Payment under duress.—What may constitute duress is set forth by Justice Gray, speaking for the Circuit Court of Appeals for the third circuit in Herold v. Kahn, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 608, 86 C. C. A. 598, quoted in Cambria Steel Co. v. McCoach, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 278, where the court said: "When . . . such duress is exerted under circumstances sufficient to influence the apprehensions and conduct of a prudent business man, payment of money wrongfully induced thereby ought not to be regarded as voluntary."

Vol. III, p. 603, sec. 3227.

Limitation.—"No suit can be maintained under the law until an appeal has been taken to the commissioner. If on the appeal the claim is rejected, an action may be maintained against the collector (Rev. Stat., §§ 3226, 3227, 3228) and through him, on establishing the error or illegality, a recovery can be had. When the Commissioner rendered his decision, rejecting plaintiff's claim, the right of action was complete. It was then that plaintiff had a right to bring this suit [against the collector], which was not barred when actually entered." State Line, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 228 Fed. 246.

Vol. III, p. 603, sec. 3228.

Sufficiency of presentation to commissioner.—Where in an action against the collector the plaintiff's statement of claim alleged that the claim was filed with the defendant on a day stated, and that after some correspondence between the parties, on consideration of the claim filed, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue rejected the same, and gave notice to the defendant collector, by letter of a stated date, who in turn notified the plaintiff two days later of the decision reached, the statement was sufficient as against an objection questioning the regularity of the appeal to the Internal Revenue Commissioner. State Line, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 228 Fed. 246.

Vol. III, p. 651, sec. 3280.

An indictment for unauthorized distillation of alcoholic spirits need not specify the particular kind of spirits which the defendant is accused of producing. Therefore, a specification thereof in the indictment may be regarded as surplusage. Bullard v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 837, 158 C. C. A. 177.

Vol. III, p. 787, sec. 3.

Contingent beneficial interests.—In Uterhart v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 598, 36 S. Ct. 417, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 819, reversing (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 709, it was held that the interests which the residuary legatees took by a will, the terms of which were there considered, as construed by a state court of competent jurisdiction, were contingent and not vested prior to July 1, 1902, within the meaning of this section.

Controlled by the decision in Vanderbilt v. Eidman, (1905) 196 U. S. 480, 25 S. Ct. 331, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 563, it was held in Rosenfeld v. Scott, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 646, 158 C. C. A. 74, reversing (N. D. Cal. 1916) 232 Fed. 509, that certain life estates were contingent beneficial interests, and were not vested in possession or enjoyment prior to July 1, 1902.

Where a bequest of stock was made to an infant, the income to be collected by his guardian until he became of age, and applied to his necessary support and maintenance until he became of age, and then the corpus to be transferred to him, his interest in the bequest was absolute and subject to no contingency. Deford v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 220.

In Carleton v. U. S., (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 60, a will bequeathed $10,000 to "said Minnie A. Townsend, her heirs and assigns forever, the income from which shall be paid by said Minnie A. Townsend, annually or semiannually to my cousin, Mrs. Augusta H. Worthen, as long as said Augusta H. Worthen shall live." The court said: "It is true that Minnie A. Townsend did not enjoy it at once, but immediately upon passing from the possession of the executors of the will the whole corpus of the legacy was in the possession and enjoyment of the beneficiaries named in the will; and that was all the requirement of the war-revenue act to make it subject to taxation."

A tax paid without any protest or declaration of any intention to contest its validity is a voluntary payment and not recoverable. Rand v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 72.

Compliance with R. S. sec. 3226, vol. 3, p. 601, is essential before suit can be maintained for recovery under this statute of taxes paid. And said R. S. sec. 3226 is unaffected by the Act of July 27, 1912, ch. 256, vol. 4, p. 236. Rand v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 285.

1909 Supp., p. 829, sec. 38.

Constitutionality.—It is settled that the tax is valid as an excise on the privilege of doing business in a corporate capacity. Philadelphia Traction Co. v. McCoach, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 224 Fed. 800; Blalock v. Georgia R., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 296, 142 C. C. A. 588, Ann. Cas. 1917A 679.

"The legislative purpose was not to tax property as such, or the mere conversion of property, but to tax the conduct of the business of corporations organized for profit by a measure based upon the gainful returns from their business operations and property from the time the act took effect." Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., (1917) 247 U. S. 179, 38 S. Ct. 467, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Construction.—"The trend of judicial opinion has been to examine closely the phraseology of the act itself, and it must be construed in favor of taxation." U. S. v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 238 Fed. 231, per Manton, J.

A Treasury decision, promulgated for the guidance of revenue collectors, is entitled to some consideration in the construction of the statute, but cannot be given great weight in an action against a collector to recover taxes paid under protest, since the government is the real defendant "and, of course, courts cannot permit a party to a lawsuit to say what the rule of law for the decision shall be."

Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1915) 245 Fed. 792.

The constitutionality of the Act was upheld by finding that the tax imposed is an excise tax and not a franchise, property or other direct tax. The Act must therefore be strictly construed as an excise tax. Philadelphia Traction Co. v. McCoach, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 224 Fed. 800.

Nature of tax.—The tax provided for by this section was not intended to be and was not in any proper sense an income tax, but an excise upon the carrying on or the doing of business in a corporate or quasi-corporate capacity; the amount of the tax being measured according to the income. U. S. v. Whitridge, (1913) 231 U. S. 144, 34 S. Ct. 24, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 159; National Bank of Commerce v. Allen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 472, 139 C. C. A. 20; Philadelphia Traction Co. v. McCoach, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 224 Fed. 800.

Corporations subject to tax—Organized for profit.—The Boston Terminal Company was held, under the facts found and stated in Boston Terminal Co. v. Gill, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 664, 158 C. C. A. 620, to be corporation "organized for profit," this conclusion being deemed to find strong support in Von Baumbach v. Sargent Land Co., (1917) 242 U. S. 503, 37 S. Ct. 201, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 460.

Joint-stock company.—A joint-stock company which exists without a special charter and has not been organized under any statute, but is created under articles of association or agreement, although its members do not possess the important corporate attribute of limited liability, may nevertheless be for all practical purposes a corporation and belong to that class of joint-stock companies which it was the intention of Congress to tax under this Act. Roberts v. Anderson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 7, 141 C. C. A. 121.

A mutual protective association organized under a state statute, whose only source of revenue was assessments paid by its members, was held, under the facts of the case, to be an "insurance company" and to be "doing business" within the meaning of those terms in this Act. Commercial Travelers' Life, etc., Ass'n v. Rodway, (N. D. Ohio 1913) 235 Fed. 370.

Corporations formed by the owners of lands for the purpose of handling the property and distributing the proceeds of its disposition are organized for profit within the meaning of this section. Von Baumbach v. Sargent Land Co., (1917) 242 U. S. 503, 37 S. Ct. 201, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 460.

What constitutes "carrying on," "engaged in" or "doing business"—Leasing of property and franchise by corporation.

—Where there has been a practical surrender of all of the lessor's rights to operate and maintain, reserving the right of corporate existence, and where the use of such reserve corporate power is only for preserving the property leased or for enabling the lessee to do such things effectively as are reasonably incidental to the preservation of the property and the enjoyment by the lessee of the rights and privileges conveyed by the terms of the lease, there is not an engagement in business by the lessor. Cambria Steel Co. v. McCoach, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 278; Public Service Gas Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 496; Public Service R. Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 500; Waterbury Gaslight Co. v. Walsh, (D. C. Conn. 1915) 228 Fed. 54; State Line, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 228 Fed. 246; Public Service R. Co. v. Herold, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 902, 144 C. C. A. 184; Hudson County Gas Co. v. McCoach, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 912, 144 (C. C. A. 194); McCoach v. Continental Passenger R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 976, 147 C. C. A. 650.

In Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 184, an action to recover a tax paid under protest, "the facts in relation to the carrying on of business by the plaintiffs, as shown by the various leases under which the railroads were operated, clearly brought all of the plaintiffs within the law as laid down in the Minchill Case, 226 U. S. 295, 33 S. Ct. 419, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 842."

But where, whether at its own instigation or that of the lessee, the lessor corporation exerts its corporate powers by an activity carried on to increase the estate of the lessor, or to do things more than reasonably necessary to enable the lessee to enjoy the rights in existence at the time of the lease and such rights as are incidental thereto, then the lessor company may be held to be engaged in the business for which it was incorporated, and is therefore brought within the statute. Public Service Electric Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 486; Public Service R. Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 490; Public Service Electric Co. v. Herold, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 491; Public Service R. Co. v. Moffett, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 494.

"If a corporation is doing the business for which it was organized the income derived from such business is taxable under the act. . . . If the purpose for which it was organized was to build and lease property, then the rents derived from such lease are taxable, even though thereby the corporation leases all the property and of necessity goes out of all corporate business excepting the collection and distribution of its rents." Rio Grande Junc- tion R. Co. v. U. S., (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 274.

Foreign corporation—Illustration.—Laurentide Co. v. Durey, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 223.

A street railway corporation which leased its lines and property in 1897 to another corporation, and has not since operated them itself is not a corporation "engaged in business" during that period. West End St. R. Co. v. Malley, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 625, 158 C. C. A. 581, where the question was regarded as controlled by the reasoning and result in the following cases: New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Gill, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1915) 219 Fed. 184, 134 C. C. A. 558; McCoach v. Continental Passenger R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 976, 147 C. C. A. 650; Jasper, etc., R. Co. v. Walker, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 533, 151 C. C. A. 469.

A street railway company which surrenders to another company the management and control of its physical possessions and transfers to the second company its right and franchise to operate its railway, reserving only its corporate existence and the right to receive and disburse its income, is not "doing business" within the meaning of the statute. Philadelphia Traction Co. v. McCoach, (E. C. Pa. 1915) 224 Fed. 800.

Contracts of sale.—In Bryant v. Scott, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 875, it appeared that a foreign corporation made an executory contract of sale of its entire title and interest in all its property in the state and retired from all further participation or interest in the business and removed its office from the state. The contract of sale provided for partial payments on the purchase price during a series of years and that until the final payment the legal title should remain in the grantor as security for principal and interest. It was held that such corporation was not "doing business" in the state so as to render it subject to the tax on the property sold.

Really corporations organized for and actually engaged in such activities as handling large tracts of land owned by such corporations, leasing and selling parcels thereof, disposing of stumpage, seeing that their lessees under mining leases live up to their contracts, and distributing the proceeds of such activities among the stockholders, are "engaged in business" within the meaning of this subdivision. Von Baumbach v. Sargent Land Co., (1917) 242 U. S. 503, 37 S. Ct. 201, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 460.

"What is income? The flow of capital's service is its income. A disservice is a negative service. A flow of disservice or negative income is called 'outgo.'" U. S. v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 238 Fed. 231, per Manton, J.

The advance in the value of property during a series of years can in no just sense be considered the gains, profits or income of any one particular year of the series, although the entire amount of the advance be at one time turned into money by a sale of the property. Gauley Mountain Coal Co. v. Hays, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 110, 144 C. C. A. 408.

So-called royalties received by the corporate owners of lands leased for long terms for the purpose of exploring it and mining and removing the merchantable iron therein, to persons who agreed to pay monthly a specified sum per ton for all ore mined and shipped the previous month, and to mine and ship a specified quantity of ore each year, and in default of this to pay for the minimum amount specified and take credit therefor, and apply such sums upon ore mined and shipped thereafter in excess of such minimum,—are income within the meaning of this subdivision. Von Baumbach v. Sargent Land Co., (1917) 242 U. S. 503, 37 S. Ct. 201, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 460, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 219 Fed. 31, 134 C. C. A. 649, which affirmed (D. C. Minn. 1913) 207 Fed. 423, followed in U. S. v. Biwabik Min. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 116, 38 S. Ct. 462, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 9, 154 C. C. A. 601.

Time of accrual of receipt of income.—This Act measures the tax by the income received within the year for which the assessment was levied, whether it accrued within that year or in some preceding year, while the Act was in effect; but it excludes all income that accrued prior to Jan. 1, 1909, although afterward received while the Act was in effect. Hays v. Gauley Mountain Coal Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 189, 38 S. Ct. 470, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Net income.—The fair market value as of Dec. 31, 1908, of the stumpage cut and converted by a lumber manufacturing corporation from lands acquired by it prior to the passage of this Act, should be deducted from gross receipts when computing the company's net taxable income for the years in which the timber was converted into money, although the increase in market value over original cost had not been entered on the company's books until after the passage of the statute. Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., (1917) 247 U. S. 179, 38 S. Ct. 467, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The entire proceeds of a mere conversion of capital assets acquired before and converted into money after the taking effect of the Act are not to be treated as income. "In order to determine whether there has been gain or loss, and the amount of the gain, if any, we must withdraw from the gross proceeds an amount sufficient to restore the capital value that existed at the commencement of the period." Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., (1917) 247 U. S. 179, 38 S. Ct. 467, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In computing gain from a sale of assets bought by a corporation, interest should not be added to the original purchase price in order to ascertain its cost. Hays v. Ganley Mountain Coal Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 189, 38 S. Ct. 470, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1909 Supp., p. 829, sec. 38, cl. second.

Measurement of tax.—The provisions of the Act which prescribe the method to be pursued in ascertaining the amount to be paid show that the amount is measured by the corporation's income during the entire calendar year in which the taxed privilege was exercised, and not by its income while the privilege was being exercised if the corporation was not carrying on or doing business during the entire year. Blalock v. Georgia Ry., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 296, 142 C. C. A. 588, Ann. Cas. 1917A 679.

Deductions.—Interest on "bonded or other indebtedness."—In Altheimer, etc., Ins. Co. v. Allen, (E. D. Mo. 1917) 246 Fed. 270, a corporation doing a brokerage business bought securities for its customers, and carried the same for them. On these purchases the customers paid the corporation only a part of the purchase price, and consequently owed it balances, on which they paid interest to it. The corporation in turn also paid on such purchases only a part of the purchase price, and accordingly owed balances on them on which it paid the interest; but the interest thus received by the corporation from its customers on said purchases exceeded the interest paid by the plaintiff on said purchases. It was held that the interest paid by the corporation on account of the purchases was to be treated as having been made "on its bonded and other indebtedness," and that the entire amount received as interest by the corporation was to be included as gross income.

"Expense of the business."—Where two civil engineers formed a corporation to conduct the business of civil engineering, and prior to the enactment of the Corporation Tax Act entered into an agreement with the corporation to devote their time and energies to the corporation for a stipulated salary, and providing also that the net surplus profits should be divided between them on a percentage basis, it was held that the net surplus profits so divided must be treated as income of the corporation subject to the tax and not as "compensation" or expenses of the business entitled to be deducted. Jacobs v. Anderson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 505, 143 C. C. A. 87.

Expenditures for certain additions and betterments to railroad properties were not to be deducted except to the extent of the cost of such additions and betterments so far as they were mere renewals with like kind and quality, such cost only being chargeable to expenses of maintenance and operation. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1915) 245 Fed. 792.

Capital assets.—A corporation whose property consisted for the most part of timber, lands and a sawmill, and which was engaged in the lumber business, cutting and manufacturing its own timber into lumber and other forest products and selling and marketing the same, in computing its taxable net income was entitled to deduct from its gross receipts the then actual market value of the timber stumpage cut and converted into lumber during that year and also the actual market value of its stump and other lands sold during the year. Mitchell Bros. Co. v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1915) 225 Fed. 437.

Where the evidence showed that the property of a coal mining corporation had depreciated to the amount of at least 15 cents per ton, it was held that the value of the coal mined did not represent income. If an owner has a ton of coal in the ground worth 15 cents, and he digs it up and sells it for 15 cents per ton, the amount so received for it is not income, but is, in fact, only a return to him of the value of his coal as part of his capital asset. Forty Fort Coal Co. v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 233 Fed. 704.

Moneys received for service connections and pipe extensions by a waterworks corporation are not permitted to be deducted from the gross amount of income. "Moneys so expended are invested in permanent improvements which tend to enhance the rental and the market value of the water system." Nor does it make any difference that the state commission had decided that meters and service connections paid for by consumers are not to be included in the valuation of the water company's plant upon which it is entitled to earn a fair return. Union Hollywood Water Co. v. Carter, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 329, 151 C. C. A. 345.

"Taxes imposed under authority of state."—Mississippi Code of 1906, § 4273, is construed by the Supreme Court of the state as imposing a tax not on a bank or its capital, but upon the shareholders, the bank being required to pay for them. Hence amounts paid by a bank under that statute were not for "taxes imposed" within the meaning of those words in the federal Corporation Tax Act. Jackson First Nat. Bank v. McNeel, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 559, 151 C. C. A. 495.

Reserve funds of insurance companies.—Amounts of unpaid losses which fire and marine insurance companies are required by the state insurance commissioner, under the authority of Pa. Act June 1, 1911, P. L. 607, the schedule each year as items of liabilities are not "reserve funds" "required by law" within the meaning of this subdivision. McCoach v. Insurance Co. of North America, (1917) 244 U. S. 585, 37 S. Ct. 709, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1333.

Depreciation.—A mining corporation is not entitled to deduct from its gross income any amount whatever on account of depletion or exhaustion of ore bodies caused by its operations for the year for which the tax was assessed, nor is it entitled to a deduction against gross proceeds from the mining and treatment of ores to the extent of the cost value of the ore in the ground before it was mined, ascertained in strict compliance with the rules and regulations of the Treasury Department. Goldfield Consol. Mines Co. v. Scott, (1918) 247 U. S. 126, 38 S. Ct. 465, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The market value of ore in place on premises at the beginning of the tax period may not be deducted when ascertaining the net income of a corporation which had leased certain lands for the purpose of exploring for and mining and removing the merchantable iron ore therein, and had agreed to pay monthly a specified sum per ton for all ore mined and shipped the previous month, and to mine and ship a specified quantity of ore each year, and, in default of this, to pay for the minimum amount specified and take credit therefor, and apply such sums upon ore mined and shipped thereafter in excess of such amount. The lessee is in no sense a purchaser of ore in place. U. S. v. Birvabik Min. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 116, 38 S. Ct. 462, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 9, 154 C. C. A. 601.

Exhaustion of the ore body resulting from the process of mining is not an element to be considered in determining reasonable "depreciation" under this subdivision. Von Baumbach v. Sargent Land Co., (1917) 242 U. S. 503, 37 S. Ct. 201, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 460.

1909 Supp., p. 832, sec. 38, cl. fourth.

"Real facts," and not "bookkeeping facts" determine the net income of a corporation. Mitchell Bros. Co. v. Doyle, (W. D. Mich. 1915) 225 Fed. 437; U. S. v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 238 Fed. 231; Forty Fort Coal Co. v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 233 Fed. 705.

1909 Supp., p. 832, sec. 38, cl. fifth.

Action to recover—In general.—"In the collection of the taxes imposed by the statute, the government is not confined to the summary proceedings therein provided, but may resort to a plenary suit." U. S. v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Mich. 1915) 239 Fed. 153.

Limitation.—The three-year clause of this subdivision "is not a limitation upon the right of the government to sue for unpaid taxes, but, at most, is a limitation upon the right of the collecting officers to make assessment and to enforce payment by the summary statutory proceedings." U. S. v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Mich. 1915) 239 Fed. 153.

Neither the limitation of time upon the action of the commissioner of internal revenue, nor any other statute of limitation, is binding upon the United States in bringing an action to recover the difference between the special excise tax levied, assessed and paid and the amount which it is alleged should have been levied, assessed and paid, where the corporation's return incorrectly stated its net return. U. S. v. Minneapolis Threshing Mach. Co., (D. C. Minn. 1915) 229 Fed. 1019.

Assessment as condition precedent.—Where a tax of a fixed percentage, as here, is imposed by statute on a subject or object which is so definitely described in the statute that its amount or value, on which the fixed per centum is to be calculated, can be ascertained and determined, on evidence, by a court, a suit for the tax will lie, without an assessment. U. S. v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Mich. 1915) 239 Fed. 153, and numerous cases there cited.

Burden of proof.—In an action by the government to collect an excise tax on the amount received on the sale of stock in another corporation owned by the defendant, which the latter had carried on its books at the valuation of $1, the burden was upon the plaintiff to show by a fair preponderance that the stock was worth but $1. U. S. v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 238 Fed. 231.

1914 Supp., p. 185, sec. II.

Constitutionality.—The Income Tax Act of Oct. 3, 1913, is constitutional. The Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution relieved all income taxes from the rule of apportionment. Dodge v. Brady, (1916) 240 U. S. 122, 36 S. Ct. 277, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 560; Stanton v. Baltic Min. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 278, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 546; Tyee Realty Co. v. Anderson, (1916) 240 U. S. 115, 36 S. Ct. 281, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 554.

The Act is not unconstitutional for retroactivity as applied to returns made in 1914 which were estimated or based upon the income of an individual for a certain definite preceding period, even though that period be partially prior to the date of the enactment of the law. If the person is liable for the tax in the future, the method of its computation as estimated upon the past does not invalidate the tax. Edwards v. Keith, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 585, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 110, 145 C. C. A. 298, L. R. A. 1918A 498.

1914 Supp., p. 185 A, subd. 1.

Income of one who died July 22, 1913, which accrued from March 1st was subject to tax in view of subdivision D of this Act, which makes it retroactive. Brady v. Anderson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 665, 153 C. C. A. 463.

"Income from all property."—Income from corporate stocks and bonds owned by a nonresident alien and kept in this country by an agent, who collected such income for the owner, was taxable under this provision. De Ganay v. Lederer, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 568.

The distributive share of a stockholder paid over to him after the effective date of the Act, upon the surrender of his entire interest in the corporation, as a single and final dividend in liquidation of the company's entire assets and business, is not income arising or accruing during the year, where such payment, although equaling twice the par value of his stock, represented only its intrinsic value at and before the effective date of the Act, the increase in value being due to a gradual rise in the market value of the company's lands, culminating before the Act took effect. Lynch v. Turrish, (1918) 247 U. S. 221, 38 S. Ct. 537, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 653, 149 C. C. A. 649) distinguished in Lewellyn v. Gulf Oil Corp., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 1, 158 C. C. A. 1, reversing (W. D. Pa. 1916) 242 Fed. 709.

A stock dividend which represents surplus profits transferred to the corporation's capital account is capital and not income within the meaning of the Income Tax Law. Towne v. Eisner, (1918) 245 U. S. 418, 38 S. Ct. 158, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Alimony paid to a divorced wife under a decree of court is not subject to an income tax under this subdivision: Gould v. Gould, (1917) 245 U. S. 151, 38 S. Ct. 53, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Tax in respect of rent.—A clause in a lease whereby the lessee agrees to assume the payment of all taxes and assessments upon the "yearly payments herein agreed to be made by the party of the first part . . . for the payment or collection of which . . . the said party of the first part would otherwise be liable or accountable under any lawful authority whatever" is broad enough to cover the income tax, payable out of and assessed upon the "yearly payments agreed to be made." North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1915) 249 Pa. St.

326, 95 Atl. 100. See also Suter v. Jordan Marsh Co., (1916) 225 Mass. 34, 113 N. E. 580.

Accrual of net income.—See Edwards v. Keith, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 585, (affirmed [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916] 231 Fed. 110), 145 C. C. A. 298, L. R. A. 1918A 498, (1913).

1914 Supp., p. 186 B.

Dividends declared and paid in the ordinary course of business by a corporation to its stockholders after the taking effect of the Act, whether from current earnings, or from accumulated surplus made up of past earnings or increase in value of corporate assets, notwithstanding it accrued to the corporation in whole or in part prior to March 1, 1913, were taxable "net income" under this subdivision. Lynch v. Hornby, (1918) 247 U. S. 221, 38 S. Ct. 537, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 661, 149 C. C. A. 657. "Controlled by Lynch v. Hornby," last above cited was Peabody v. Eisner, (1918) 247 U. S. —, 38 S. Ct. 546, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, holding that a distribution in specie by a corporation to its stockholders after the effective date of the Income Tax Act, of the holdings of shares of stock in another corporation, which it owned on and prior to that date, was part of the stockholders' taxable income.

1914 Supp., p. 187 D.

Constitutionality.—The limited retroactivity, fixing a first period embracing only the time from March 1 to Dec. 31, 1913, is not repugnant to the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment nor inconsistent with the Sixteenth Amendment, since the date of retroactivity did not extend beyond the time when the amendment was operative, and there was power by virtue of the amendment during that period to levy the tax without apportionment. Brushaber v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1915) 240 U. S. 1, 36 S. Ct. 235, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 493, Ann. Cas. 1917B 713, L. R. A. 1917D 414.

Force of Treasury Department instructions.—See Edwards v. Keith, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 110, 145 C. C. A. 298, L. R. A. 1918A 498, affirming (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 585.

Tax in respect of rent.—Money deducted and withheld from the rent by a lessee in accordance with the requirements of the federal income tax is a tax or assessment upon or in respect of the rent payable under the lease. So where by the terms of a lease, the lessee obligated himself to pay "all taxes and assessments . . . upon or in respect of the rent . . . howsoever or to whomsoever assessed" it was held that he could not justify a refusal to pay a part of the rent reserved in the lease, on the ground that he had been compelled to pay therefrom a sum exacted by the United States government. Suter v. Jordan Marsh Co., (1916) 225 Mass. 34, 113 N. E. 580. See also North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1915) 249 Pa. St. 326, 95 Atl. 100.

1914 Supp., p. 191 G.

Doubt must be resolved against the government where the meaning and scope of language claimed to impose a tax is uncertain. Scott v. Western Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 545, 158 C. C. A. 515.

Receivers of corporations are not taxable under this statute (Scott v. Western Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 545, 158 C. C. A. 515, where one of the reasons for so concluding was that while this statute omits reference to receivers of corporations the Income Tax Law of Sept. 8, 1916, ch. 463, ante, this volume, title INTERNAL REVENUE, page 334, expressly provides for the inclusion of property held by such receivers.

The purpose was to exclude from consideration any income that accrued prior to March 1, 1913, especially as the Sixteenth Amendment was not adopted until February, 1913. Southern Pac. Co. v. Lowe, (1918) 247 U. S. 330, 38 S. Ct. 540, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 238 Fed. 847. Compare Lewellyn v. Gulf Oil Corp., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 1, 158 C. C. A. 1, reversing (W. D. Pa. 1916) 242 Fed. 709.

Provision contrasted with section 38, Act of Aug. 5, 1901.—Under the Act of Oct. 3, 1913, as to a corporation, the tax is assessed and paid "upon the amount of net income accruing from business transacted and capital invested within the United States during such year," while under section 38 of the Act of Aug. 5, 1909 (1909 Supp. Appendix, p. 829), liability for the special excise tax depends upon whether the corporation was "engaged in business in any state or territory of the United States." In the one case we have "business transacted" within the United States and in the other we have "engaged in business" within the United States. Laurentide Co. v. Durey, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 223.

"The word 'income' as used in revenue legislation has a settled legal meaning. The courts have uniformly construed it to include only the receipt of actual cash as opposed to contemplated revenue due but unpaid, unless a contrary purpose is manifest from the language of the statute. . . . Doubtless it was the intention of Congress in legislation of this character to employ terms of sufficient comprehension to reach the actual income of the corporation by foreclosing any possible avenue of escape, but it can hardly be said that in so doing an intention prevailed to tax that which did not actually exist, except on paper, as income during the taxing period." Maryland Casualty Co. v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 201.

Accumulations accruing prior to Jan. 1, 1913, were capital, not income, for the purposes of the Act. Southern Pac. Co. v. Lowe, (1918) 247 U. S. 330, 38 S. Ct. 540, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

"Transacting business."—For facts held sufficient to establish that a foreign corporation "transacted business" in the United States within the meaning of the statute so as to render it liable for the tax, see Laurentide Co. v. Durey, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 223.

Income derived from the business of shipping goods to foreign countries and there selling them is covered by this statute, which is constitutional in that regard. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, (1918) 247 U. S. 165, 38 S. Ct. 432, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Where the lessee of a railroad paid, in accordance with provisions in the lease, on stipulated dates in each year, to the persons holding shares of the lessor corporations stock and certified by it as then entitled to dividends, certain stipulated sums per share held, the amount so paid was income of the lessor corporation, and did not cease to be such because not paid directly to it. West End St. R. Co. v. Malley, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 625, 158 C. C. A. 581, following Rensselaer v. Irwin, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 239 Fed. 739. To the same point under the Corporation Tax Act of Aug. 5, 1909, ch. 6, § 38, 1909 Supp. Appendix, p. 829, Blalock v. Georgia R., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 387, 158 C. C. A. 451.

1916 Supp., p. 71, sec. 1.

"Manufacture of opium for smoking purposes" defined.—In Seidler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 336, 142 C. C. A. 628, reversing a judgment of conviction, the court said: "We cannot agree that adding water to an extract of opium, which is itself smokable, is a manufacture of opium for smoking purposes."

The mere mixing of smoking opium with the residue of opium that has been smoked, and heating the same, is not a "manufacture of opium for smoking purposes" within the meaning of the statute. The manufacture which the statute contemplates is complete when from the crude opium there has been produced the smoking opium, with which alone, as defendant contended, he operated, in its unsmoked and smoked condition. U. S. v. Shelley, (1913) 229 U. S. 239, 33 S. Ct. 635, 67 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167; Shelley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1912) 198 Fed. 88, 117 C. C. A. 294.

An alien Chinese person, so proved to be on the trial, could not lawfully be convicted on an indictment not charging him with manufacturing opium while an alien, but charging a failure to give the bond required of manufacturers of opium for smoking purposes, and, while so failing, engaging in the business of manufacturing opium for smoking purposes. Lee Mow Lin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 408, 153 C. C. A. 334.

1916 Supp., p. 71, sec. 2.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for a violation of the statute forbidding the manufacture of smoking opium without having filed a bond, it is a relevant circumstance and competent to show, that a man in whose possession appropriate materials and utensils are found is himself a smoker, and therefore under a temptation to supply himself with smoking opium. Tam Shi Yan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 422, 140 C. C. A. 116.

Review on appeal.—An assignment of error, asserting that a verdict of conviction was against the weight of evidence, raises no question for review in the Circuit court of Appeals. Tam Shi Yan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 422, 140 C. C. A. 116.

1916 Supp., p. 73, sec. 1. [Act of Aug. 18, 1914.]

Effect on state legislation.—This Act "has not application and makes no reference to maintaining and operating places for the purpose of carrying on and engaging in the business of dealing in futures on margin," and therefore does not invalidate Georgia Code of 1910, § 4257. Arthur v. State, (1917) 146 Ga. 827, 92 S. E. 637.

1916 Supp., p. 85, sec. 3, par. first.

Constitutionality of tax.—The tax imposed by this section is upon a franchise to conduct the business of banking and clearly lawful. Anderson v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 322, 154 C. C. A. 202.

Capital, etc., "employed" in banking.—In Anderson v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 322, 154 C. C. A. 202, where a trust company did a large trust business and also a large banking business, it was held that certain invested assets were not capital, surplus, and undivided profits not employed in banking, but were employed in all the business of the bank of every kind, and that it was a question of fact, to be determined at a trial, just how far the so-called permanent investments were employed in banking, and that the fact was not to be determined by methods of book-keeping, but by real transactions.

1916 Supp., p. 89, sec. 5.

Taxing measure.—In the case of In re Capitol Trading Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 806, the court said: "Emergency Revenue Law, Oct. 22, 1914, ch. 331, 38 Stat. 745, extended for one year to December 31, 1916, is a taxing measure or law."

Constitutionality.—The Act has been construed to impose a stamp tax on a deed given by a referee in pursuance of an order of a state court in foreclosure proceedings and to be not unconstitutional for that reason. Home Title Ins. Co. v. Keith, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 905.

1916 Supp., p. 89, sec. 6.

Attachment of stamp at what time.—This section imposes the penalty upon any one who makes, signs, or issues (that is, uses or delivers) the deed. But this does not mean that the stamp must be attached to the paper before the paper can be signed at all. It simply places upon each of these individuals the responsibility of being charged with a misdemeanor if the paper is not duly stamped before its actual issuance or use, and of course the lack of the stamp must be rectified before recording. The "or" is disjunctive as to persons but conjunctive as to a complete act of making, signing, and using. Home Title Ins. Co. v. Keith, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 905.

1916 Supp., p. 96. [Sale, agreement of sale, etc.]

Tax on "offers."—The total price at which each seller agrees to sell must be the basis upon which the tax on "offers" is computed, and not merely the amount received by the broker for negotiating the deal. Calkins v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 240 Fed. 138.

Failure to reduce agreements to writing and attach the stamp cannot relieve from the tax. Calkins v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 240 Fed. 138.

An agreement once subject to the tax cannot later be relieved of that burden by any action of the parties. Calkins v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 240 Fed. 138.

1916 Supp., p. 98. [Conveyance.]

Deed by master in chancery.—This language is amply broad enough to cover master's deeds, or in fact any deed to land made pursuant to an order of court by an officer duly authorized, unless there is some reason inherent in the office of a special master in chancery or other court officer empowered to make the sale and sign the conveyance, which prevents the operation of the Act. Crawford v. New South Farm, etc., Co., (S. D. Fla. 1915) 231 Fed. 999.

Deed by referee in foreclosure sale.—A person purchasing property at a mortgage foreclosure sale is liable for a stamp tax by virtue of the deed executed by the referee at the sale, for a person buying at a judicial sale is a party for whose use or benefit the instrument is issued. Home Title Ins. Co. v. Keith, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 905.

1916 Supp., p. 99. [Power of attorney.]

Power of attorney in bankruptcy proceeding.—In In re Capitol Trading Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 806, the court said: "I see no room for excepting from the operation of this act powers or letters of attorney authorizing attorneys in fact to act for their principal in suits at law or in bankruptcy proceedings. . . . Such a paper is not exempt from the stamp duty or stamp tax when executed and presented, even if its execution and presentation is not required by law. This proposition is covered by the decision of Judge Hand (In re Hawley, [S. D. N. Y. 1915] 220 Fed. 372)."

1916 Supp., p. 100, sec. 23.

Relief from the penalty provided by this section is not afforded by reason of the provision in section 22 of the same Act which makes default, when accompanied by criminal intent, a misdemeanor. Kohlhamer v. Smietanka, (N. D. Ill. 1917) 239 Fed. 408.

1916 Supp., p. 101, sec. 1.

Revenue measure.—This Act is a revenue Act. While it may be assumed that the statute has a moral end as well as revenue in view, the ends are to be considered as reached only within the limits of a revenue measure. U. S. v. Jin Fuey Moy, (1916) 241 U. S. 394, 36 S. Ct. 658, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061, Ann. Cas. 1917D 854, affirming (W. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 1003.

"It cannot now be questioned in any lower court that the Harrison Act is a revenue measure or tax law and is to be construed as such. U. S. v. Jin Fuey Moy, 241 U. S. 394, 39 S. Ct. 658, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061, a decision which deprives of authority the judgment of this court in Wilson v. U. S., 229 Fed. 344, 143 C. C. A. 464." Lowe v. Farbwerke-Hoechst Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 671, 153 C. C. A. 469.

"The word 'derivative' is to be taken in its commonly received or popular sense, as distinguished from special or scientific usage. Farbenfabriken v. U. S., 102 Fed. 603, 42 C. C. A. 525, and cases cited. . . . Even if it were possible chemically to extract from coca leaves the component parts of novocaine, the latter substance could not be called a derivative of coca leaves; it is a derivative of coal tar." Lowe v. Farbwerke-Hoechst Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 671, 153 C. C. A. 469.

An indictment of a physician charging him with giving a prescription for and so dispensing pounds of opium, charged no offense, because the word "dispense" as used in the statute "relates to actual delivery of the drug by the physician to the patient, from the former's office supply, generally, though not excluding other delivery." U. S. v. Reynolds, (D. C. Mont. 1916) 244 Fed. 991, sustaining a demurrer.

An indictment for unlawful dealing, etc., in cocaine, morphine sulphate, and morphine was demurrable for failure to allege that either of said drugs was opium or coca leaves, since the court could not take judicial cognizance of the fact. U. S. v. Hammers, (S. D. Fla. 1917) 241 Fed. 542.

1916 Supp., p. 102, sec. 2.

Clause (a) is unconstitutional as in violation of the 10th Amendment to the federal Constitution so far as it makes criminal a sale, etc., by a registered physician of a prohibited drug, without a "written order," etc., and not "in the course of his professional practice," since said omissions are merely violations of local police regulations, which Congress had no power to establish, and are not means to effect the objects of the Act in respect of its revenue. U. S. v. Doremus, (W. D. Tex. 1918) 246 Fed. 958.

Conspiracy to violate the statute.—See notes to section 37 in title PENAL LAWS, infra.

A physician or other person duly registered may be guilty of violating the Act. Thurston v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 335, 154 C. C. A. 215.

Prescription containing unreasonable quantity of narcotic drug.—In U. S. v. Curtis, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 288, it was held to be a violation of the Harrison Act for a registered physician to issue a prescription for an unreasonable quantity of narcotic drugs and for a dealer to fill such prescription.

Indictment—Negating exceptions in section 2(a).—An indictment charging duly registered physicians who had paid the tax assessed by the statute with dispensing and distributing, without keeping a record, etc., was demurrable for failure to negative that the physician personally attended upon the person to whom the drug was dispensed or distributed. U. S. v. Hammers, (S. D. Fla. 1917) 241 Fed. 542.

Failure to preserve duplicate of order.

—A demurrer on the ground that the offense was not alleged of a day certain was overruled to an indictment presented Oct. 26, 1916, which alleged that the defendant on May 13, 1916, gave an order for opium which "was thereafter accepted" and "after the acceptance" he failed to preserve a duplicate thereof "in such a way as to be readily accessible," contrary to law, the court saying: "The offense would be committed when ready accessibility first failed after the order's acceptance and is capable of continuity." U. S. v. Gaag, (D. C. Mont. 1916) 237 Fed. 728.

1916 Supp., p. 105, sec. 4.

Persons exempted.—A person who has not registered and paid the special tax as required by section 1 of this Act cannot claim the exemption under the proviso of this section. U. S. v. Johnson, (W. D. Tenn. 1915) 228 Fed. 251.

1916 Supp., p. 106, sec. 6.

Large and unusual quantities of opium sold, distributed, given away or dispensed, unaccompanied by explanation as to the necessity therefor, are sales and a dispensing of the drug for the very purpose of evading the intentions and provisions of the Act and therefore unlawful. U. S. v. Curtis, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 288.

The words "or other preparations" mean other preparations ejusdem generis with liniments and ointments. Lowe v. Farbwerke-Hoechst Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 671, 153 C. C. A. 469.

1916 Supp., p. 106, sec. 8.

"Any person not registered."—In Wilson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 344, 143 C. C. A. 464, the plaintiff in error was convicted of a violation of this section; there having been found in his possession a substantial quantity of opium. He admitted that he kept it solely for the purpose of smoking it. He did not produce opium, nor import, nor manufacture, nor compound, nor deal in it. Nor did he dispense it, nor sell, distribute or give it away. Upon writ of error to review the judgment, the defendant contended that he was not within the provisions of this section because the words "any person" as used therein are to be construed as referring only to persons of the classes referred to in section 1 as being obliged to register and pay a tax. But the judgment of conviction was affirmed.

Possession of drugs by certain persons is made unlawful by this section, with some exemptions; the section "does not merely provide a presumption or a rule of evidence to establish a violation of section 1." U. S. v. O'Hara, (D. C. R. I. 1916) 242 Fed. 749.

Indictment—Alleging possession.—An indictment charging that the defendant did "unlawfully, wrongfully, and knowingly sell, dispense, and distribute . . . morphine sulphate tablets," and that he sold and dispensed the same as a dealer to consumer, etc., is equivalent to charging that he had the drugs in his possession. U. S. v. Curtis, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 288.

But it has been held that a mere allegation that the defendant, not having registered, etc., had the prohibited drug in his possession, or an equivalent count, is not sufficient to charge a violation of the provisions of the Act. U. S. v. Carney, (N. D. Ia. 1915) 228 Fed. 163.

But compare U. S. v. Brown, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 224 Fed. 135, wherein a contrary conclusion was reached. In that case the view was taken that opium is an "outlaw" in this country and that the Act is therefore intended to prohibit importation of the drug for any purpose.

Negating innocent possession.—An indictment charging that defendants were persons mentioned in section 1 and unlawfully, willfully, knowingly, and feloniously had in their possession and under their control certain or such drugs, was sufficient without alleging that such possession was for the purpose of dealing, etc.,—conceding that a dealer may have an innocent possession of drugs which is not connected with his dealing, for example, as medicine for his personal ailments. U. S. v. O'Hara, (D. C. R. I. 1916) 242 Fed. 749.

1916 Supp., p. 108, sec. 9.

"The rule of strict construction applies to criminal statutes such as this." U. S. v. Doremus, (W. D. Tex. 1918) 246 Fed. 958.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Vol. III, p. 809, sec. 1.

Commerce as interstate or intrastate—In general.—It is well settled that the intention of the shipper as to the ultimate destination at the time the freight starts is the test of its character, regardless of whether the voyage is temporarily broken, whether more than one carrier transports it or whether it moves on through or local bills of lading. U. S. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (E. D. La. 1916) 230 Fed. 940.

Booking performance for theatrical circuit.—In Marienelli v. United Booking Offices, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 227 Fed. 165, it was held that booking performances for a theatrical circuit, which requires them to pass from state to state, taking with them paraphernalia and stage properties, constitutes interstate commerce.

The leasing of property, as of machinery to be used by manufacturers, may be interstate commerce.

Validity of state statutes—In general.—So far as this Act manifests a purpose to regulate the field over which Congress has paramount authority, the right of the state to exercise its police power in the same field ceases to exist, no matter whether the particular act of Congress covers it entirely or not. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Foster, (1916) 224 Mass. 192, 113 N. E. 192.

Demurrage.—Demurrage charges are not within the jurisdiction of state authorities. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Rock County Sugar Co., (1916) 162 Wis. 374, 382, 156 N. W. 607, 610.

Furnishing cars.—The validity of a state statute requiring a carrier to furnish suitable cars, upon reasonable notice, and to make transportation with "reasonable dispatch" is not affected by the federal statute, since such state regulation amounts to no more than a declaration of pre-existing law. Carr v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 173 Ia. 444, 155 N. W. 840.

Vol. III, p. 816, sec. 3.

Preference between localities.—The power of Congress and of the Interstate Commerce Commission to prevent interstate carriers from practicing discrimination against a particular locality is not confined to those whose rails enter it. "Localities require protection as much from combination of connecting carriers as from single carriers whose rails reach them." St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 245 U. S. 136, 38 S. Ct. 49, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (W. D. Ky. 1916) 234 Fed. 668.

Switching facilities and service—In general.—A joint switching operation between two railroads over terminals used, managed and in large part owned in common, is not essentially a reciprocal switching arrangement constituting a facility for the interchange of traffic between the lines of the railroads interested, within the meaning of this section. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1916) 242 U. S. 60, 37 S. Ct. 61, reversing (M. D. Tenn. 1915) 227 Fed. 258.

Limitation of action.—In an action for unlawful discrimination in the matter of switch connections, the right of action does not begin with the demand; the offense is complete with the refusal of the demand when the statute of limitations begins to run. Langhill v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 254 Pa. St. 119, 98 Atl. 873.

Construction of private siding.—Lien for cost.—Where an interstate railroad company constructs for a shipper, upon credit, a commercial siding upon the latter's land and recovers a judgment against him for the unpaid cost thereof, such judgment is not entitled to priority in lien or distribution of proceeds of a foreclosure sale to mortgages given and duly recorded long before the siding was constructed. New York Guaranty Trust Co. v. Newark Meadows Imp. Co., (1915) 84 N. J. Eq. 495, 94 Atl. 589.

Vol. III, p. 833, sec. 8.

Damages for overcharge.—All the damages that properly can be attributed to a carrier's overcharge, whether it be the keeping of the shipper out of its money, or the damage to its business following as a remoter result of the same cause, must be deemed to have been included in an award by the Interstate Commerce Commission of a sum of money to a shipper as reparation for unreasonable rates, pursuant to the provisions of sections 8, 9, 13, which contemplate the recovery of all damages sustained through violations of the Act, either before the commission or in the courts, requiring, however, an election between the two methods of procedure; and a satisfaction of the commission's award precludes any recovery in a subsequent action in a state court for any damages arising out of such overcharge. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio Valley Tie Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 298, 37 S. Ct. 120, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 305, reversing (1914) 161 Ky. 212, 170 S. W. 633.

Vol. III, p. 833, sec. 9.

Exclusiveness of remedies.—This section and the preceding section 8 do not completely express the will of Congress as respects the injuries for which redress may be had under the Act, or the modes in which it may be obtained, for section 22 contains this important provision: "Nothing in the act contained shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies." The three sections, if broadly construed, are not altogether harmonious, and yet it evidently is intended that all shall be operative. Only by reading them together and in connection with the Act as a whole can the real purpose of each be seen. They often have been considered and what they mean has become pretty well settled, and it is clear that the modes of redress provided are not exclusive. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sonman Shaft Coal Co., (1916)

242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188, affirming (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746.

Preliminary investigation by commission—In general.—This section deals with the redress of injuries resulting from violations of the Act and, generally speaking, gives the person injured a right either to make complaint to the Interstate Commerce Commission or to bring an action for damages in a federal court, but not to do both. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sonman Shaft Coal Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188, affirming (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746.

Excess payments for shipments.—Jurisdiction of a suit by a shipper to recover amounts paid for shipments over an interstate route between two points, both within the state, in excess of what would have been payable under the state law if the shipments had been made over an intrastate route, may not be assumed in advance of a determination by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the administrative question as to the reasonableness of the carrier's practice, because of the grades of the two lines, in routing west-bound shipments over the longer interstate route, and east-bound shipments over the shorter intrastate route. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Solum, (1918) 247 U. S. —, 38 S. Ct. 550, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Unequal distribution of cars.—Claims for damages arising out of the application, in interstate commerce, of rules for distributing cars in times of shortage, call for the administrative authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission as a condition precedent to action in the courts for damages where the rule is assailed as unjustly discriminatory. But where the assault is not against the rule, but against its unequal and discriminatory application, no administrative question is presented and the claim may be prosecuted in either a federal or a state court without any precedent action by the commission. Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1913) 230 U. S. 304, 33 S. Ct. 938, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1494, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 929, 106 C. C. A. 269; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Puritan Coal Min. Co., (1915) 237 U. S. 121, 35 S. Ct. 484, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 867, affirming (1912) 237 Pa. St. 420, 85 Atl. 426, Ann. Cas. 1914B 37; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mulberry Hill Coal Co., (1915) 238 U. S. 276, 35 S. Ct. 760, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1306, affirming (1912) 257 Ill. 80, 100 N. E. 151; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sonman Shaft Coal Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188, affirming (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746.

Jurisdiction of state courts—In general.—The Interstate Commerce Act does not deprive the state courts of their common-law jurisdiction. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sonman Shaft Coal Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188, affirming (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio Val. Tie Co., (1914) 161 Ky. 212, 170 S. W. 633.

In determining the question of the jurisdiction of federal and state courts, the distinction to be observed is that, in actions brought for violation or enforcement of the provisions of the federal statutes relating to interstate commerce, the federal courts and the Interstate Commerce Commission have exclusive jurisdiction, but actions at law brought independently of the federal statutes for some wrong done, where the federal statutes come incidentally into operation by reason of some regulatory provision contained therein, are cognizable by the state tribunals. Kells Mill, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 89 N. J. L. 490, 98 Atl. 309.

It appears to be regarded as a settled principle of construction in connection with the Interstate Commerce Act that in actions involving unjust discrimination where an administrative rule is attacked as unfair or discriminatory, a question is raised which calls for the exercise of the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission; but if the action is based upon a violation or discriminatory enforcement of the carrier's own rule, no administrative question is involved and such an action, although brought against an interstate carrier for damages arising in interstate commerce, may be prosecuted either in the state or federal courts. Langhill v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 254 Pa. St. 119, 98 Atl. 873.

Failure to furnish cars.—A state court has jurisdiction without previous action by the Interstate Commerce Commission of a suit by a coal mining company against an interstate carrier to recover the damages arising in interstate commerce out of the latter's failure to furnish such company with the number of coal cars to which it claims to be entitled under the carrier's own rule for car distribution, since, the rule itself not being attacked, there was no administrative question involved. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Stineman Coal Min. Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 298, 37 S. Ct. 118, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 316, reversing (1913) 241 Pa. St. 509, 88 Atl. 761.

The carrier's defense at the trial of a suit brought by a shipper to recover the damages arising in interstate commerce out of the carrier's failure to furnish such shipper with the cars to which it claimed to be entitled under the carrier's own rule for car distribution, that the rule invoked by the shipper was discriminatory, and therefore not an appropriate test of the shipper's right or the carrier's duty, did not oust the state court of jurisdiction, where the administrative question thus presented was not then an open one, such rule having theretofore been found by the Interstate Commerce Commission, upon complaint of other shippers, to be unjustly discriminatory. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Stineman Coal Min. Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 298, 37 S. Ct. 118, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 316, reversing (1913) 241 Pa. St. 509, 88 Atl. 761.

No recovery may be had in a suit brought in a state court by a shipper to recover damages arising in interstate commerce out of the carrier's failure to furnish a shipper with the cars to which it claimed to be entitled under the carrier's own rule for car distribution, where, before the trial, though after the period covered by the suit, the Interstate Commerce Commission, upon complaint of other shippers and after a full hearing, had found that such rule was unjustly discriminatory, and had directed the carrier to give no further effect to it, and, recognizing that shippers who had been injured through its operation in the past were entitled to reparation, had proceeded to award reparation to such shippers as appeared and adequately proved their injury and the amount of damages sustained, the commission's report making it plain that the finding was not based upon any temporary condition, but upon what inhered in the rule, and therefore was true from the time of its adoption. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Stineman Coal Min. Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 298, 37 S. Ct. 118, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 316, reversing (1913) 241 Pa. St. 509, 88 Atl. 761.

Limitation of actions.—To the same effect as the original note see Altantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Virginia Mfg. Co., (1916) 119 Va. 5, 89 S. E. 103.

Set-off.—A shipper, having a money demand against an interstate carrier for damages, cannot offset the amount of a freight bill which he owes the carrier upon a shipment of merchandise. Illinois Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Hooper, (S. D. Ia. 1916) 233 Fed. 135; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. am S. Stein Co., (D. C. Neb. 1915) 233 Fed. 716.

Vol. III, p. 838, sec. 12.

Scope of examination.—The Interstate Commerce Commission may inquire into an attempt by interstate carriers to influence legislation or mold public opinion when such inquiry is incidental to the amount of expenditures and the manner of their charge on the books of the carriers, in an investigation instituted by it in pursuance of a resolution of the United States Senate, directing it to make an investigation as to supposed political activities and efforts to suppress competition on the part of such carriers. Smith v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1917) 245 U. S. 33, 47, 38 S. Ct. 30, 62

U. S. (L. ed.) —; Jones v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1917) 245 U. S. 48, 38 S. Ct. 34, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Mandamus to compel commission to act.—Error on the part of the Interstate Commerce Commission in declaring that a cause is not within its jurisdiction may be corrected by the courts on petition for mandamus, where such erroneous decision cannot be reviewed on appeal or writ of error. U. S. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1918) 246 U. S. 638, 38 S. Ct. 408, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1914) 42 App. Cas. (D. C.) 514.

Vol. III, p. 844, sec. 16.

What orders will be enforced — reparation order.—In Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Darnell-Taenzer Co., (1918) 245 U. S. 531, 38 S. Ct. 531, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, the issues and decision reached as stated by the court were as follows: "This is a suit brought by the defendants in error to recover reparation from the railroads for charging a rate on hardwood lumber, alleged to be excessive. The Interstate Commerce Commission had found the rate to be excessive and had made an order for reduction from 85 to 75 cents, which was obeyed, and also one for reparation to the extent of the excess, which was not obeyed. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 668. A demurrer to the declaration was sustained by the circuit court on the ground that it was not alleged that the plaintiffs had paid the excessive rates or that they were damaged thereby. 190 Fed. 659. The declaration was amended, but at the trial the judge directed a verdict for the defendants, presumably on the ground argued here, that it did not appear that the plaintiffs were damaged. The judgment was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. 137 C. C. A. 460, 221 Fed. 890. At a new trial the jury were instructed that if they found the rate charged unreasonable and that prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission reasonable, they should find for the plaintiffs in accordance with the Commission's award. The jury found for the plaintiffs and this judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 143 C. C. A. 663, 229 Fed. 1022.

"The only question before us is that at which we have hinted: whether the fact that the plaintiffs were able to pass on the damage that they sustained in the first instance by paying the unreasonable charge, and to collect that amount from the purchasers, prevents their recovering the overpayment from the carriers. The answer is not difficult. The general tendency of the law, in regard to damages, at least, is not to go beyond the first step. As it does not attribute remote consequences to a defendant, so it holds him liable if proximately the plaintiff has suffered a loss. The plaintiffs suffered losses to the amount of the verdict when they paid. Their claim accrued at once in the theory of the law, and it does not inquire into later events. . . .

"An objection is taken to the jurisdiction of this court upon writ of error. An application is made for a certiorari in case the objection is held good, and as we should grant the latter writ in that event, the question has no importance here except as a precedent. We are inclined to take the course followed sub silentio in Mills v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., and to treat cases brought under § 16 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, which authorizes the joinder of all plaintiffs and all defendants, as standing on a peculiar ground."

Vol. III, p. 851, sec. 22.

Reservation of existing remedies—In general.—The clause in this section reserving existing common-law or statutory remedies cannot be construed as continuing in shippers a common-law right, the continued existence of which would be absolutely inconsistent with the provisions of this Act. In other words, the Act cannot be held to destroy itself. The clause is concerned alone with rights recognized in or duties imposed by the Act, and the manifest purpose of the provision in question was to make plain the intention that any specific remedy given by the Act should be regarded as cumulative, when other appropriate common-law or statutory remedies existed for the redress of the particular grievance or wrong dealt with in the Act. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sonman Shaft Coal Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188, affirming (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746.

Failure to furnish cars.—The proviso to this section permits a state court to take jurisdiction of an action for damages based on a rule of a carrier which though fair on its face has been unequally applied to the plaintiff's damage, as where the carrier violates a rule to furnish cars to shippers on an equal pro rata basis. So the state court may take jurisdiction if the action for damages is based on a breach of common-law duty of the carrier to furnish cars. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Puritan Coal Min. Co., (1915) 237 U. S. 121, 35 S. Ct. 484, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 867, affirming (1912) 237 Pa. St. 420, 85 Atl. 426, Ann. Cas. 1914B 37; Eastern R. Co. of New Mexico v. Littlefield, (1915) 237 U. S. 140, 35 S. Ct. 489, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 878; Sonman Shaft Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746, affirmed (1916) 242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188.

Recovery of overcharges.—A common-law action may be maintained in a state court by a shipper against an interstate carrier to recover overcharges, where the tariffs which should be controlling have been duly published and filed and there is no question of the reasonableness of the rates. Wolverine Brass Work v. Southern Pac. Co., (1915) 187 Mich. 393, 153 N. W. 778.

Suits by interstate carriers may be instituted in state courts to recover the difference between the lawful charge for service as shown by published tariffs under the Commerce Act and the amount actually paid for such service. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Talge Mahogany Co., (Ind. 1916) 112 N. E. 890; Coad v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1915) 171 Ia. 747, 154 N. W. 396.

Repairing cars.—In Rock Milling, etc., Co. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 158 Pac. 859, 98 Kan. 478, following the principle laid down in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Puritan Coal Min. Co., (1915) 237 U. S. 121, 35 S. Ct. 484, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 867, it was held that a state court has jurisdiction in actions to recover the amounts due shippers of interstate freight, for repairing cars to put them in condition for holding the shipment, where the maximum charge for such repairs is fixed by the tariff on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Failure safely to transport and deliver property.—A common-law action for damages may be sustained by the shipper against the carrier in certain instances for damages sustained in an interstate shipment of property. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Milner, (1915) 62 Ind. App. 208, 110 N. E. 756.

Attorney's fee.—Where an attorney's fee is allowed by the District Court for services rendered in that court, such fee does not cover services to be rendered in appellate proceedings. Upon finally prevailing in the Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court, the District Court has the power to allow a reasonable fee for services rendered in those courts. Mills v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 226 Fed. 812.

The allowance of an attorney's fee for services before the Interstate Commerce Commission was held to be error, in Meeker v. Lehigh Val., etc., Co., (1915) 236 U. S. 412, 35 S. Ct. 328, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 644, Ann. Cas. 1916B 691, and in Mills v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., (1915) 238 U. S. 473, 35 S. Ct. 888, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1414. See also Mills v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 226 Fed. 812.

Vol. X, p. 171, sec. 1.

Nature and purpose.—"The statute evidently aims to prohibit, not only discrimination as between shippers, but departure from tariff rates, irrespective of its actual discriminatory effect." Vandalia

R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 713, 141 C. C. A. 469.

This statute is not necessarily limited only to relations, agencies or employment or of delegated authority between carriers and others, individual or corporate, which have a formal or express contractual basis. The statute directs that, in construing and enforcing its provisions, the act, omission or failure of any officer, agent or other person acting for or employed by any common carrier or shipper, acting within the scope of his employment, shall be deemed to be the act of such common carrier as well as of the person. This may have the effect of defining the limitations of imputed responsibility. That is to say, the law does not contemplate that such responsibility arises always from the mere fact of any agency, no matter what its scope may be. For example, if a locomotive engineer or conductor should pay to a shipper a refund in respect of a shipment, the law might not impute his act to the corporation, as it would if the payment were made by a traffic manager or a freight solicitor. But under the law, averment and proof would be permissible to show that he in fact acted for his carrier principal. It is clear that certain agents or employees of a carrier have duties within whose scope the payment of rebates, if lawful, would naturally fall. The section intends that the acts of such agents, when done, shall, as matter of law, be deemed to be the act of the carrier, and to dispense with further proof. But the Act does not and cannot intend that instances where the relation was constituted for no other purpose and with no wider scope than the commission of the particular act complained of should be beyond reach. In such cases, naturally, the indictment must contain either the appropriate general averment, or facts from which the inference may be drawn. U. S. v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ill. 1915) 234 Fed. 178.

Venue.—By the amendment of 1906 the Act to regulate commerce was strengthened by the provisions making it unlawful for any carrier which has not filed its rates to transport passengers or property in interstate commerce, and by addition of the penalty of imprisonment for individuals. Only by virtue of the present enactment can a prosecution against a carrier for transporting goods without first having filed its schedule of rates be maintained. Heretofore the Act made failure to file rates with the commission at Washington an offense, but did not provide that transportation without filing rates should also be an offense. Under the old law, therefore, it was decided that the prosecution for failure to file could be brought only in the District of Columbia, where the office of the commission is situated. By the amendment, however, the prosecution for transportation when rates have not been filed may be brought in any district through which the transportation passes. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 267, 92 C. C. A. 331; U. S. v. Illinois Terminal R. Co., (S. D. Ill. 1909) 168 Fed. 546. See also U. S. v. Lombardo, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 980.

Indictment—In general.—An indictment under this section is to be construed fortius contra proferentem. The language must necessarily import the offense charged, and, if susceptible of a different interpretation, it is bad. Every fact necessary to constitute the crime must be directly and positively alleged, and nothing can be charged by implication or intendment. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 953.

Rebating by devise.—An allegation in an indictment, which charged the payment of a refund, which was a rebate on freights, where it appeared that the payment was made to the shipper by a corporation which held a majority of the stock of the two carriers, when coupled with the further allegation that such payment was knowingly made by these carriers as a rebate, was a sufficient allegation of rebating by a devise. And such allegation involved and necessarily presented, among others, the question of fact whether the corporation making the payment was acting for the two carriers. U. S. v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ill. 1915) 234 Fed. 178.

Unlawful extension of privileges.—An indictment attempting to charge an unlawful extension of privileges not specified in the tariffs filed which fails to allege that tariffs were filed; what special privileges or facilities were given; what the special arrangement as to rates consisted of; what connection such arrangement had with transportation in interstate commerce, or the time when the practices were alleged to be carried on, is void for uncertainty and particularity. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 946.

Questions for jury.—On the trial of indictments against a railroad company for granting concessions to a shipper in respect to interstate shipments in violation of this section and for failing to observe its published tariff rates with regard to demurrage charges, the questions whether defendant had made a settlement with the shipper as to such demurrage, and whether, if so, the cancellation of the charges was a valid settlement of a disputed claim or for the purpose of making a concession in violation of the law, were held to be questions of fact for the jury. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 946.

"Transportation" as including what—In general.—Congress recognized that the duty of carriers to the public included the performance of a variety of services that, according to the theory of the common law, were separable from the carrier's service as carrier, and in order to prevent overcharges and discriminations from being made under the pretext of performing such additional services, it enacted that so far as interstate carriers by rail were concerned the entire body of such services should be included together under the single term "transportation" and subjected to the provisions of the Act respecting reasonable rates and the like." Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Dettlebach, (1916) 239 U. S. 588, 36 S. Ct. 177, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 453; Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, (1916) 240 U. S. 632, 36 S. Ct. 469, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, reversing (1914) 99 S. C. 422, 83 S. E. 781.

It is apparent, from the addition to the definition of "transportation" contained in this amendment, that Congress intended and clearly succeeded in including within that term certain services which theretofore had not been embraced within it and over which Congress deemed it advisable that the Interstate Commerce Commission should have power and control. These were ventilation, refrigeration, icing, storage and handling of property transported. This power was conferred upon the commission for the avowed purpose, among others, of relieving the shipper of the task and annoyance of dealing with more than one person. These were new matters and therefore were additions to what was meant by transportation as defined in the original Act. But the addition of the word "cars" in the amendment made no addition to the definition in the original Act, because cars were already embraced within it. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. U. S., (W. D. Pa. 1915) 227 Fed. 911, affirmed (1916) 242 U. S. 208, 37 S. Ct. 95, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 251.

Warehouseman's services.—Where the bill of lading in accordance with the published regulations provided that "every service" to be performed under it, including the service of the connecting or terminal carrier, should be subject to the conditions specified, and among these an express condition governing the company's responsibility as warehouseman for property not removed within forty-eight hours after notice of arrival, such a retention of goods was a terminal service forming a part of the "transportation" in the sense of the federal Act and governed by that Act. Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, (1916) 240 U. S. 632, 36 S. Ct. 469, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, reversing (1914) 99 S. C. 422, 83 S. E. 781.

Furnishing transportation upon reasonable request—Rule stated.—This section requires railroad companies to provide and furnish transportation to shippers upon reasonable request therefor. Mensha Paper Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 55, 36 S. Ct. 501, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 885, affirming (1915) 159 Wis. 508, 149 N. W. 751.

Where coal is sold f. o. b. at the mine for transportation to purchasers in another state the movement initiated is an interstate one and the duty of a carrier to furnish cars is an interstate duty. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sonman Shaft Coal Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188, affirming (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Clark Bros. Coal Min. Co., (1915) 238 U. S. 456, 35 S. Ct. 896, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1406, reversing (1913) 241 Pa. St. 515, 88 Atl. 754.

Jurisdiction of action for failure to furnish cars.—Where damages are sought by a shipper against a carrier for failure to furnish cars and there is no administrative question involved requiring preliminary investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission, sections 8 and 9, providing for the bringing of actions for damages in the federal court, do not prevent an action in a state court by virtue of section 22, which in part provides as follows: "Nothing in this act contained shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies." Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sonman Shaft Coal Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 120, 37 S. Ct. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 188, affirming (1913) 241 Pa. St. 487, 88 Atl. 746.

Switch connections.—In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State, (Okla. 1916) 157 Pac. 1039, it was held that the last two sentences of this section conferring jurisdiction upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to require switch connections to be made with any lateral branch line of railroad or private side track, where such connection is reasonably practicable and will furnish sufficient business of an interstate character to justify the same, did not deprive the corporation commission of Oklahoma of jurisdiction to require switch connection to be made with a private side track or spur, where the business of an intrastate character was sufficient to warrant the making of such an order, under section 33, art. 9, of the state constitution, which authorizes the corporation commission, when the owner of any industry near or within a reasonable distance of any track at his own expense has constructed a switch leading from such railroad to such industry to require such railroad to furnish the switch stand and frog and other necessary material for making connection with such side track or spur under such reasonable terms, conditions and regulations, as the commission may prescribe.

Liability of railroad to caretakers of live stock riding on free pass.—A person in charge of an interstate shipment of live stock, traveling on a freight train upon a pass issued pursuant to the terms of the contract of shipment, as permitted by this section, which excepts necessary caretakers of live stock from the prohibition against the issuance of any "interstate free pass," must be regarded as a passenger for hire, to whom the carrier must respond in damages in case of his injury through the carrier's negligence, notwithstanding a stipulation in the contract purporting to release the carrier from all liability for any personal injury which he may sustain. Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Chatman, (1916) 244 U. S. 276, 37 S. Ct. 499, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1131, L. R. A. 1917F 1128, affirming (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 802, 138 C. C. A. 350.

A notice to shippers that return passes to caretakers of live stock will not be allowed is all that can be claimed for a provision in a carrier's published tariff that "free or reduced transportation shall not be issued for shippers or caretakers in charge of live-stock shipments, whether carloads or less, and such shippers or caretakers shall pay full fare returning." Such provision implies that passes will be issued by the carrier to the destination of the shipment. Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Chatman, (1916) 244 U. S. 276, 37 S. Ct. 499, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1131, L. R. A. 1917F 1128, affirming (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 222 Fed. 802, 138 C. C. A. 350.

The failure of the published tariffs of a carrier to make a separate rate, payable in money, for the carriage of a caretaker of an interstate shipment of live stock, or to state separately how much of the published rate for which the carrier is to transport the live stock and their caretaker to destination is to be treated as payment for the transportation of the stock and how much for the carriage of the caretaker, does not make the latter's presence on a freight train in charge of the shipment unlawful, so as to defeat his right to recover damages in case of injury through the carrier's negligence. Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Chatman, (1916) 244 U. S. 276, 37 S. Ct. 499, 61 S. Ct. (L. ed.) 1131, affirming (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 802, 138 C. C. A. 350.

Contents, construction and sufficiency of schedules.—This section provides that the tariffs shall plainly state the rates, etc. This statutory provision requiring simplicity in the tariffs is satisfied when the schedule is made as plain as a subject inherently complex will permit. Tariff schedules and their arrangement with reference to simplicity and precision follow the outlines prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and must meet the approval of that tribunal. Ordinarily the courts make no mistake in deferring to its expert judgment touching the best methods of complying with the statutory mandate as to plainness and lucidity in the arrangement of tariff schedules. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Theis, (1915) 96 Kan. 494, 152 Pac. 619.

Publication and filing—Necessity.—The Act requires a carrier to publish passenger as well as freight rates. "It makes no difference that section 6 as amended provides for the publication of tariff rates on the transportation of freight making no mention of passenger rates. The provision must be read and considered in connection with the entire section, when it will clearly appear that the provision for publishing and posting rates is not limited to the shipment of merchandise but by implication if not in terms includes passenger service." U. S. v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 283.

The publication and filing of tariff rates relating to the transportation of passengers from one point to another in the United States is required although the destination is reached through a foreign country. While imports from a foreign country to the United States concededly are not included in the Act to regulate commerce, commerce of a domestic origin, although transported into or through a foreign country, is unquestionably included within its provisions. U. S. v. Grand Trunk, etc., R. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 283.

Where a railroad company filed with the secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission schedules showing the mileage of the shipments and of the rates therefor, filed a copy of these schedules in its division freight office and tacked a sign in a conspicuous place at its station from which shipments originated giving notice that freight schedules applying from the station were on file in its division freight office, it was held that such schedules were valid and legal although there was no proof that copies of these schedules had ever been filed in the offices from which the freight originated or any other freight office of the company or anywhere else. Failure to post the schedules in the office from which the goods were shipped did not authorize an unlawful rate, as this is merely directory. Southern R. Co. v. Wilmont Oil Mills, (1916) 105 S. C. 51, 89 S. E. 476.

Burden of proof.—The burden is on the carrier company to prove that required publication was made, if its purpose is to charge a shipper with notice of the published rates and conditions upon which goods are received for shipment. A carrier may not disregard the provisions of the Act relating to publication of the schedules and still be entitled to every benefit that results from a proper compliance with the law. U. S. Horseshoe Co. v. American Express Co., (1915) 250 Pa. St. 527, 95 Atl. 706.

Effect of published rates—In general.—"The effect of filing schedules of rates with the Interstate Commerce Commission is to make the published rates binding upon shipper and carrier alike, thus making effectual the purpose of the Act to have but one rate, open to all alike and from which there can be no departure. Dayton Coal, etc., Co. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1915) 239 U. S. 446, 36 S. Ct. 137, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 375; Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. McFadden, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 1000.

It is clear with respect to the service governed by the federal statute, that the parties are not at liberty to alter the terms of the service as fixed by the filed regulations. Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, (1916) 240 U. S. 632, 36 S. Ct. 469, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, reversing (1914) 99 S. Ct. 422, 83 S. E. 781, and following Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, (1913) 227 U. S. 639, 33 S. Ct. 391, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 683.

Terminal services.—In Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, (1916) 240 U. S. 632, 36 S. Ct. 469, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, reversing (1914) 99 S. Ct. 422, 83 S. E. 781, it was held that inasmuch as all terminal services incident to an interstate shipment are within the federal Act, where the conditions of liability while the goods are retained after notice of arrival at their destination are stipulated in the bill of lading under the filed regulations, as a condition of responsibility as warehouseman, the conditions thus fixed are controlling, and the parties cannot substitute therefor a special agreement.

Acceptance of joint tariff rates by connecting carriers.—The practice by connecting carriers of accepting joint tariff rates without formal notice was recognized by the Interstate Commerce Commission in May, 1907, requiring the acceptance to be specifically given and certified to the commission, thus avoiding the confusion and misunderstandings which arose under the former practice. See Dayton Coal, etc., Co. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1915) 239 U. S. 446, 36 S. Ct. 137, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 375.

Payment of commission to shipper or forwarder.—A corporation engaged in forwarding or bringing goods for importers from the place of purchase in Europe to their destination in the United States, charging the importers for the transportation and such other services as it may perform, may not be allowed by a railway company a percentage upon the latter's published rates, and a salary as an inducement to ship by its line, without violating the prohibition of the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, § 6, as amended by the Act of June 29, 1906, § 2; and such allowance cannot be justified under section 15 of the earlier Act as amended by section 4 of the later Act, as being an allowance for a transportation service furnished by a shipper. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. U. S., (1916) 243 U. S. 444, 37 S. Ct. 434, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 839, affirming 222 Fed. 685.

Demurrage.—An interstate carrier may lawfully adopt a demurrage rule exacting demurrage charges on private cars detained on the carrier's tracks while still in railroad service. Swift v. Hocking Valley R. Co., (1916) 243 U. S. 281, 37 S. Ct. 287, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 722, affirming (1915) 93 Ohio St. 143, 112 N. E. 212, L. R. A. 1917E 916.

Contract of transportation—Limitation of liability.—A shipper of live stock in interstate commerce is bound by stipulations in the bill of lading, in conformity with the carrier's official tariffs, classifications, and rules duly published and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, limiting liability to an agreed value on which a reduced rate was based, and conditioning any liability upon the giving of written notice to the terminal carrier within five days after the stock was removed from the cars at destination. Erie R. Co. v. Stone, (1916) 244 U. S. 332, 37 S. Ct. 633, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1173.

Report—Findings of fact.—Formal and precise findings by the Interstate Commerce Commission are unnecessary in orders affecting railway rates, except where damages or reparation is awarded. Manufacturers R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 457, 38 S. Ct. 383, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1909 Supp., p. 268, sec. 5.

Time of filing complaint for damages.—The requirement of this section that all complaints for the recovery of damages shall be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission "within two years from the time the cause of action accrues, and not after," is not a mere statute of limitations, but is jurisdictional, and prevents consideration by the Commission of such a complaint when not filed in time. U. S. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1914) 246 U. S. 638, 38 S. Ct. 408, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1914) 42 App. Cas. (D. C.) 514.

The day when overcharges by a carrier are actually paid, not the day when the shipment was delivered, is the time when the shipper's cause of action to recover back the overcharges "accrues," within the meaning of the requirement of the Act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 590, ch. 3591), § 5, that all complaints for the recovery of damages shall be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission within two years from the time the cause of action accrues. U. S. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1918) 246 U. S. 638, 38 S. Ct. 408, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1914) 42 App. Cas. (D. C.) 514.

1909 Supp., p. 271, sec. 7.

State laws affecting keeping of records by carriers.—In State v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (1915) 96 Kan. 609, 152 Pac. 777, it was held that the provision of a state statute concerning the bringing into the state of intoxicating liquor for unlawful use, which required the carrier to file with the county clerk a statement in writing setting forth the date, name and address of the consignee, place of delivery and person to whom delivered, the kind and amount of the liquor, and that the county clerk shall permit all persons so desiring to inspect the statements, was not in violation of the provision of this section that "it shall be unlawful for such carriers to keep any other accounts, records, or memoranda than those prescribed or approved by the commission." The ground of this decision was that there could be no conflict between the provisions of the state law and the Interstate Commerce Act, since the commodity involved in the transaction was not a legitimate subject of interstate commerce, the Webb-Kenyon Act (see 1914 Supp., Fed. Stat. Annot., p. 208), to which the state statute in question was complementary, having divested it of its interstate character.

1909 Supp., p. 273, sec. 7, "Par. 7." [Carmack amendment.]

I. PURPOSE AND DOMINATING FEATURES OF AMENDMENT

The aim and purpose of the Carmack amendment was to establish unity of responsibility. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 190, 36 S. Ct. 541, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 948. See to the same effect, New York, etc., R. Co. v. Peninsula Produce Exch., (1916) 240 U. S. 34, 36 S. Ct. 230, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 511; Hudson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Minn. 1915) 226 Fed. 38.

The Carmack amendment directs a carrier receiving property for interstate transportation to issue a through bill of lading therefor, although the place of destination is on the line of another carrier; subjects the receiver carrier to liability for any injury to the property caused by it or any other carrier in the course of the transportation, and requires a connecting carrier on whose line the property is injured to reimburse the receiving carrier where the latter is made to pay for such injury. Thus, under the operation of the amendment, the connecting carrier becomes the agent of the receiving carrier for the purpose of completing the transportation and delivering the property. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Wall, (1916) 241 U. S. 87, 36 S. Ct. 493, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 905, reversing on other grounds, (1914) 50 Mont. 122, 145 Pac. 291.

The purpose of the amendment was to do away with the difficulties shippers had encountered in seeking to recover against carriers for damages carried over more than one line of railroad. The obstacles met by the shipper in attempting to locate responsibility for damages to property shipped over different lines of railroad were almost inseparable, and frequently the shipment was not only over several lines but for long distances and in several different states. To afford a remedy for such a condition Congress gave the shipper the right to institute an action against the carrier receiving his property for an interstate shipment, and to recover damages occurring anywhere in the course of the transportation, leaving it to the carrier receiving the property to recover from the carrier on whose line or lines the damage or injury occurred. Looney v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (1916) 271 Ill. 538, 111 N. E. 509.

II. EFFECT ON STATE LAWS

In general.—By the Carmack amendment, Congress has legislated directly upon the carrier's liability for loss of and damage to interstate shipments, and this and other federal legislation on the subject of interstate commerce is supreme and exclusive, and supercedes all state laws. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Harold, (1916) 241 U. S. 371, 36 S. Ct. 665, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1050; Michelson v. Judson Freight Forwarding Co., (1915) 268 Ill. 546, 109 N. E. 281; Miller v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 97 Kan. 782, 156 Pac. 780; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Foster, (1916) 224 Mass. 365, 113 N. E. 192; Washington Horse Exchange v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (N. C. 1916) 87 S. E. 941; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Rocky County Sugar Co., (1916) 162 Wis. 374, 156 N. W. 607.

Construction of proviso of amendment.—The proviso "that nothing in this section shall deprive any holder of such receipt or bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under existing law" is construed to relate to existing federal law and not to any state law. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Akard, (Okla. 1916) 159 Pac. 344.

State laws affecting limitation of liability.—State laws or policy nullifying contracts limiting the liability of a carrier for loss or damage to the agreed or declared value upon which the rate was based are superseded so far as interstate shipments are concerned by the Carmack amendment which furnishes the exclusive rule on the subject of the liability of a carrier under contracts for interstate shipment, and the state courts are bound by the federal decisions in construing the same. Washington Horse Exch. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1916) 171 N. C. 65, 87 S. E. 941.

In an action in damages upon a contract for an interstate shipment of live stock, a provision of a state constitution [Okla.] that "any provision of any contract or agreement, express or implied, stipulating for notice or demand other than such as may be provided by law, as a condition precedent to establish any claim, demand or liability, shall be null and void" was held to be without force, being abrogated by the Carmack amendment. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wynn, (Okla. 1916) 153 Pac. 1156.

III. SHIPMENTS AFFECTED

Foreign shipments.—Congress did not, by the Carmack amendment, extend the rule to make the domestic carrier liable for loss occasioned by the negligence of a foreign carrier and for transportation to foreign countries of commerce but only for goods received "for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state," meaning states and territories within the United States. Aldrich v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1916) 104 S. C. 364, 89 S. E. 315.

IV. RECEIPT OR BILL OF LADING

While the statute expressly requires a common carrier to issue a receipt or bill of lading for goods accepted for transportation from one state into another, it is not necessary to the right of the shipper to recover for loss or damage to the shipment that it do so. Barrett v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 29 Idaho 139, 157 Pac. 1016.

Under this Act and the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission respecting tariffs and uniform bills of lading, when the delivery to the carrier is complete though no bill of lading for the particular shipment was issued, the rights and liabilities of the parties are regulated by the uniform bill of lading so far as applicable. Standard Combed Thread Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1915) 88 N. J. L. 257, 95 Atl. 1002.

Interpretation of bill of lading.—A bill of lading is a contract and within the rule that the laws in force at the time and place of the making of a contract, and which affects its validity, performance and enforcement, enter into and form a part of it, as if they were expressly referred to or incorporated in its terms. It follows that an interstate bill of lading should be interpreted in the light of the Carmack amendment. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Wall, (1916) 241 U. S. 87, 36 S. Ct. 493, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 905, reversing on other grounds (1914) 50 Mont. 122, 145 Pac. 291.

The proper construction of a bill of lading is a question for the federal courts. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 190, 36 S. Ct. 541, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 948, affirming (1914) 15 Ga. App. 142, 82 S. E. 784.

In Cincinnati, etc., R. v. Rankin, (1916) 241 U. S. 319, 36 S. Ct. 555, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1022, the court said: "We cannot assent to the theory apparently adopted below that the interpretation and effect of a bill of lading issued by a railroad in connection with an interstate shipment present no federal question unless there is affirmative proof showing actual compliance with the Interstate Commerce Act. It cannot be assumed, merely because the contrary has not been established by proof, that an interstate carrier is conducting its affairs in violation of law. Such a carrier must comply with strict requirements of the federal statutes or become subject to heavy penalties, and in respect of transactions in the ordinary course of business it is entitled to the presumption of right conduct. . . . The law will presume that all things are rightly done, unless the circumstances of the case overturn this presumption."

Power of connecting carrier to engraff conditions on shipper's contract with initial carrier.—The terms of the original bill of lading for an interstate shipment which governs the entire transportation, cannot be altered by a second bill of lading issued by a connecting carrier, since the latter is already bound to transport the shipment at the rate and upon the terms named in the original bill of lading, and the acceptance by the shipper of the second bill is therefore without consideration and was void. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, (1916) 244 U. S. 383, 37 S. Ct. 617, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1213, affirming (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 169 S. W. 1035.

V. WHO IS INITIAL CARRIER

Electric street railway.—In Ross v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1914) 112 Me. 63, 90 Atl. 711, the facts were as follows: Potatoes were shipped from a station on the line of the Bangor Railway and Electric Company, an electric railroad corporation, consigned to the shipper's order at Bangor. They were intended by the shipper for through and continuance transportation to Hoboken, New Jersey. At Bangor the cars were received by the defendant and forwarded. There was a through tariff rate from the point of shipment to Hoboken, and when the defendant received the car it advanced to the Bangor Railway and Electric Company its proportion of the through tariff rate. The defendant issued through bills of lading to Hoboken and collected of the shipper "heater charges" which were intended to cover heating the cars from Bangor to Hoboken. The potatoes were frozen while in transit, but not on the defendant's line. It was held that the receipt by the Bangor Railway and Electric Company of its proportion of the through tariff charges was some evidence of "a common control, management or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment" as defined in the Interstate Commerce Act, so as to bring that corporation within the scope of the Act to regulate commerce as amended by the Carmack amendment, and make it liable, as initial carrier, for the defaults of connecting carriers, but that the defendant, having assumed the obligation of heating after the potatoes had left the possession of the Bangor Railway and Electric Company, was to be deemed the initial carrier as to defaults in heating during the course of transportation. See further Ross v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1915) 114 Me. 287, 96 Atl. 223, wherein this decision was held to be the law of the case as to the defendant railroad in respect to the contract to carry, in an action for the freezing of carloads of potatoes and as to claims asserted under the Carmack amendment.

Switching railway.—A common carrier which received goods for interstate shipment is the initial carrier, although it only switches the car in which they are loaded to the lines of another common carrier to be transported out of the state. Barrett v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 29 Idaho 139, 157 Pac. 1016.

VI. LIABILITY OF INITIAL CARRIER

1. In General

The Carmack amendment does not use the term "initial carrier" nor "primary carrier;" but the words employed refer to the initial carrier by designating such carrier as the one receiving property for an interstate shipment. The carrier made liable by the amendment has been treated by the courts continually as the initial or first carrier receiving the goods. Since the requirement that the carrier receiving property for a continuous interstate shipment shall issue a receipt or bill of lading is confined to the initial carrier and as there is no requirement that any connecting carrier shall issue a receipt or bill of lading it was evidently contemplated that the liability should attach to the first carrier only. Looney v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (1916) 271 Ill. 538, 111 N. E. 509.

2. Period of Liability

Under the Carmack amendment a common carrier which receives goods for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another, if it routes the consignment over the line of another common carrier, makes the latter its agent and is liable to the owner of the goods, or his assignors, for any damage which results from negligence or carelessness in transportation, whether the damage occurs upon its own line or upon that of the carrier to which it delivers the consignment. But an initial carrier is not liable for damage to goods occurring on lines not its own, and over which they were routed without notice to it. The obligation of such a carrier ceases when the goods reach the destination, in good condition, to which they were originally consigned. Barrett v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 29 Idaho 139, 157 Pac. 1016.

3. Nature of Liability

In Cincinnati & Tex. Pac. Ry. v. Rankin, (1916) 241 U. S. 319, 36 S. Ct. 555, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1022, L. R. A. 1917A 265, counsel conceded the liability of a common carrier under the long recognized common-law rule, not only for negligence but also as an insurer, but insisted that the Carmack amendment had changed this rule to the extent that in Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, (1913) 226 U. S. 491, 33 S. Ct. 148, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 314, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 257, the amendment was held to restrict a carrier's liability to loss "caused by it" and that consequently the trial court erred when it charged: "In this case the carrier is held to the highest degree of care for the safe transportation of the animals." The court said: "Construing the Carmack amendment, was said through Mr. Justice Lurton in the case cited, 226 U. S. pp. 506-507: 'The liability thus imposed is limited to any loss, injury or damage caused by it or a succeeding carrier to whom the property may be delivered, and plainly implies a liability for some default in its common law duty as a common carrier.' Properly understood, neither this nor any other of our opinions holds that this amendment has changed the common law doctrine theretofore approved by us in respect of a carrier's liability for loss occurring on its own line."

The initial carrier is required to issue a receipt or bill of lading, with the effect of making such contract the measure of liability between the parties. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Texas Packing Co., (1916) 244 U. S. 31, 37 S. Ct. 487, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 970.

While the carrier is made liable to the shipper for loss, damage or injury caused by it, and no contract may relieve it does not attempt to change the common-law rule as to the effect of an act of God in excusing the carrier where loss results proximately therefrom. Where proof is given that goods are damaged in the hands of the carrier, the burden is upon him to show that the damage arose from some cause for which he was not liable. But where the carrier shows that the loss was occasioned by the act of God he has done all that is required. If the shipper then claims that the carrier's negligence also directly contributed to the negligence he must show that fact. Barnet v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1918) 222 N. Y. 195, 118 N. E. 625, reversing (1915) 167 App. Div. 738, 153 N. Y. S. 374.

4. Liability for Delay

Delay in transportation.—The Carmack amendment imposes on the "initial carrier" liability for delay occurring on the line of its connection without physical damage to the property. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Peninsula Produce Exch., (1916) 240 U. S. 34, 36 S. Ct. 230, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 511, affirming (1914) 122 Md. 215, 89 Atl. 433, wherein the court said: "The words 'any loss, damage, or injury to such property' caused by the initial carrier or by any connecting carrier are comprehensive enough to embrace all damages resulting from any failure to discharge a carrier's duty with respect to any part of the transportation to the agreed destination. It is not necessary, nor is it natural in view of the general purpose of the statute, to take the words 'to the property' as limiting the word 'damage' as well as the word 'injury' and thus as rendering the former wholly superfluous. It is said that there is a different responsibility on the part of the carrier with respect to delay from that which exists where there is a failure to carry safely. But the difference is with respect to the measure of the carrier's obligation; the duty to transport with reasonable despatch is none the less an integral part of the normal undertaking of the carrier. And we can gather no intent to unify only a portion of the carrier's responsibility. Further, it is urged, that the amendment provides that the initial carrier may recover from the connecting carrier 'on whose line the loss, damage, or injury shall have been sustained the amount of such loss, damage, or injury as it may be required to pay to the owners of such property,' and this, it is said, shows that the 'loss, damage, or injury' described is that which may be localized as having occurred on the line of one of the carriers and therefore should be limited to physical loss or injury. But we find no difficulty in this, as the damages required to be paid by the initial carrier are manifestly regarded as resulting from some breach of duty, and the purpose is simply to provide for a recovery against the connecting carrier if the latter, as to its part of the transportation, is found to be guilty of that breach. The view we have expressed finds support in the explicit terms of the act of January 20, 1914, c. 11, 38 Stat. 278 [amending Judicial Code, sec. 28; see JUDICIARY], which provides 'that no suit brought in any state court of competent jurisdiction against a railroad company . . . to recover damages for delay, loss of, or injury to property received for transportation by such common carrier under section twenty of the Act to regulate commerce . . . shall be removed to any court of the United States where the matter in controversy does not exceed, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of $3,000.' If the language of sec. 20 can be regarded as ambiguous, this legislative interpretation of it as conferring a right of action for delay, as well as for loss or injury to the property in the course of transportation is entitled to great weight."

In Hudson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Minn. 1915) 226 Fed. 38, it appeared that the defendant railway company in the shipments involved was the intermediate common carrier in interstate commerce, that the cause of action rested upon delay by the common carriers, or some of them. The evidence showed that the delay did not occur on the line of the intermediate carrier. It was held that such carrier could not be sued for the delay, regardless of whether it had or had not issued a bill of lading.

5. Wrongful Delivery or Diversion

The aim and purpose of the Carmack amendment was to establish unity of responsibility, and the words of the statute are comprehensive enough to embrace responsibility for all losses resulting from any failure to discharge a carrier's duty, as to any part of the agreed transportation, which, as defined in the federal Act, includes a wrongful delivery. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 190, 36 S. Ct. 541, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 948, affirming (1914) 15 Ga. App. 142, 82 S. E. 784.

6. Subrogation to Defenses of Connecting Carrier

Although the initial carrier may be by rail, if any connecting company along the designated or usual route of shipment, there being no route designated, is a carrier by water, and the loss or injury occurs by the wrong of such company, the initial carrier may avail itself of the federal legislation applicable to transportation companies of that character, limiting the quantum of recovery in certain instances and at times relieving of responsibility altogether; the principle being that, in cases coming within the effects of the law, the initial carrier, so far as the shipper is concerned, is held to have contracted for through transportation, and is liable for the default of itself or any connecting carrier, and may avail itself of any defenses or of limitations of liability open to the carrier causing the loss. Brinson v. Norfolk Southern R. Co., (1915) 169 N. C. 425, 86 S. E. 371, wherein, in an action brought by the shipper against the initial carrier for the loss of a shipment by the connecting carrier, in a collision on the high seas, it was held that the burden of proof resting upon the defendant to show that the connecting carrier supplied a vessel that was properly manned, equipped and seaworthy was not sustained, so as to make available R. S. sec. 4283 (see the title LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNER'S LIABILITY) limiting the liability to the extent of the owner's interest.

VII. LIABILITY OF CONNECTING CARRIER

Rule stated.—The connecting carrier is not relieved from liability by the Carmack amendment, but the bill of lading required to be issued by the initial carrier upon an interstate shipment governs the entire transportation and thus fixes the obligations of all participating carriers to the extent that the terms of the bill of lading are applicable and valid. "The liability of any carrier in the route over which the articles were routed, for loss or damage, is that imposed by the act as measured by the original contract of shipment so far as it is valid under the act." Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 190, 36 S. Ct. 541, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 948, affirming (1914) 15 Ga. App. 142, 82 S. E. 784.

Nature of liability.—There is nothing in the Act of Congress known as the Hepburn Act, as amended by the Carmack amendment, which will prohibit a shipper of goods in interstate commerce over the lines of several carriers from bringing suit, under the provisions of section 2752 of the Georgia Civil Code of 1910, against the last carrier who received the goods as "in good order" for damages sustained on account of loss of or damage to the goods. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Thomasville Live Stock Co., (1913) 13 Ga. App. 102, 78 S. E. 1019. The decision in this case was based upon the proviso of the Carmack amendment that "nothing in this section shall deprive any holder of such receipt or bill of lading of any remedy or right of action . . . he has under existing law." In deciding the case, the court proceeded upon the theory that the proviso preserves such rights of action as that conferred by section 2752 of the Georgia Civil Code. This rule was pronounced unsound and was expressly overruled in Southern R. Co. v. Bennett, (1915) 17 Ga. App. 162, 86 S. E. 418, wherein the court ruled that rights and remedies conferred by existing state laws, where a shipment accepted by a carrier for interstate transportation has been lost, injured or damaged, were not continued in force by the proviso of the Carmack amendment. The proviso preserves only any right or remedy that the holder of the receipt or bill of lading may have had under the existing federal law at the time of his action. And the court held that a suit for damages based upon section 2752 of the Georgia Civil Code of 1910, cannot be maintained against the last of several connecting carriers, if the loss or damage to the shipment occurred in the course of interstate transportation; that under the provisions of the Carmack amendment the initial carrier alone is liable for damages to interstate shipments, and under the federal regulation of interstate commerce, which supersedes all state regulations upon the same subject, the remedy against the initial carrier is exclusive. But in Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Waxelbaum Produce Co., (Ga. App. 1916) 89 S. E. 635, this decision was in turn expressly overruled. In the latter case it was contended, upon a writ of error from the judgment of the municipal court of Macon denying a second new trial in the case, that the judgment should be reversed on the ground that the lower court had no jurisdiction under section 2752 of the Civil Code to entertain a suit against the last of several connecting carriers because under the provisions of the Carmack amendment the initial carrier alone is liable for damage to interstate shipments. The court said: "While this court in Southern R. Co. v. Bennett, (1915) 17 Ga. App. 162, 86 S. E. 418, held that in such a case the initial carrier alone could be sued, the Supreme Court of the United States in Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 190, 36 S. Ct. 541, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 948, has made a ruling to the contrary. That decision in effect reverses the ruling in the Bennett Case and upon review, the decision in the Bennett Case is expressly overruled."

VIII. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY

1. In General

But the liability imposed by the statute is the liability imposed by the common law upon a common carrier, and may be limited or qualified by special contract with the shipper, provided the limitation or qualification be just and reasonable, and does not exempt from loss or responsibility due to negligence. Donavan v. Wells, (1915) 265 Mo. 291, 177 S. W. 839; Thomas v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1915) 188 Mo. App. 22, 173 S. W. 96; Cook v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1915) 32 N. D. 340, 155 N. W. 867; St. Louis, etc.,

R. Co. v. Wynn, (Okla. 1916) 156 Pac. 346; Grice v. Oregon-Washington R., etc., Co., (1915) 78 Ore. 17, 150 Pac. 862, 152 Pac. 509.

An interstate live stock carrier cannot, by an agreement made in consideration of a reduced rate, and contained in a bill of lading issued pursuant to the Carmack amendment, in conformity with the carrier's tariffs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, limit its liability from unusual delay and detention caused by its negligence to the amount actually expended by the shipper in the purchase of food and water for his stock while so detained. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Piper, (1918) 246 U. S. 439, 38 S. Ct. 354, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1916) 90 Vt. 176, 97 Atl. 508.

2. Agreed Valuation

In general.—A carrier may under the Carmack amendment, by a fair, open, just and reasonable agreement in the receipt or bill of lading, limit the amount receivable by a shipper in case of loss or damage to an agreed value made for the purpose of obtaining the lower of two or more rates of charges proportioned to the amount of the risk, and no state statute is valid which attempts to interfere with this right. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Rankin, (1916) 241 U. S. 319, 36 S. Ct. 555, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1022; Southern R. Co. v. Bynum, (1915) 194 Ala. 190, 69 So. 820; Michelson v. Judson Freight Forwarding Co., (1915) 268 Ill. 546, 109 N. E. 281; U. S. Horse Shoe Co. v. American Express Co., (1915) 250 Pa. St. 527, 95 Atl. 706; Shay v. Union Pac. R. Co., (Utah 1915) 153 Pac. 31. The essential choice of rates must be made to appear before a carrier can successfully claim the benefit of such a limitation and relief from full liability. And as no interstate rates are lawful unless duly filed with the commission, it may become necessary for the carrier to prove its schedules in order to make out the requisite choice. Where, however, a bill of lading, signed by both parties, recites that lawful alternate rates based on specified values were offered, such recitals constitute admissions by the shipper and sufficient prima facie evidence of choice. If in such a case the shipper wishes to contradict his own admissions, the burden of proof is upon him. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Rankin, (1916) 241 U. S. 319, 36 S. Ct. 555, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1022.

Forfeiture of rights under limitation.—A carrier may forfeit his rights under a stipulation limiting his liability to an agreed valuation. Thus where a carrier has converted property intrusted to him for transportation, he will be deemed to have thereby abandoned the contract of shipment, and cannot thereafter insist on the stipulation therein that this liability shall be limited to a fixed sum, at which the goods are valued, nor insist upon the binding effect of such a stipulation, where the negligence which occasioned the loss was wanton or willful. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. C. V. Truitt Co., (1915) 17 Ga. App. 236, 86 S. E. 421.

3. Notice of Claim

In general.—It is competent for the parties to agree upon reasonable notice of claim, as for "failure to make delivery" as a condition of liability. A carrier is not necessarily bound to know whether it has delivered to the right person or according to instructions. The transactions of a railroad company are multitudinous and are carried on through numerous employees of various grades. Ordinarily the managing officers, and those responsible for the contest of claims, would be without actual knowledge of the facts of a particular transaction. To this end, it is a precaution of obvious wisdom, and in no respect repugnant to public policy, that the carrier by its contracts should require reasonable notice of all claims against it, even with respect to its own operations. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 190, 36 S. Ct. 541, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 948, affirming (1914) 15 Ga. App. 142, 82 S. E. 784.

A stipulation in a through bill of lading for an interstate shipment of peaches that the carrier issuing the bill of lading shall not be held liable for damages unless a claim for damages is reported by the consignee in writing to the terminal carrier within thirty-six hours after the consignee has been notified of the arrival of the freight at the place of delivery is valid and not unreasonable. Written notice within the time stipulated of an intention to make a claim for damages, without specifying the amount of the damages claimed, is a sufficient compliance with the stipulation. The failure to comply with the requirement of the stipulation was not excused, where the terminal carrier had a freight agent at the place of delivery in charge of the docks upon which the shipment was delivered, by virtue of the giving of verbal notice of the bad condition of the shipment to the terminal carrier's dock master, or because of the knowledge of such condition by longshoremen working on the docks. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Starbird, (1916) 243 U. S. 592, 37 S. Ct. 462, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 917, reversing (1915) 118 Ark. 485, 177 S. W. 912.

To whom given.—A stipulation contained in a bill of lading for an interstate shipment of cattle was that the shipper, as a condition precedent to his right to recover for any injury to the cattle while in transit, should give notice in writing of his claim to some officer or station agent of the initial carrier before the cattle were removed from the place of destination or mingled with other stock, is satisfied if the notice is given to an officer or station agent of a connecting agent at the place of destination, as under the operation of the Carmack amendment the connecting carrier becomes the agent of the receiving carrier. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Wall, (1916) 241 U. S. 87, 36 S. Ct. 493, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 905, reversing (1914) 50 Mont. 122, 145 Pac. 291.

Connecting carrier is entitled to benefit of contract.—A stipulation in a bill of lading in a case of interstate shipment, that, if claims for damages be not made in writing within ten days after delivery of the property, the carrier shall not be liable, is valid in the absence of any contention that the time limit is unreasonable, and the acceptance by the shipper of a bill of lading containing such provision constitutes a binding contract on his part, and if made with the initial carrier inures to the benefit of the connecting carrier. Olivit v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 88 N. J. L. 241, 96 Atl. 582.

Waiver.—A stipulation limiting the time for presenting claims is valid if reasonable and cannot be waived. Metz Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1917) 227 Mass. 307, 116 N. E. 475.

In Baldwin v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1915) 170 N. C. 12, 86 S. E. 776, it was held that stipulations in bills of lading, covering shipments of live stock, requiring written notice of the claims for damages to be given before the stock is removed from the possession of the carrier, are valid; but it was further held that the requirement that the notice shall be in writing is waived upon proof of actual knowledge of the injury. Nor in such case can the liability of the carrier be predicated upon the fact that the carrier rejected the claim for other reasons when it was presented out of time. Olivit v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 88 N. J. L. 241, 96 Atl. 582.

It has been held that the provisions of a bill of lading, requiring written notice of damage to be given to the carrier and fixing a time less than that fixed by the statute in which action shall be commenced, in order to be available as defenses, must be pleaded as such; otherwise they are deemed waived. Gilinsky v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1915) 98 Neb. 858, 154 N. W. 730.

Live stock.—In St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wynn, (Okla. 1915) 153 Pac. 1156, a provision in a contract of an interstate shipment of live stock, providing that, as a condition precedent to a recovery for any damages for delay, loss, or injury to live stock covered by the contract, the shipper will give notice in writing of the claim therefor, to such agents of the company as may be named in the contract, before such stock is removed from the place of destination and before it mingles with other stock, such notice to be served within one day after the delivery of the stock at its destination, was held to be valid.

4. Time for Bringing Suit

In Miller v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 97 Kan. 782, 156 Pac. 780, it appeared that a contract for the transportation of an interstate shipment of live stock on the customary printed form used by carriers and signed by the carrier and shipper contained a provision that no action should be maintained to recover any damages for loss or injuries arising out of the transportation unless commenced within six months from the time the loss or injuries occurred. It contained also a number of provisions by which the carrier sought to limit its liability for loss occasioned by its own negligence. The court held that, while the latter provisions against liability for negligence were against public policy and unenforceable, the contract was not void in toto, but that it should be regarded as divisible in view of its general use by interstate carriers with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that the plaintiff's failure to commence his action within six months after the loss and injury occurred barred his right to recover.

5. Termination of Limitation

The limitation of liability agreed upon in a bill of lading applies even after the termination of the carriage and while the goods are in storage pending their delivery to the consignee. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Dettlebach, (1916) 239 U. S. 588, 36 S. Ct. 177, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 453.

So likewise it has been held that the conditions of liability stipulated in the bill of lading under the filed regulations, are controlling when the goods are retained after notice of arrival at destination, and while in possession of the carrier as warehouseman under the stipulation. Southern R. Co. v. Prescott, (1916) 240 U. S. 632, 36 S. Ct. 469, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, reversing (1914) 99 S. C. 422, 83 S. E. 781.

IX. JURISDICTION OF COURTS

While the state courts have original jurisdiction of an action, civil and transitory, arising under the Carmack amendment, as held in Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Wallace, (1912) 223 U. S. 481, 32 S. Ct. 205, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 516, cited in the preceding note, such action may be removed to a court of the United States. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. American Cotton Oil Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 11, 143 C. C. A. 313.

X. JURISDICTION OF COURTS

Removal of cause from state to federal court.—A state court has jurisdiction of an action under the Carmack amendment, but the action may be removed to a federal court because of its federal nature (see 1916 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot., p. 128, Act of Jan. 20, 1914), where the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $3,000. Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1918) 245 U. S. 359, 38 S. Ct. 203, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

XI. PARTIES

Any lawful holder of a bill of lading, issued by the initial carrier pursuant to the Carmack amendment, upon receiving property for interstate transportation, may maintain an action for loss, damage or injury to such property caused by any connecting carrier to whom the goods are delivered. Carr v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 88 N. J. L. 235, 96 Atl. 588.

The words "lawful holder" cannot be said to mean only the owner of the shipment or someone shown to be duly authorized to act for him in such a way as to render any judgment recovered in the action against the carrier res judicata in any other action, although by section 8 of the earlier Act a carrier is made liable "to the person or persons injured" in consequence of any violation of the Act, since to adopt this view would permit the general purpose of the latter section to control the purpose of the amendment, which is special and definitely expressed the lawful holder of the bill of lading to be the person to whom the carrier shall be liable. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Olivet, (1916) 243 U. S. 574, 37 S. Ct. 468, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 908, affirming (1916) 88 N. J. L. 376, 96 Atl. 589.

The term "lawful holder," as used in the Act, comprehends the owner of the property transported, or the one beneficially entitled to recover for the loss or injury, and manual possession of the bill of lading is not a prerequisite to the right to sue. Aultman v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1916) 71 Fla. 276, 71 So. 283; Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Norfolk Trucker's Exchange, (1916) 118 Va. 650, 88 S. E. 318.

XII. PLEADING

In general.—The Carmack amendment supersedes the common-law rule regarding negligent delay in the transportation of live stock and its provisions may be invoked when the proof shows its applicability, though not averred in any pleading filed in the case. Karr v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1915) 76 W. Va. 526, 86 S. E. 43.

Issuance of receipt or bill of lading.—“The Carmack Amendment requires the carrier receiving property for transportation between points in different states to issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor and makes the carrier liable to the lawful holder thereof for any loss, damage or injury to such property. While there is no specific allegation in the complaint that such bill of lading or receipt was issued, as the law makes it the duty of the carrier to issue the same the presumption is that such duty was complied with.” Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1918) 245 U. S. 359, 38 S. Ct. 203, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

XIII. DAMAGE

Mental suffering.—In a shipment in interstate commerce, damage claimed for mental suffering only, on account of delay of the delivery of the shipment, cannot be recovered. Southern Express Co. v. Byers, (1916) 240 U. S. 612, 36 S. Ct. 410, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 825, reversing (1914) 165 N. C. 542, 81 S. E. 741.

Freight paid.—The recovery, as a part of the damages caused by a delay in transporting an interstate shipment of perishable freight, of the freight paid upon delivery at destination, is properly allowed, notwithstanding the prohibitions of the Interstate Commerce Act, against deviations from the filed tariffs and schedules, and against rebates and undue preferences and discriminations, especially where the bills of lading require damages to be computed upon the basis of the value of the property at the place and time of shipment. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Olivet, (1916) 243 U. S. 574, 37 S. Ct. 468, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 908, affirming (1916) 88 N. J. L. 376, 96 Atl. 589.

When the bill of lading of an interstate shipment contains a condition that the amount of any loss or damage for which the carrier is liable "shall be computed on the basis of the value of the property, being the bona fide invoice price, if any, to the consignee, including the freight charge, if prepaid, at the place and time of shipment," it is proper for the judge to instruct the jury that, if the carrier was liable, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the freight paid by him as a part of his damages. Carr v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 88 N. J. L. 235, 96 Atl. 588.

Telegraph companies.—Congress has taken possession of the field of interstate commerce by telegraph and has prescribed the rules which shall govern the transaction of such commerce. Hence a provision in a state constitution, which declares that "any provision of any contract or agreement, express or implied, stipulating for notice or demand other than such as may be provided by law, as a condition precedent to establish any claim, demand or liability, shall be null and void," does not render void a clause in a contract, for sending a telegram, which provides that the company shall not be liable for damages or statutory penalties in any case where the claim is not presented within sixty days after the message is filed with the company for transmission. Gardner v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 405, 145 C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 405, 145 C. C. A. 399. See to the same effect Western Union Tel. Co. v. Spencer Bank, (Okla. 1916) 156 Pac. 1175; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Orr, (Okla. 1916) 158 Pac. 1139.

The rules that justify common carriers of interstate commerce in limiting their liability also justify interstate carriers of telegraph messages in limiting their liability for damages caused by delay in delivering the messages. Bailey v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1916) 97 Kan. 619, 156 Pac. 716.

In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Foster, (1916) 224 Mass. 365, 113 N. E. 192, it was held that this section did not cover the local delivery by the ticker service radiating from Boston offices, to patrons in that city of each of the telegraph companies, of information bought by the telegraph companies and received in interstate commerce, but delivered in intrastate commerce.

Until the enactment of this statute classifying telegraph, telephone and cable companies as public service agencies under federal control, there was no federal Act in force with reference to contracts for the transmission of messages, and a suit for damages for the incorrect transmission of a telegram based on a contract for the dispatch of the message made prior to this enactment was governed by the law of the state. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Bassett, (1916) 111 Miss. 468, 71 So. 750.

1912 Supp., p. 112, sec. 7. [Express and sleeping car companies, etc.]

State regulation.—The power of a state to enact that four passenger trains each way, if so many are run daily, Sundays excepted, shall stop at all county-seat stations, was not taken away, though it may lead to an incidental interference with interstate trains, by this section making it the duty of carriers to make reasonable regulations affecting transportation facilities,—so long as there is no conflict between such enactment and the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, (1918) 246 U. S. 58, 38 S. Ct. 236, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming. (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 169 S. W. 385.

Limitation of liability as to telegraph messages.—This statute, classifying telegraph messages as repeated and unrepeated, expressly authorizes a telegraph company to transmit an unrepeated message and impliedly authorizes such company to limit its obligation and liability for negligence growing out of the sending of such a message. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Dant, (1914) 42 App. Cas. (D. C.) 398, Ann. Cas. 1916A 1132; Bailey v. Western Union, etc., Co., (1916) 97 Kan. 619, 156 Pac. 716; Western Union, etc., Co. v. Spencer, (Okla. 1916) 156 Pac. 1175; Western Union, etc., Co. v. Orr, (Okla. 1916) 158 Pac. 1139. See further to the same effect Boyce v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1916) 119 Va. 14, 89 S. E. 106, wherein the court held that a stipulation limiting a telegraph company's liability on an unrepeated message to the amount received for sending it was reasonable, valid and enforceable.

1912 Supp., p. 113, sec. 7.

[Classification of property, etc.]

Persons excepted from anti-pass provisions—Persons riding on engine or tender.—In Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Messina, (1916) 240 U. S. 395, 36 S. Ct. 368, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 709, reversing (1915) 109 Miss 143, 67 S. 933, the court declined to limit the anti-pass provision to the use of interstate free ticket, free pass or free transportation issued by the common carrier, but held that where a person who paid no fare was upon the tender of an engine, by permission of the engineer in charge of the train, he was within the Act. The court said: "We cannot think that if a prominent merchant or official should board a train and by assumption and an air of importance should obtain free carriage, he would escape the Act."

In Spencer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1915) 161 Wis. 474, 154 N. W. 979, the court, limiting its decision to the precise situation involved, enunciated the principle, in view of this section making it unlawful to ride free, that "if a person enters the cab of a railway locomotive for the purpose of obtaining a free ride, and there is no objection made by the engineer—in view of the law prohibiting such free passage and the place being, by common knowledge, for the exclusive use of the engine crew—such person is presumed to know that the engineer has neither actual nor apparent authority to permit him to do so, and to wilfully commit an unlawful act, and he thereby makes himself a trespasser."

Caretakers of live stock.—As this paragraph of the Act especially excepts from the anti-pass provisions of the law "necessary caretakers of live stock" and this provision is not varied or affected by subsequent amendments, a release by a caretaker of live stock to the railroads over which he was to travel from any liability for personal injuries sustained through the railroad's negligence was held to be invalid on the ground that, prior to the Hepburn Act, such caretaker would not have been a gratuitous passenger for the reason that the right to ride without special compensation was given in part consideration of the payment which was principally for other services, which made him a passenger for hire and entitled to protection as such, as incidental to the carriage of the stock under his care, and Congress, by the Hepburn Act, by reason of the special exception, has not regulated the validity of such a release to the exclusion of the law of the state. Wiley v. Grand Trunk Ry. of Canada, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 127.

Injuries received while riding on free passes—Limitation of liability.—As a general rule, a stipulation in a free pass given by a carrier to the effect that the person who accepts it assumes all risks of injury in transportation is enforceable; and as to a passenger who has accepted transportation under such a pass a carrier is liable only for injuries resulting from wantonness or wilful negligence. Wright v. Central of Georgia R. Co., (1916) 18 Ga. App. 290, 89 S. E. 457, following Charleston, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, (1914) 234 U. S. 576, 34 S. Ct. 964, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1476.

In Turman v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., (1916) 105 N. C. 287, 89 S. E. 655, it was held that the provisions of a pass which undertook to save the corporation from liability under any circumstances, whether of negligence of agents or otherwise, would not be held to include wilful and intended wrongful acts of its servants, as the allowance of such a contract would militate against good order and be against public policy.

If a contract between a railroad company and an express company provides that the latter's messenger shall render service to the railroad company, and in consideration thereof receive a sum of money and also two passes a month for use of his family, such a pass is a "free pass," in the sense intended by the Hepburn Act, and a clause printed on the pass, whereby the passenger undertakes to assume all risks, is binding on the party using it. Morris v. West Jersey, etc., R. Co., (1915) 87 N. J. L. 579, 94 Atl. 593.

Contracts for issuance of free passes.—Where an owner granted a railroad right of way through his lands for a valuable consideration expressed in the deed, and a carrier engaged in interstate commerce orally agreed that, as part of the consideration, not so expressed, it would issue to him annually for life a pass over its road, and the agreement therefor, though valid at the time, was afterward prohibited by this enactment, it was held that the carrier's failure or refusal to issue the pass, because so prohibited, would not entitle the grantor to a decree for specific performance of the oral agreement, or for rescission of the grant, neither the agreement nor the grant providing for either remedy in the event of such failure or refusal. Dorr v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 150, 88 S. E. 666, L. R. A. 1916E 622.

1912 Supp., p. 115, sec. 8.

Application under first proviso.—Whether an application by the carrier is a prerequisite to the granting of relief, may be doubted. U. S. v. Merchants', etc., Traffic Ass'n, (1916) 242 U. S. 178, 37 S. Ct. 24, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 233, reversing (N. D. Cal. 1915) 231 Fed. 292.

It is within the power or discretion of the Commission to prescribe the extent or the degree to which a common carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section. U. S. v. Merchants', etc., Traffic Ass'n, (1916) 242 U. S. 178, 37 S. Ct. 24, reversing (N. D. Cal. 1915) 231 Fed. 292.

Hearing.—The requirement of this section empowering the Commission to authorize a carrier to charge less for a longer than a shorter haul "after investigation" clearly implies that the question shall be determined upon testimony after a hearing. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (W. D. Ky. 1915) 225 Fed. 571.

Burden of proof.—Upon an application to the Commission by a carrier to be relieved from the operation of the long and short haul provision of this section, the burden of proof is plainly cast upon the applicant. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (W. D. Ky. 1915) 225 Fed. 571.

For evidence held sufficient to support an order of the Commission denying an application for relief from the operation of the long and short haul clause of this section, see Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 245 U. S. 463, 38 S. Ct. 141, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (W. D. Ky. 1915) 225 Fed. 571.

1912 Supp., p. 117, sec. 10.

State statute.—The first paragraph relates specifically to and provides for only such conduct as is the result of deliberation and intention, and does not relate to mere neglect in individual cases provided against by a state statute providing a penalty for the failure of a telegraph company to deliver a telegram "with impartiality and in good faith, and in the order of time in which they are received." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Boegli, (Ind. 1917) 115 N. E. 773.

The last paragraph is not designed especially to protect the property rights of the carrier, for the offense is made equally punishable whether committed with or without the consent or connivance of the carrier. U. S. v. Union Mfg. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 605, 36 S. Ct. 420, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 822.

Obtaining transportation at less than regular rate.—In denouncing as criminal "false billing, false classification, false weighing, false representation of the contents of the package or the substance of the property, false report of weight, false statement or other device or means" employed in order to "obtain or attempt to obtain transportation for such property at less than the regular rates established," the lawmaker regarded not merely the physical transportation of the property but the entire transportation through which consignor or consignee might seek to evade the policy of the Act to subject all interstate shipments to uniform rates of charge prescribed in published tariffs. In a case where for any reason the payment of the freight is not made prior to the delivery of the goods to the consignee but remains to be afterwards adjusted, the effort to obtain an advantage not permitted by the schedules may still be exerted through fraudulent representations influencing the adjustment of the freight, with precisely the same effect as if the representations had preceded delivery of the goods. When this is accomplished, there is a fraudulent obtaining of transportation at less than the established rate, within the meaning of the prohibition. U. S. v. Union Mfg. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 605, 36 S. Ct. 420, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 822.

Venue.—An offense against the consignee for fraud in the liquidation of the amount payable for freight at its destination should be prosecuted in the district where the goods were delivered by the carrier and not in that where they were received for transportation. U. S. v. Union Mfg. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 605, 36 S. Ct. 420, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 822.

Scope of power of commission.—In Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 219 Fed. 988, wherein the plaintiff sought by a bill in equity to annul an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the question before the court was whether the commission had the power to find discrimination against one locality in a proceeding instituted upon complaint, charging discrimination against another locality. That it had such power, basing its decision upon a related circumstance of the case, and upon the purpose for which the commission was created and the mischief which it was intended to remedy. But in Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 334, 36 S. Ct. 354, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 675, the Supreme Court, without derogation to the view of the power of the Commission enunciated by the District Court as above, reversed its decree, on the ground that the facts as ascertained afforded no foundation for the Commission's findings.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has power to make an order requiring trunk line railway companies to reopen through routes and publish joint rates to interstate destinations with tap lines with which such trunk lines have a connection, and to prohibit any of the line carriers from making to any of the tap lines allowance or division out of the joint rates in excess of prescribed maximum amounts. O'Keefe v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 294, 36 S. Ct. 313, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 651. See further, Tap Line Cases, (1914) 234 U. S. 1, 34 S. Ct. 741, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1185, wherein the order establishing maximum allowances to and divisions of joint rates, with tap lines by trunk lines, referred to in the foregoing note, was made.

[Violations, etc.]

Intrastate rates.—In general.—Congress could and did invest the Interstate Commerce Commission with authority to remove an existing discrimination against interstate commerce by directing a change of an intrastate rate prescribed by state authority. American Express Co. v. Caldwell, (1916) 244 U. S. 617, 37 S. Ct. 656, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1354, modifying decree in (S. D. 1917) 161 N. W. 132.

"Under the commerce clause of the Constitution Congress has ample power to prevent the common instrumentalities of interstate and intrastate commerce, such as the railroads, from being used in their intrastate operations in such manner as to affect injuriously traffic which is interstate. Where unjust discrimination against interstate commerce arises out of the relation of intrastate to interstate rates this power may be exerted to remove the discrimination, and this whether the intrastate rates are maintained under a local statute or by the voluntary act of the carrier. In correcting such discrimination Congress is not restricted to an adjustment or reduction of the interstate rates, but may prescribe a reasonable standard to which they shall conform and require the carrier to adjust the intrastate rates in such way as to remove the discrimination; for where the interstate and intrastate transactions of carriers are so related that the effective regulation of one involves control of the other, it is Congress, and not the state, that is entitled to prescribe the dominant rule. It is admissible for Congress to provide for the execution of this power through a subordinate body such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, and this it has done by the Act to Regulate Commerce. Where, in the exercise of its delegated authority, the Commission not only finds that a disparity in the two classes of rates is resulting in unjust discrimination against interstate commerce, but also determines what are reasonable rates for the interstate traffic, and then directs the removal of the discrimination, the carrier not only is entitled to put in force the interstate rates found reasonable, but is free to remove the forbidden discrimination by bringing the intrastate rates to the same level." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Public Utilities Commission, (1918) 245 U. S. 493, 38 S. Ct. 170, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, following Houston, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1913) 234 U. S. 342, 34 S. Ct. 833, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1341; American Express Co. v. Caldwell, (1916) 244 U. S. 617, 37 S. Ct. 656, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1354.

Disclosing information of shipments.—A state statute was held not to infringe the federal statute forbidding disclosure as to interstate shipments without the consent of the shipper which might be used to the shipper's disadvantage. In Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. North Carolina, (1917) 245 U. S. 298, 38 S. Ct. 96, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (1915) 169 N. C. 295, 84 S. E. 283), the court said: "The provisions of § 15, Act to Regulate Commerce, here relied on, were intended to apply to matters within the exclusive control of the Federal government; and when by a subsequent act Congress rendered interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors subject to state legislation, those provisions necessarily ceased to be paramount in respect of them."

Power of courts to regulate rates.—A federal District Court may not exercise administrative authority where the Commission has failed or refused to exercise it, nor annul orders of the Commission not amounting to an affirmative exercise of its powers. Manufacturers R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 457, 38 S. Ct. 383, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Review of order reducing rates on constitutional grounds.—Where the Commission, after full hearing, has set aside a given rate on the ground that it is unreasonably high, it should require a clear case to justify a court, upon evidence newly adduced but not in a proper sense newly discovered, in annulling the action of the Commission upon the ground that the same rate is so unreasonably low as to deprive the carrier of its constitutional right of compensation. Manufacturers R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 457, 38 S. Ct. 383, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A party is not necessarily debarred from attacking on constitutional grounds an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission reducing railway rates, even though they were not taken at the hearing before that body, but correct practice,—especially since the amendment of the Act of June 29, 1906, to the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, §§ 14-16, by which the necessity of formal findings of fact, except in cases where damages or reparation are awarded, is dispensed with, and a greater effect than before is given to the orders of the Commission other than those requiring the payment of money,—requires that, so far as practicable, all the pertinent evidence shall be submitted in the first instance to the Commission, and that a suit to set aside or annul its order shall be resorted to only where the Commission acts in disregard of the rights of the parties. Manufacturers R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 457, 38 S. Ct. 383, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Whether a preference or advantage or discrimination is undue, unreasonable, or unjust, within the meaning of section 3, is one of those questions of fact that have been confided by Congress under sections 15 and 16, to the judgment and discretion of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and upon which the Commission's decisions, made the basis of administrative orders operating in futuro, are not to be disturbed by the courts, except upon a showing that they are unsupported by evidence, were made without a hearing, exceed constitutional limits, or, for some other reason, amount to an abuse of power. Manufacturers R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 457, 38 S. Ct. 383, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1912 Supp., p. 120, sec. 12.

[New rates, etc.]

Burden of proof.—The last sentence of section 15, by the fair import of its terms, imposes upon the carrier the burden of proving the new rate to be just and reasonable, only where that question is involved in the hearing, it does not call for proof as to matters not in controversy. Manufacturers R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 457, 38 S. Ct. 383, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Since Congress, by the amendment of 1910, specifically cast upon the carrier the burden of establishing the reasonableness of its rates when it appeared that such rates carried an increase over those which had prevailed previously, it would seem to follow that prior to the amendment the burden of proof was upon those objecting to such increase in rates as unjustifiable. Otherwise there would have been no necessity for the enactment of the amendatory statute. People v. Public Service Commission, (1915) 215 N. Y. 241, 109 N. E. 252.

1912 Supp., p. 121, sec. 12.

[Commission may establish through routes, etc.]

Order fixing maximum for joint rates.—The Interstate Commerce Commission, when fixing by its order a maximum for joint rates, may, in its discretion, permit the carriers to make their own agreement, subject to review by the Commission, as to establishing joint rates within the maximum, and as to agreeing between themselves respecting divisions. Manufacturers R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 457, 38 S. Ct. 383, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Finding by Commission.—The power to establish through routes and joint rates does not depend upon a finding by the Commission that the carriers in question have been guilty of discrimination. It is sufficient if discrimination in fact actually exists. St. Louis, etc. R. Co. v. U. S., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 234 Fed. 668.

1912 Supp., p. 121, sec. 12.

[Through routes, etc.]

Through route and joint rates—Constitutionality.—In St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 245 U. S. 136, 38 S. Ct. 49, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming [W. D. Ky. 1913] 234 Fed. 668), the court said: "That Congress has power to authorize the Commission to enter an order for through routes and joint rates, like that here complained of, has been heretofore assumed. No reason is shown for questioning the existence now."

Designation by the shipper in writing of the route by which the property shall be transported to its destination is not required by this section and is not essential to create a liability on the part of the carrier for moving the shipment by a different route from the one selected by the shipper and contrary to his oral instructions. Lamb v. Moor, (1916) 17 Ga. App. 549, 87 S. E. 837.

1912 Supp., p. 125, sec. 13.

[Copies of schedules, etc.]

Insufficiency or defective certification of tariff schedules on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which were admitted in evidence by the trial court, could not justify a state appellate court in arbitrarily disregarding such schedules when passing upon the question whether or not the carrier had limited its liability for the baggage of an interstate passenger to a specified sum unless a greater value is declared and excess charges paid. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Beaham, (1916) 242 U. S. 148, 37 S. Ct. 43, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 210.

1912 Supp., p. 125, sec. 14.

[Annual reports of statistics, etc.]

Honest mistakes or omissions from report.—It is not the purpose of the law to punish honest mistakes, made in a genuinely doubtful case. The statute is a penal one and should be applied only to cases coming plainly within its terms. While the reports filed must be truthful reports, yet, since they must be made under oath, the penalties for perjury would seem to be the direct and sufficient sanction relied upon by the law-making power to secure their correctness. U. S. v. Northern Pacific R. Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 190, 37 S. Ct. 22, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 240, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 162, 129 C. C. A. 514; Elgin, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 411, 142 C. C. A. 107.

1914 Supp., p. 203, sec. 1.

The constitutionality of this Act was upheld in Morris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 516, 143 C. C. A. 584.

Goods stolen while in course of interstate commerce.—In Friedman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 223 Fed. 429, 147 C. C. A. 365, the indictment was laid under this section charging the plaintiff in error with unlawfully receiving and concealing certain brasses stolen from a box car at Springfield while constituting a part of a shipment from Concord, N. H., to Springfield, Mass. The merchandise belonged to the Boston and Maine Railroad, and was a part of its cars being forwarded to the repair shops of the railroad corporation. The claim was made that as this material was carried without compensation, and was all the time the property of the Boston and Maine Railroad, it was not within the statute. The court held that inasmuch as it was being transported as freight, it was within the letter of the statute. See further Kasle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 878, 147 C. C. A. 552.

Indictment—Goods interstate commerce.—An indictment which charged the accused with knowingly, unlawfully and feloniously having in his possession distinct goods and chattels which had been stolen, taken and carried away from a named railroad station in Toledo, Ohio, while in course of shipment in interstate commerce between two points named in the counts, sufficiently charged that the goods were interstate commerce or a part thereof, that they retained their character as an interstate shipment of freight and had not lost their character as such, as part of interstate commerce. Kasle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 878, 147 C. C. A. 552.

Knowledge.—It is not necessary to aver that at the times the goods and chattels were alleged to have been in the possession of the accused, he knew they had been stolen from interstate commerce. Kasle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 878, 147 C. C. A. 552.

Specific ownership.—An indictment charging an offense under this statute must allege specific ownership, but a special property, such as that for bailee, carrier, or the like, in goods stolen is sufficient for the purposes of an indictment. So an indictment which alleged the names of the consignees, sufficiently fixed the ownership of the goods, since in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, delivery to a common carrier is delivery to the consignee. Kasle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 878, 147 C. C. A. 552.

Evidence.—Conviction of the offense of having in possession goods and chattels knowing them to have been stolen while in course of interstate commerce may be established upon circumstantial evidence. Kasle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 878, 147 C. C. A. 552.

Jury question.—The question of the guilt or innocence of one accused of receiving and having in his possession goods and chattels stolen in the course of interstate commerce, in violation of this section, is one for the jury. Cuomo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 116, 145 C. C. A. 304.

Instructions.—In a prosecution under this statute for unlawfully having in possession goods and chattels with knowledge that they were stolen while in course of interstate commerce, a charge instructing the jury to find whether the goods and chattels in issue were articles of interstate transportation, whether they were stolen while in course of such transportation, whether the defendant came into possession of them, and if these findings were in the affirmative, then to find whether the defendant received the articles knowing them to have been stolen, was held to be erroneous, since such tests as these of guilty knowledge on the part of the accused subjected him to a standard of conduct and of capacity to detect crime which the jury might conclude to be the standard of reasonable and honest men of average intelligence when acting under circumstances like those which might be found to have existed in the instant case. Kasle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 878, 147 C. C. A. 552.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS

1914 Supp., p. 208. [Act of March 1, 1913.]

Constitutionality.—This Act is constitutional. James Clark Distilling Co. v. Western Maryland R. Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 311, 37 S. Ct. 180, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) —, Ann. Cas. 1917B 845, L. R. A. 1917B 1218; State v. Little, (1916) 171 N. C. 805, 88 S. E. 723; Gottstein v. Lester, (1915) 88 Wash. 462, 153 Pac. 595.

“Law of such state” includes a city ordinance. Kansas City v. Jordan, (1917) 99 Kan. 814, 163 Pac. 188, Ann. Cas. 1918B 273.

Shipments of liquor through a state from a place without the state cannot be seized under a state statute by virtue of the Webb-Kenyon Act. State v. Great Northern R. Co., (1917) 98 Wash. 197, 167 Pac. 103.

Pen. Code § 238, how affected.—The Webb-Kenyon Act does not repeal, or suspend the provisions of Pen. Code, § 238 (see 1909 Supp., p. 472), which denounces under penalty of a fine or imprisonment the offense of the delivery by an agent or employee of an express company, or other common carrier to any fictitious person, or to any person under a fictitious name, of any intoxicating liquor shipped in interstate commerce. Witte v. Shelton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 265, 153 C. C. A. 191.

Liquors purchased for personal use are not invalidated by the Webb-Kenyon Act when not prohibited by the law of the state where the purchaser lives. Sturgeon v. State, (1916) 17 Ariz. 513, 154 Pac. 1050; Adams Express Co. v. Com., (1913) 154 Ky. 462, 157 S. W. 908, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 342; West Virginia v. Adams Express Co., (S. D. W. Va. 1914) 219 Fed. 331; Com. v. White, (1915) 166 Ky. 528, 179 S. W. 469; Palmer v. Southern Express Co., (1914) 129 Tenn. 116, 165 S. W. 236.

But a state law which prohibits the delivery of liquors for personal use of the consignee, or limits the amount that may be delivered to a consignee for such use, is valid under the Webb-Kenyon Act. James Clark Distilling Co. v. Western Maryland R. Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 311, 37 S. Ct. 180, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 326,

A state statute which makes it unlawful to receive more than one quart of intoxicating liquors within fifteen days is a legitimate exercise of police power. Glenn v. Southern Express Co., (1915) 170 N. C. 286, 87 S. E. 136. See to the same effect Southern Express Co. v. Whittle, (1915) 194 Ala. 406, 69 So. 652.

Sales by mail.—Where a state statute prohibited the sale of intoxicating liquors within four miles of a schoolhouse where school was kept, and it appeared that certain persons had received and possessed intoxicating liquors in Memphis, and were not only offering but were engaged in selling them at their place of business to purchasers residing in other states, directly or by money orders received through the mails, or by telegraph or telephone orders, it was held that such persons were not protected by the Federal Constitution and laws of Congress relating to interstate commerce. Laughter v. McLain, (W. D. Tenn. 1916) 229 Fed. 280.

In State v. Davis, (1915) 77 W. Va. 271, 87 S. E. 262, L. R. A. 1917C 639, it was held that where a liquor dealer residing and doing business in another state, who, by the agency of the United States mails, sends into West Virginia unsolicited, and there circulates or distributes to prospective customers price lists, circulars and order blanks, advertising his liquors for sale, and which he proposes to ship into the state to them, and which advertising matter by such agency is actually delivered to a citizen of the state, he is guilty of a violation of the so-called "Yost Law" of West Virginia (Code 1913, ch. 32A, § 8), and may be indicted and punished as provided by said Act, and that that Act, by virtue of the Wilson Act and the Webb-Kenyon Act, does not infringe the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

State statute requiring marking of packages containing liquors.—A state statute requiring packages containing liquors to be conspicuously marked with the words "This Package Contains Intoxicating Liquor" is not authorized by the Webb-Kenyon Act. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Giles, (D. C. Colo. 1916) 235 Fed. 804. See contra, State v. Owen, (Wash. 1917) 166 Pac. 793.

A state statute requiring a permit to be attached to packages of liquor shipped into the state is warranted by the Webb-Kenyon Act. State v. Warburton, (1917) 97 Wash. 242, 166 Pac. 615; State v. Great Northern R. Co., (1917) 97 Wash. 137, 165 Pac. 1073.

A state statute taxing an agency of a foreign brewery established in such state, if the tax does not operate as a discrimination, is a valid exercise of the police power of the state and a permissible regulation by the state of the sale of intoxicating liquors shipped from other states under the Wilson and Webb-Kenyon Laws. Evansville Brewing Ass'n v. Excise Commission, (N. D. Ala. 1915) 225 Fed. 204.

Record of shipments by railroad company.—A state law, providing that railroad companies shall keep a separate book, in which shall be entered the name of every person to whom intoxicating liquor is shipped, together with amount, kind, date of receipt, etc., to be followed by the consignee's signature acknowledging delivery, is not in conflict with this Act. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. North Carolina, (1917) 245 U. S. 298, 38 S. Ct. 96, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1915) 169 N. C. 295, 84 S. E. 283.

JUDGMENTS

Vol. IV, p. 4, sec. 967.

Effect of state statutes.—The rights of the United States cannot be impaired by the lapse of time provided as a bar by the laws of the states. So in an action to enforce the lien of certain judgments by the United States, where a state statute provides that judgments directing the payment of money when duly docketed shall be liens on real estate for the term of ten years and the period of limitation of actions on judgments is fixed by the state law at ten years from the date of rendition, it was held that the rights of the government were not to be impaired by the enforcement of such state statutes, although had the judgments been in favor of a citizen, by the terms of the federal statute, they would have ceased to be liens at the expiration of the ten years fixed as the life of the lien by the state statute and of course no action could thereafter be maintained to enforce them as liens. The United States may take the benefit of any state or federal statute though it is not bound by its limitations. U. S. v. Minor, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 101, 148 C. C. A. 595. See also the same case in (W. D.

N. C. 1917) 243 Fed. 953. There the United States sought a bill in equity praying that lands be sold to satisfy the judgments mentioned above. The bill was dismissed on the ground that it was not a proper remedy, as the judgments were at law, and the United States had an adequate remedy at law by the issuance of fieri facias or execution.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS

Vol. IV, p. 79, sec. 19.

"United States commissioners are neither judges nor courts, although they sometimes act in a quasi judicial capacity and exercise the power of a court in so far as an act of congress has conferred specific authority or imposed the performance of a special duty." U. S. v. Jones, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 262.

Vol. IV, p. 90, sec. 824.

To constitute a final hearing a question must be submitted to the court, the disposition of which finally ends the case. An order of dismissal, without prejudice, before any testimony was taken, on the unopposed motion of libellant, did not authorize allowance of a docket fee of $20 to the respondent's proctor. Albion Lumber Co. v. Inter-Ocean Transp. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1917) 240 Fed. 1019.

Vol. IV, p. 95, sec. 828.

Making and certifying record on writ of error.—In the Circuit Court of Appeals it has been held that a certified transcript is not an original record but is a copy or transcription of the original record, and that the fee prescribed by the statute for compiling a certified copy of a record for use on appeal or writ of error, should be calculated at the rate of ten cents per folio for the part copied or transcribed and at the rate of fifteen cents per folio for the certificate. U. S. v. Oliphant, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 1, 144 C. C. A. 299.

Copies and transcripts.—In naturalization proceedings.—A clerk's charge of fees for making, on the direction of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, triplicate copies of declarations of intention for naturalization, and attaching the seal of the court, was properly disallowed as incompatible with sections 12, 13, and in disregard of section 21 of the Naturalization Act of June 29, 1906, ch. 3592, 34 Stat. L. 596, 1909 Supp., p. 364, at pp. 371, 372, 374. Cross v.

U. S., (1916) 242 U. S. 4, 37 S. Ct. 5, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 114.

Vol. IV, p. 107, sec. 829.

Summons and declaration.—In Burroughs Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Dulaney, (D. C. Md. 1916) 238 Fed. 255, where the marshal served on each of four defendants a writ of summons with a copy of the declaration attached, and charged in accordance with what appeared to have been the practice of the office for many years $4 for the service on each person, on the theory that the two papers, to wit, the writ of summons and a copy of the declaration, constituted each a service of a separate writ, the court held that there could not be such a constructive separation of what was really one service, and that "a reasonable construction of the statute limits the marshal to one fee of $2 for one service at one time in one cause on one person, no matter how many papers, copies, orders to show cause, etc., may be served by him on that one individual at the one time, and in the one cause."

On settlement of a claim in admiralty.—Where, on a libel against a yacht, the craft was taken into custody by the marshal pursuant to writ, but was afterward released upon the giving of a bond by the claimant to the marshal, the case was tried, and a final decree was entered for the libellant with costs, he was entitled to have taxed as part of his costs the poundage required to be paid to the marshal in case of settlement without a sale. The Eros, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 245 Fed. 814.

Vol. IV, p. 155, sec. 771.

"To prosecute . . . all civil actions."—Where, on a bill filed by the United States to recover money on account of frauds against the internal revenue laws, a receiver was appointed pursuant to the prayer of the bill, and the receiver filed a bill to recover moneys of a corporation defendant which had been fraudulently misappropriated and concealed, which was a purely ancillary or dependent proceeding, throughout which the United States was treated as the sole beneficiary, as in fact it turned out to be, and the district attorney and his assistant, who instituted the main suit and were appointed counsel for the receiver by the court, and though not directed by the Attorney General to appear in the receiver's suit, did so appear and throughout the litigation were recognized by the court, the receiver and the Department of Justice as representing the United States, it was deemed contrary to public policy to allow said attorney and his assistant, at least without the consent of the Attorney General, compensation for their services to the receiver, though paid by the defendants, under a compromise, and not out of the fund recovered. It was held that the receiver's ancillary suit was within R. S. sec. 771, which section is not limited to cases in which the United States is a party of record. "We think," said the court, "public policy as declared by the statutes and the decisions of the courts of the United States, opposed generally to the receipt by United States attorneys of private compensation for the performance of statutory duties," especially as criminal prosecutions in which said United States officers were actively connected were pending against some of the defendants. This conclusion was strengthened by consideration of the provision for salaries to United States attorneys in full for official services in the Act of May 28, 1896, ch. 252, §§ 6, 7, 29 Stat. L. 179, 180, vol. 4, Fed. Stat. Ann. 718, 722. McPherson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 35, 157 C. C. A. 331.

Revenue suits.—The United States attorney represents the United States in revenue fraud cases. McPherson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 35, 157 C. C. A. 331.

Vol. IV, p. 157, sec. 838.

It is the duty of United States attorneys to represent the United States in suits by the latter to recover money on account of frauds upon the internal revenue laws. McPherson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 35, 157 C. C. A. 331.

Vol. IV, p. 159, sec. 787.

Execution of process.—In U. S. v. Mitchell, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 223 Fed. 805, it was held that a summons beginning an action at law in a federal District Court in New York, being directed to the defendants named and not to the marshal, in the form prescribed by the New York Code of Civil Procedure, § 418, could properly be served by a private person pursuant to authority given in section 425 of said Code.

Clerk of district attorney in grand jury room.—In Latham v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 420, 141 C. C. A. 250, L. R. A. 1916D 1118, where a clerk in the office of the district attorney and an adept stenographer, after having subscribed an oath before the clerk of the court to keep secret the proceedings of the grand jury, at the instance of the district attorney, was present in the grand jury room, and took stenographic notes of the testimony upon which an indictment was found, it was held that this was not an informality, but matter of substance, and ground for quashing the indictment, without the necessity of allegation or proof that the defendant was prejudiced by the presence of the stenographer.

Conviction of a bankrupt for fraudulent concealment of property was affirmed as against alleged impropriety or illegality in the fact that the attorney who represented the petitioning creditors, the receiver appointed by the court, and the trustee in bankruptcy aided, as a duly appointed special assistant United States district attorney, in the prosecution of the case, taking an active part in the trial, although not appearing before the grand jury, where there was no claim that such assistant was paid otherwise than by the government, nor was his conduct upon the trial criticized. And the fact that such counsel would have been disqualified from so acting, under the state law, was immaterial. Terry v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1916) 235 Fed. 701, 149 C. C. A. 121.

Appointment.—"We do not think the Act of June 30, 1906, in conferring the power of appointment upon the Attorney General, should be construed to mean that the Attorney General must, in all cases, sign the appointment himself, but that the power of appointment is conferred upon the Attorney General as other powers are conferred to be exercised by him personally or through his lawful assistants when duly authorized for such purpose." May v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 495, 149 C. C. A. 547.

JUDICIARY

Vol. IV, p. 220, sec. 563, par. eighth.

Saving of common-law remedy.—"Our conclusion is that an action in personam may be maintained for a tort committed on the high seas if the accident is attributable to the 'unseaworthiness' of the vessel; that the common-law courts of a state have jurisdiction concurrent with the federal courts when proceeding in personam; and that the state court will grant the relief that a common-law court would have granted had the case been originally triable in such court." Larson v. Alaska Steamship Co., (1917) 96 Wash. 665, 165 Pac. 880, L. R. A. 1917F 671.

The clause of the federal Judiciary Act, saving to suitors of civil cases in admiralty and maritime jurisdiction a common-law remedy where the common law is competent to give it, leaves with the courts of Kentucky the jurisdiction to try cases for the negligence or wrongful killing of persons by collision of boats, such action being authorized by section 241 of the state constitution. Monongahela River Consol. Coal, etc., Co. v. Lancaster, (1916) 169 Ky. 24, 183 S. W. 258.

This is a saving clause; it is a saving from the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, the exclusive cognizance of which is accorded to the District Courts. It is a saving to suitors in all cases where they have a common-law remedy and the common law is competent to give it; that is the common-law remedy. "It is not a remedy in the common-law courts which is saved but a common-law remedy." Keithley v. North Pac., etc., Co., (D. C. Ore. 1916) 232 Fed. 255.

The remedy which is saved to a suitor by this section is not a remedy in the common-law courts but a common-law remedy, that is, the suitor who has a right of action growing out of a maritime contract may not go into a law court to find a new remedy, but he may employ a common-law forum, if one is found, competent to work out the right involved in his contract. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Eastern Steamship Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 228 Fed. 726.

State Workmen's Compensation Law.—By amendment in the Act of Oct. 6, 1917, ch. 97, 40 Stat. L. 395, given ante, this volume, p. 401, "rights and remedies under the workmen's compensation law of any state" are saved to claimants. Prior to that amendment it was held that "the remedy which the [New York] Compensation Statute attempts to give is of a character wholly unknown to the common law, incapable of enforcement by the ordinary processes of any court, and is not saved to suitors from the grant of exclusive jurisdiction" in Judicial Code, § 256, par. Third, which re-enacts R. S. sec. 711, par. Third, vol. 4, p. 494. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Jensen, (1917) 244 U. S. 205, 37 S. Ct. 524, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1086, Ann. Cas. 1917E 900, L. R. A. 1918C 451, four justices dissenting, reversing (1915) 215 N. Y. 514, 109 N. E. 600, Ann. Cas. 1916B-276, L. R. A. 1916A 403.

The ruling by the federal Supreme Court, as stated in the last preceding paragraph, was followed in Hartman v. Toyo Kisen Kaisha Steamship Co., (N. D. Cal. 1917) 244 Fed. 567, holding that jurisdiction of an action for personal injuries by a barber employed by defendant on one of its liners, who was thrown down and injured while attempting to board the ship, did not rest exclusively with the California Industrial Commission, but was maintainable in the federal District Court; especially as it was held in North Alaska Salmon Co. v. Pillsbury, (1916) 174 Cal. 1, 162 Pac. 93, L. R. A. 1917E 642, that the California Workmen's Compensation Act did not cover claims arising upon injuries inflicted outside the territorial limits of the state, as were the injuries in the case in the District Court.

Contra.—In Northern Pacific Steamship Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (1917) 174 Cal. 346, 163 Pac. 199, decided before the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Southern Pac. Co. v. Jensen, cited in the foregoing paragraphs, it was held that the state industrial accident commission had jurisdiction to make an award in the case of a seaman in the employ of the steamship company, who was injured while on his vessel, owned by citizens of the state, upon the high seas, and an award by the commission was affirmed as against the contention that the federal District Court in admiralty had exclusive jurisdiction.

Likewise, in Lindstrom v. Mutual Steamship Co., (1916) 132 Minn. 328, 156 N. W. 669, it was held that the Minnesota Workmen's Compensation Law furnished the exclusive remedy for an employee of a fuel company injured by negligence of a steamship company while he was unloading a vessel on a ship on navigable waters within the territorial jurisdiction of the state.

And in another case it had been held that the jurisdiction peculiar to admiralty which cannot be exercised by the state courts is the jurisdiction to enforce maritime liens by proceedings in

rem. A suitor must pursue that remedy in the District Court of the United States, but he may if he choose resort to his common-law remedy by action against the master or owner of the vessel in any court, state or federal, having jurisdiction. Walker v. Clyde Steamship Co., (1915) 215 N. Y. 529, 109 N. E. 604, Ann. Cas 1916B 87, affirming (1915) 167 App. Div. 945, 152 N. Y. S. 1147, wherein it was held that where an employee of a foreign railroad corporation, owning and operating a steamship engaged solely in interstate commerce, was accidentally injured on the steamship while it was lying alongside a pier in the Hudson river in the city of New York, he may sustain a claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act notwithstanding the fact that he may maintain an admiralty proceeding in rem for the same injury. While the remedy provided by the Workmen's Compensation Act is a substitute for the common-law remedy, it is in no sense a proceeding in rem to enforce a maritime lien and may, therefore, exist concurrently with the remedy in admiralty.

Action by seaman for damages for personal injuries.—In Chelentis v. Luckenbach Steamship Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 372, 38 S. Ct. 13, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, the plaintiff was employed as fireman on board the defendant's steamship, and while performing his duties on the high seas sustained severe injuries from the alleged negligence and an improvident order of a superior officer, and sued therefor in a New York state court, demanding full indemnity for his damage, and the cause was duly removed to the federal court on the ground of diverse citizenship. On the trial he did not question seaworthiness of ship or her appliances and announced that no claim was made for maintenance, cure, or wages. At conclusion of plaintiff's evidence the court directed a verdict for defendant, and judgment thereon was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals and by the Supreme Court on certiorari, the latter court holding that the work about which plaintiff was engaged was maritime in its nature; that his employment was a maritime contract; that the injuries received were likewise maritime; that the parties' rights and liabilities were matters clearly within the admiralty jurisdiction; that unless in some way there was imposed upon the owners a liability different from that prescribed by maritime law, plaintiff could properly demand only wages, maintenance, and cure; that under the doctrine approved in Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Jensen, (1917) 244 U. S. 205, 37 S. Ct. 524, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1086, Ann. Cas. 1917E 900, L. R. A. 1918C 451, no state has power to abolish the well recognized maritime rule concerning measure of recovery, and substitute therefor the full indemnity rule of the common law, as such a substitution would distinctly and definitely change or add to the settled maritime law; that, under the clause of the federal statute "saving to suitors, in all cases the right of a common law remedy," etc., a right sanctioned by the maritime law may be enforced through any appropriate remedy recognized at common law, but does not reveal an intention to give the complaining party an election to determine whether the defendant's liability shall be measured by common-law standards rather than those of the maritime law; and that under the circumstances of the case, without regard to the court where plaintiff might ask relief, his rights were those recognized by the law of the sea notwithstanding section 20 of the Seamen's Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 153, 1916 Supp., p. 251, which provides that "in any suit to recover damages for any injury sustained on board vessel or in its service seamen having command shall not be held to be fellow servants with those under their authority."

Waters and places.—A dry dock is part of the navigable waters and constitutes a place or locality which is subject to admiralty jurisdiction. The Anglo-Patagonian, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 92, 148 C. C. A. 586, affirming (E. D. Va. 1915) 228 Fed. 1014.

Property subject to admiralty jurisdiction.—The circumstance that a workman who was injured while repairing a vessel in a dry dock was taken in an unconscious condition, and therefore without his knowledge or assent from the dock where he was hurt, to a nearby hospital, where he died shortly afterward, cannot serve to defeat the jurisdiction of the admiralty court. The Anglo-Patagonian, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 92, 148 C. C. A. 586, affirming (E. D. Va. 1915) 228 Fed. 1014, following Hamburg-Amerikanische Packetfahrt Aktien Gesellschaft v. Gye, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1913) 207 Fed. 247, 124 C. C. A. 517; The Strabo, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 98 Fed. 998, 39 C. C. A. 375; The Aurora, (D. C. Ore. 1908) 163 Fed. 633.

In Jolivet v. Seattle, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 226 Fed. 963, the court said: "Where the municipality has control of the waters and of the buoys, and maintains supervision of the anchorage grounds, and issues permits for harbor privileges, and makes a charge therefor, it is liable for damage caused by negligence in the discharge of assumed duties," and held that a suit to recover such damages was one of admiralty cognizance.

Possessory suits.—In The Nellie T., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 117, 148 C. C. A. 611, it was held that a time charterer, owner pro hac vice, could maintain an action in admiralty against the owner for possession of the vessel.

A libel in rem against a foreign ship by a foreign subject for a tort committed on the high seas is within the admiralty jurisdiction of the District Court, nor is the ship immune on the ground that it has been requisitioned by the foreign government for the purpose of transporting military supplies, where the executive has not demanded the ship's release. The Attualita, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 909, 152 C. C. A. 43.

Vol. IV, p. 236, sec. 566.

Present rule stated.—At the present time a trial of issues of fact without a jury may be had in the District Court. The rule formerly obtaining that there was no statute in existence which provided for the trial in the District Court by the court without a jury, and that the provision for waiving a jury, in R. S. sec. 649, applies only to the Circuit Court, no longer obtains. This section is now construed in connection with section 291 of the Judicial Code. Eastern Oil Co. v. Holcomb, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 126, 128 C. C. A. 642. See to the same effect Wm. Edwards Co. v. La Dow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 378, 144 C. C. A. 520.

Admiralty — Joinder of parties.—Where a trial by jury is demanded under this section in a suit for damages brought by a good many passengers on a vessel, against the vessel for being served with unwholesome food, the libelants will not be allowed to join in one suit, owing to the perplexity and confusion which would attend a trial in which there was a large number of libelants. The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 203.

Vol. IV, p. 246, sec. 629, par. fourth.

Suit to enjoin collection of illegal tax.—It is not open to question that a suit may not be brought to enjoin the assessment or collection of a tax because of the alleged unconstitutionality of the statute imposing it. To sustain jurisdiction there must be an allegation of grounds for equitable relief independent of the mere complaint that the tax is illegal and unconstitutional and should not be enforced. Dodge v. Osborn, (1916) 240 U. S. 118, 36 S. Ct. 275, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 557.

Criminal prosecution.—Where an indictment charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States of internal revenue, a federal District Court has jurisdiction by virtue of the commission in its jurisdiction of overt acts, irrespective of the actual place of the formation of the conspiracy or of the presence in that jurisdiction of all of the conspirators. Tillinghast v. Richards, (D. C. R. I. 1916) 233 Fed. 710.

Vol. IV, p. 249, sec. 629, par. sixteenth.

Suit to restrain enforcement of unconstitutional law.—The federal court has jurisdiction of a suit brought against an officer of the state to restrain the enforcement of a law upon the ground that such law is in violation of the Constitution of the United States. Crane v. Johnson, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 233 Fed. 334, following Truax v. Raich, (1915) 239 U. S. 33, 36 S. Ct. 7, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 131, L. R. A. 1916D 545, and Raich v. Truax, (D. C. Ariz. 1915) 219 Fed. 273.

Vol. IV, p. 258, sec. 641.

The action of jury commissioners, or other subordinate officers, excluding colored citizens from juries because of their race, does not authorize a removal from the state court where it does not appear that such officers so acted under or by virtue of the laws or constitution of the state. Tillman v. State, (1915) 121 Ark. 322, 181 S. W. 890.

Vol. IV, p. 265, sec. 1.

I. JURISDICTION OF CIRCUIT COURTS IN GENERAL (p. 267)

When jurisdiction once attaches, the court is bound to consider all issues properly presented, and thereafter render judgment and decree. Its duty to enforce its decrees is no less obligatory than its duty to render them. Johnson v. Johnson, (D. C. Nev. 1915) 225 Fed. 413.

Collateral attack.—Where a judicial tribunal has general jurisdiction of the subject matter, and the special facts which give it the right to act in a particular case are averred and not controverted upon notice to all the parties, jurisdiction is acquired and cannot be assailed in a collateral proceeding. When there is a total want of jurisdiction in the court, all its acts are void, but when there is merely a wrongful or defective execution of jurisdiction, its acts are voidable only, and must be reversed upon error. Collins v. Williamson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 59, 143 C. C. A. 653.

II. SUITS OF A CIVIL NATURE AT COMMON LAW OR IN EQUITY (p. 267)

"Suit."—Where the assessor of a taxing district in an Iowa city assessed a party's property, and upon objections and after a hearing by the city board of review the valuation was reduced, and from this action of the board the assessor prosecuted an appeal to the state District Court, as authorized by the state statute, the proceeding then became a "suit" and removable as such to the federal court on petition of the property owner. In re Mississippi River Power Co., (S. D. Iowa 1917) 241 Fed. 194.

Judicial Code, § 28, 1912 Supp., p. 144, authorizes removal of a "suit . . . brought," etc. In English v. Supreme Conclave, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 235 Fed. 630, the court said: "The words of a statute regulative of a constitutional right are not to be given a narrower meaning than they bear, or the context demands. The particular words 'suit brought' should be so construed as to give them the full effect intended by the federal statute; i. e., the right of a defendant possessing the requisite qualification to remove into the federal court a proceeding instituted against him in a state court."

At law or in equity—In general.—Jurisdictions at law and in equity are as separate in the federal courts as if administered by different tribunals. Forty Fort Coal Co. v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 233 Fed. 704.

State legislation.—It has been held, however, that the remedies in equity afforded by state statutes may, with the proper parties and averments, be made available in the equity courts of the United States. Jennings v. Smith, (S. D. Ga. 1916) 232 Fed. 921.

In equity.—The general power of federal courts when sitting as courts of equity can be exerted only in cases otherwise within the jurisdiction of those courts by reason of diverse citizenship or other condition prescribed in Acts of Congress defining jurisdiction of federal courts. Genesee Valley Trust Co. v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Kan. 1917) 240 Fed. 524, remanding a removed equity suit.

Effect of state legislation in general.—The power of the federal courts was not granted by, and may not be revoked, impaired, or restricted by, any law or Act of a state. Vitkins v. Clyde SS. Co., (1916) 232 Fed. 288.

The judicial power, authority and duty of the federal courts is wholly independent of state action. It cannot, directly or indirectly, be destroyed, abridged, limited or rendered less efficacious by any state statute, or by any exertion of state authority whatever. Johnson v. Johnson, (D. C. Nev. 1915) 225 Fed. 413.

Diversity of citizenship.—The jurisdiction of a federal court arising from diversity of citizenship of the parties cannot be impaired or annulled by a state statute. Memphis St. R. Co. v. Bobo, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 708, 146 C. C. A. 634.

Effect of state legislation concerning

Restrictions of foreign corporations.—See Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, (1906) 202 U. S. 246, 26 S. Ct. 619, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 1013, 6 Ann. Cas. 317, where the court cited Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, [1874] 20 Wall. 445, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 365, and Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co., [1877] 94 U. S. 535, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 148, and distinguished Barron v. Burnside, [1887] 121 U. S. 186, 7 S. Ct. 931, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 915; Barrow Steamship Co. v. Kane, [1892] 170 U. S. 100, 18 S. Ct. 526, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 964, and Blake v. McClung, [1898] 172 U. S. 239, 19 S. Ct. 165, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 432. But see Harrison v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1914) 232 U. S. 318, 34 S. Ct. 333, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 621, L. R. A. 1915F 1187, referring to "the extremely narrow scope of the rulings in the Doyle and Prewitt cases," above cited, and rendering them inapplicable to that case. In State v. Hodges, (1914) 114 Ark. 155, 169 S. W. 942, L. R. A. 1916F 122, the Arkansas statute there pronounced constitutional was held to come "strictly within the narrow limits of the Prewitt case" above cited, which case was explained and distinguished in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Kansas, (1910) 216 U. S. 1, 30 S. Ct. 190, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 355. See also Harrison v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1914) 232 U. S. 318, 34 S. Ct. 333, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 621, L. R. A. 1915F 1187, affirming (W. D. Okla. 1909) 171 Fed. 480, reaffirmed in Donald v. Philadelphia, etc., Coal, etc., Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 329, 36 S. Ct. 563, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1027; Herndon v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1910) 218 U. S. 135, 30 S. Ct. 633, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 970; State v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1910) 97 Miss. 35, 51 So. 918, 53 So. 454, Ann. Cas. 1912C 1150, reaffirmed on second appeal (1913) 104 Miss. 413, 61 So. 425.

Proceedings relating to wills.—A suit which is, in an essential feature, a suit to annul a will, where such proceeding is by the laws of the state merely supplemental to the proceedings for probate and cognizable only by the Probate Court, is not within the jurisdiction of a federal court. Sutton v. English, (1918) 246 U. S. 199, 38 S. Ct. 254, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A proceeding to probate a will is not a suit at common law or in equity within the meaning of this clause. Powell v. Watkins, (N. C. 1916) 90 S. E. 207.

"In North Carolina, the proceeding for probate of a will is not regarded as an adversary suit inter partes, but is a proceeding in rem, in which the jurisdiction of the court, in the exercise of probate powers, is exclusive, and an adjudication of probate may not be assailed or questioned in any collateral or independent proceedings," and therefore "a case concerning the probate of a will or an issue involved therein is not a removable cause within the meaning of the federal legislation on the subject." Powell v. Watkins, (N. C. 1916) 90 S. E. 207.

Settlement of estates.—Federal courts sitting in equity have no general jurisdiction in matters of probate and the administration of estates of decedents. And a federal District Court erred in taking jurisdiction of a suit by parties claiming an interest in a decedent's estate, on the ground of diverse citizenship, and appointing receivers of the estate of the decedent and in enjoining and directing the temporary administrators to surrender the assets in their hands to the receivers for administration in the federal court. Smith v. Jennings, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 238 Fed. 48, 151 C. C. A. 124.

Where there is diversity of citizenship, the federal courts have equity jurisdiction to administer the assets of a deceased person within its jurisdiction. Johnson v. Johnson, (D. C. Nev. 1915) 225 Fed. 413, wherein the court said: "Until probate administration was regulated by statute and assigned to specific courts, it was a well recognized branch of chancery jurisdiction. At the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution and the passage of the Judiciary Act, the Court of Chancery in England was the ordinary tribunal for such matters and it was with the powers then exercised by that court that the United States Circuit Court was invested."

A federal court has jurisdiction to determine the question whether or not a party is entitled to a share in the estate of a decedent in process of administration in a state Surrogate's Court, and to determine the limitation or extent of such share. Stotesbury v. Huber, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 237 Fed. 413, citing Ingersoll v. Coram, (1908) 211 U. S. 335, 29 S. Ct. 92, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 208.

A federal court has jurisdiction of a bill in equity by citizens of a state to establish their claim as heirs and next of kin to the entire estate of a decedent, brought against citizens of another state making the same claim on their own behalf, permanent administrators, also citizens of the latter state, being joined as defendants. Jennings v. Smith, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 242 Fed. 561.

Mandamus proceedings.—Although a proceeding for a writ of mandamus pure and simple is not cognizable in the federal courts, it is otherwise where a proceeding, nominally for a writ of mandate as authorized by a state statute, is really a case where the powers of a court of equity are invoked to compel the specific performance of a contract, and a proceeding of the latter description is removable to a federal court. State v. Tacoma R., etc., Co. (W. D. Wash. 1910) 244 Fed. 789.

The foregoing case was distinguished in State v. Puget Sound Traction, etc., Co., (W. D. Wash. 1917) 243 Fed. 748, where a proceeding for a writ of mandate to compel the defendant corporation to maintain and operate street railways pursuant to accepted ordinances of the city, was held not to be removable, although the plaintiff included a prayer for the appointment of a receiver, where there was an absence of allegation of facts upon which to found a receivership, and, as the court said, "the substance and effect of the entire record is mandamus."

III. AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY (p. 272)

Increased to $3,000 by Judicial Code.—In McKernan v. North River Ins. Co., (E. D. Wash. 1912) 206 Fed. 984, it was held that, in view of section 299 of the Judicial Code, 1912 Supp., p. 252, the federal courts had jurisdiction of actions for less than $3,000 if they were pending or had accrued before Jan. 1, 1912, the date the Code went into effect. But in Sloane v. Kramer, (E. D. N. C. 1916) 230 Fed. 727, the court held that the change in the jurisdictional value "of the matter in controversy" by section 24 of the Judicial Code, 1912 Supp., p. 139, from $2,000 to $3,000, applied to suits and actions instituted thereafter, without regard to the time the remedial right or cause of action accrued.

In what cases jurisdictional amount is necessary.—Where the action is brought on the ground of diversity of citizenship it is necessary that the matter in controversy exceed the sum or value of $3,000, and that this shall appear by distinct averment upon the face of the bill, or otherwise from the proofs. Pinel v. Pinel, (1916) 240 U. S. 594, 36 S. Ct. 416, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 817.

Where jurisdiction is invoked on the ground of a federal question involved, there must be the requisite amount in controversy. Supreme Council, etc. v. Hobart, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 385, 157 C. C. A. 11.

Absence of pecuniary value.—"It has long been settled that the jurisdiction conferred by Congress upon any court of the United States in a case where the matter in controversy exceeds a certain sum of money does not include cases where the rights of the parties are incapable of being valued in money, and therefore excludes habeas corpus cases." Horn v. Mitchell, (1917) 243 U. S. 247, 37 S. Ct. 293, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 700.

How ascertained.—Pleading amount by plaintiff.—That the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of three thousand dollars must appear by distinct averment from the face of the pleading or otherwise from the proof. Pinel v. Pinel, (1916) 240 U. S. 594, 36 S. Ct. 416, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 817.

The plaintiff's pleading must show with reasonable certainty that the amount in controversy is within the jurisdiction of the court. Brownson v. Emmet, etc., Counties, (N. D. Ia. 1916) 237 Fed. 212, where the court intimated, on motion to dismiss, that the plaintiff's bill seeking recovery of damages and injunction by reason of flowage of 40 acres of his land was insufficient because there was no evidence "of the value of the land or the extent of such damage if any should occur, before the court except the allegations of the bill," and said that "if, upon the final hearing, the damage to the land was not shown to be in excess of that amount [$3,000] the suit would have to be dismissed for want of jurisdiction."

In an action against an attorney for negligence, it was held that the test of the sufficiency of the declaration was whether its allegations, if proven, would make out a case. In other words, if proof of the facts alleged as to negligence and resulting loss would establish a cause of action within the jurisdictional amount. The fact that nominal damages might be recovered could not avail because upon that theory the amount involved would be insufficient to give the court jurisdiction. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Price, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 397, 145 C. C. A. 391, affirming (S. D. W. Va. 1915) 224 Fed. 271.

It is well established that the amount claimed in the complaint determines the jurisdiction of the national courts, unless it appears to a legal certainty from the face of the complaint that in no event can the plaintiff recover an amount necessary to give the court jurisdiction, and that as part of the claim necessary to make up the jurisdictional amount is as a matter of fact colorable and fictitious and inserted in bad faith to invoke the jurisdiction of the court. The fact that upon the trial the amount recovered is less than the sum necessary for the court's jurisdiction does not defeat it. Le Roy v. Hartwick, (E. D. Ark. 1916) 229 Fed. 857.

The mere statement of the amount of the claim in the ad damnum clause does not clothe the court with jurisdiction. The facts pleaded must sufficiently support the assertion of damages to suggest that the statement of the amount involved is either in good faith or is open to fair controversy. American Sheet, etc., Co. v. Winzeler, (N. D. Ohio 1915) 227 Fed. 321.

It is not absolutely necessary that the sum or value of the matter in dispute be formally alleged. The amount may be otherwise shown. Lee Line Steamers v. Robinson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 417, 146 C. C. A. 411.

Where a bill in equity alleges that the amount as to each plaintiff exceeds the jurisdictional amount of $3,000, and in addition to the federal questions presented, shows diversity of citizenship and the bill is verified, and no counter affidavit is offered, a case of jurisdiction is thereby made out. Lutz v. New Orleans, (E. D. La. 1916) 235 Fed. 978.

Effect of counterclaim.—It has been held that when the jurisdictional amount is in question, the tendering of a counterclaim in an amount which in itself, or added to the amount claimed in the petition, makes up a sum equal to the amount necessary to the jurisdiction of a District Court, jurisdiction is established whatever may be the state of the plaintiff's complaint. American Sheet, etc., Co. v. Winzeler, (N. D. Ohio 1915) 227 Fed. 321.

Interest and costs.—Compensation of counsel, represented by an interest in the judgment to which he is entitled as his fee, is neither interest nor costs, and for jurisdictional purposes is to be treated as part of the matter in controversy. Lee Line Steamers v. Robinson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 417, 146 C. C. A. 411.

Aggregate of claims.—In a suit by a state for the use and benefit of certain depositors in a state bank against a non-resident former bank commissioner and the nonresident surety on his bond, for losses alleged to have been suffered by each of the individuals named as the result of alleged neglect of official duty imposed by the state law upon the bank commissioner, the jurisdictional amount necessary for removal—if the case were removable at all—was held insufficient where none of the individual claims was large enough, though the aggregate of the claims was far in excess of the jurisdictional amount. Title Guaranty, etc., Co. v. Idaho, (1910) 240 U. S. 136, 36 S. Ct. 345, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 566.

The principle upon which an aggregation of claims can be employed as a test of jurisdiction is that the persons joining in the suit must have a common and undivided interest, not distinct interests, in the amount involved; still this is not to say that, if the property involved is in truth separately owned and held, the parties may not constitute a class who may be joined for the sake of convenience and economy; it is to say that aggregation of their pecuniary interests is not permissible for making up the jurisdictional amount. Nolen v. Reichman, (W. D. Tenn. 1915) 225 Fed. 812.

Money and property rights.—Where the plaintiff in good faith claimed more than $3,000 in a suit in equity for injunction and accounting of profits, the court had jurisdiction regardless of whether the plaintiff actually recovered less than $3,000 or nothing at all. Garrett v. Ballard, (C. C. A. 1916) 238 Fed. 335, 151 C. C. A. 335.

Suits for injunction.—In a suit in equity to enjoin the doing of certain specified acts, as the refusal to deliver a package of intoxicating liquor on the ground that it was forbidden to make delivery by the provisions of the state statute, it is very questionable whether in such a case a federal court will consider in estimating the value of the amount in controversy any exemplary or punitive damages. Gaines v. Baltimore, etc., Steamship Co., (E. D. S. C. 1916) 234 Fed. 786.

In a suit by an employer against striking employees and their labor union to enjoin them from destroying or injuring plaintiff's property, where the alleged threatened damage far exceeded the jurisdictional amount, it was not necessary to give the court jurisdiction that $3,000 worth of property should have been destroyed. Tri-City Central Trades Council v. American Steel Foundries, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 728, 151 C. C. A. 578.

The court had jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin a municipality from taking part of the plaintiff railroad company's right of way and depot grounds for street purposes, where it was possible that the amount awarded for the taking would exceed $3,000. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lost Nation, (S. D. Ia. 1916) 237 Fed. 709.

Damages for dissolution of partnership.—In Kebart v. Aiken, (1916) 232 Fed. 454, it appeared that the plaintiff, a citizen of New York, brought an action against the defendant, a citizen of Pennsylvania, to recover $10,000 damages for the alleged wrongful termination of a written contract of copartnership between them. On the trial it appeared that the firm was insolvent and that the partnership had only ten days to run, when its assets were sold on an execution on a judgment obtained in the state court, for money due the defendant by the firm. On disclosure of these facts on plaintiff's proofs, the court below granted a compulsory nonsuit. This judgment was affirmed.

Administration of estates.—Where two children united in a suit to establish title, respectively, to an undivided one-eighth and an undivided two-eighths of certain real estate owned by a deceased father, on the ground of his omission to provide for them in his will, whereby, under a statute, they became entitled as if he had died intestate, the averment that one of the plaintiffs was entitled to an undivided one-eighth interest, and the other to an undivided two-eighths interest, making together an undivided threeeighths interest in the property, "which said interests are of the value of $4,500 and upwards over and above all incumbrances," was not the legal equivalent of saying that the interest of either plaintiff was of the value of more than $3000; for "it is not necessarily to be inferred that the value of an undivided two-eighths is two-thirds of the value of an undivided three-eighths." Pinel v. Pinel, (1916) 240 U. S. 594, 36 S. Ct. 416, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 817.

Proof.—A federal court of equity is not without jurisdiction to render a decree for an injunction against continuing trespasses, where threatened irreparable injury is alleged, by the mere fact that no proof has been made of the specific amount of that injury. Moline Plow Co. v. Omaha Iron Store Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 519, 149 C. C. A. 65.

IV. SUITS ARISING UNDER THE CONSTITUTION, LAWS, OR TREATIES OF THE UNITED STATES (p. 280)

History of the provision.—General jurisdiction first given in 1875.—See Bankers' Trust Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 295, 36 S. Ct. 569, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1010.

Constitutionality of provision.—"Under the Constitution Congress undoubtedly possesses power to invest the subordinate federal courts with original jurisdiction of all suits at law or in equity arising under the Constitution, laws or treaties of the United States." Bankers' Trust Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 295, 36 S. Ct. 569, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1010.

Withdrawal of jurisdiction by Congress pending suit.—Dismissal of suit.—In Hallowell v. Commons, (1916) 239 U. S. 506, 36 S. Ct. 202, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 409, the plaintiff brought a suit to establish the equitable title of an alleged heir of an Indian allottee dying intestate during the trust period. Pending the action Congress passed the Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 431 (in title INDIANS, 1912 Supp., p. 96), providing that in such cases the Secretary of the Interior should ascertain the legal heirs of the decedent and his decision should be final and conclusive. It was held that, even if there was jurisdiction when the suit was begun, the bill was properly dismissed after the passage of the Act of Congress above cited.

Diverse citizenship not essential.—If the cause of action, as stated in the plaintiff's pleading, arises under a federal statute, the federal court has jurisdiction, though the parties are citizens of the same state and federal district. Chesbrough v. Woodworth, (1917) 244 U. S. 72, 37 S. Ct. 579, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1000.

Suit against state.—A suit by a foreign corporation against a state secretary of state and attorney-general to enjoin the enforcement by them of state statutes imposing a permit tax and a franchise tax in violation of the Federal Constitution is not a suit against a state. Looney v. Crane Co., (1917) 245 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 85, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In Greene v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 499, 37 S. Ct. 673, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1280, the court affirmed a decree, as within the jurisdiction of the District Court, enjoining state officers from taking action looking to the enforcement of certain state and local so-called franchise taxes assessed against public service corporations under state authority upon the ground of a discrimination in valuation of the intangible property upon which the taxes were based, arising out of systematic undervaluation of other taxable property.

In Johnson v. Lankford, (1918) 245 U. S. 541, 38 S. Ct. 203, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, the action was against a state bank commissioner and the surety on his bond to recover for alleged failure of the commissioner to perform his duty in consequence of which the plaintiff's deposit in a state bank was squandered, and also for arbitrarily and capriciously refusing, in violation of law and his bond, to pay plaintiff's claim as a valid claim against the guaranty fund of the state, which was available under the law of the state for payment of claims against the bank. It was held that the action was not one against the state in violation of the 11th Amendment, and that the federal District Court had jurisdiction on the ground of diverse citizenship.

The same conclusion was reached, namely, that the action was not against the state, where the plaintiff in an action against the same bank examiner and the surety on his bond was a stockholder in the bank as well as a depositor and sought to have his stockholder's liability of $2,000 offset against any sums that might be owing to him by reason of the delinquencies of the said bank examiner. Martin v. Lankford, (1918) 245 U. S. 547, 38 S. Ct. 205, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, the court saying that the action was based upon the tortious conduct of the bank examiner, not in exertion of the state law, but in violation of it.

A suit against the members of a state public safety commission to enjoin them from enforcing an order of the commission on the ground that such order was not within the purview of the state statute defining the powers of the commission is not a suit against the state. Cook v. Burnquist, (D. C. Minn. 1917) 242 Fed. 321.

In Weiland v. Pioneer Irrigation, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 519, 151 C. C. A. 455, a suit against Colorado state officials who had duties to perform in reference to the distribution of water from the streams of the state for irrigation purposes, to restrain them from violating the state law by interfering with the plaintiff's right to divert water, was held not to be a suit against the state.

Must so appear from plaintiff's statement—In general.—"A case does" so arise where an appropriate statement of the plaintiff's cause of action, unaided by any anticipation or avoidance of defenses, discloses that it really and substantially involves a dispute or controversy respecting the validity, construction, or effect of a law of Congress." Hopkins v. Walker, (1917) 244 U. S. 486, 37 S. Ct. 711, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1270.

Violation of the equal protection clause as a ground of jurisdiction was held to be sufficiently shown in a bill to enjoin state officers from taking action looking to the enforcement of certain state and local so-called franchise taxes assessed against public service corporations under state authority upon the ground of a discrimination in valuation of the intangible property upon which the taxes were based, arising out of systematic under-valuation of other taxable property. Greene v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 499, 37 S. Ct. 673, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1280.

Mere formal statement.—An allegation in a bill in equity that the cause of action was one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States does not suffice, "since it is settled that a mere formal statement to that effect is not enough" to satisfy the rule of pleading. Norton v. Whiteside, (1915) 239 U. S. 144, 36 S. Ct. 97, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 186.

In a suit by a holder of a "death benefit certificate" against a fraternal benefit society organized under the Massachusetts laws, asking for appointment of a receiver, alleging that the state statute forbidding such suit in any court of the state unless brought by the attorney-general deprived the plaintiff of the equal protection of the law, etc., it was held that no federal question was presented so as to give the court jurisdiction where the allegations in the plaintiff's bill complaining of the unconstitutionality of the statute did not constitute an essential part of the cause of action set forth and were in no way necessary thereto, and did not show that whether the remedy sought was obtainable or not depended upon the result of the constitutional question raised. Supreme Council, etc. v. Hobart, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 385, 157 C. C. A. 11.

Allegations without color of merit.—In Weber v. Freed, (1915) 239 U. S. 325, 36 S. Ct. 131, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 308, Ann. Cas. 1916C 317, the plaintiff's bill sought to compel the collector of customs to permit the entry into the United States of photographic films of a foreign prize fight, averring that the prohibition of such importation by the Act of Congress of July 31, 1912, ch. 263, § 1 (in title PRIZE FIGHTS, 1914 Supp., p. 326), was unconstitutional upon grounds stated in the bill. It was held that the bill was properly dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Construction of federal statute—Indian homestead allotment.—In Lancaster v. Kathleen Oil Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 551, 36 S. Ct. 711, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1161, plaintiffs alleged an oil and gas mining lease to them by the heirs of an Indian owner of a homestead allotment, which was recorded; that the defendant with full knowledge of plaintiff's lease obtained a subsequent lease from the same lessor covering the identical land, which was recorded and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and had gone into possession and was operating under its lease; that the plaintiff's lease though not approved by the secretary was valid, and that the defendant's lease was void because, by the Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 199 (in title INDIANS, 1909 Supp., p. 232), the land of the allottee descended free from any restriction against leasing the same for oil and gas mining purposes, and because if that Act did impose restrictions as to such lease, it was void for repugnancy to the Federal Constitution; and the prayer of the bill was that the company be enjoined, etc., as hereinafter stated. It was held that the District Court erred in dismissing the cause for want of jurisdiction as a federal court.

Riparian rights in navigable waters.—In Norton v. Whiteside, (1915) 239 U. S. 144, 36 S. Ct. 97, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 186, the plaintiff sued, from one point of view to quiet his title to a certain island which had emerged from the waters in front of his land on the Minnesota side of the upper corner of Lake Superior; or, in a broader aspect, to protect his asserted riparian rights in the submerged land in front of his shore property, the defendants being proprietors of land on the Wisconsin side, or of the whole part of the emerged island in the stretch of water between the two shores. The substance of the allegations in the bill and the relief prayed is stated in the opinion of the court, wherein it was held that no federal question was presented.

Statement of defense.—It is not enough that the plaintiff alleges some anticipated defense to his cause of action and asserts that the defense is invalidated by some provision of the Constitution of the United States. Bronson v. Emmet, etc., Counties, (N. D. Ia. 1916) 237 Fed. 212.

A federal question was not sufficiently presented in a bill by a railroad company against the lessee of its road for specific performance of a contract in the lease to furnish free annual passes to the directors and officers of the lessor plaintiff, the bill alleging that the defendant claimed to be prevented from issuing such passes by virtue of provisions in the Interstate Commerce Acts of Congress. Peterborough R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 97, 152 C. C. A. 147, quoting from Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mottley, (1908) 211 U. S. 149, 152, 29 S. Ct. 42, 43, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 126.

Suits arising under constitution.—A suit for injunction by a telephone company against a city wherein the company attacked an ordinance or resolution of the city requiring the company to remove its poles and wires from the streets as an impairment of the contract constituted by other ordinances, was a suit within the jurisdiction of the federal District Court. Mitchell v. Dakota Cent. Telephone Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 396, 38 S. Ct. 396, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The federal District Court had jurisdiction of a bill to enjoin enforcement by a city of an ordinance which would cause irreparable injury to the plaintiff street railway company and impair the obligation of a prior contract with the city. Cincinnati v. Cincinnati, etc., Traction Co., (1918) 245 U. S. 446, 38 S. Ct. 153, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, citing Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., (1901) 184 U. S. 368, 22 S. Ct. 410, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 592, and Owensboro v. Cumberland Telephone, etc., Co., (1913) 230 U. S. 58, 33 S. Ct. 988, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1389.

Every action by an interstate carrier to recover freight is necessarily based on the Interstate Commerce Act, plus the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission in carrying out the same, and presents a federal question, since the rates are fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Wells v. Cuneo, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 726.

Suit by or against federal corporation.—“As long ago as Osborn v. U. S. Bank, (1824) 9 Wheat. 738, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 204, it was settled that a suit by or against a corporation chartered by an Act of Congress is one arising under a law of the United States.” Bankers' Trust Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 295, 305, 308, 36 S. Ct. 569, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1010, 1014, 1015.

Where plaintiff or defendant is a corporation created by an Act of Congress, except in the case of national banks, the suit is one arising under the laws of the United States. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Bigger, (1915) 239 U. S. 330, 36 S. Ct. 127, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 310, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 990, 133 C. C. A. 673.

Suit against state corporation on bonds of federal corporation.—In Male v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 97, 36 S. Ct. 351, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 544, it was held that a suit in equity against a state corporation asserting liability of the defendant on certain bonds of a corporation created by an Act of Congress involves an inherently federal question, and is therefore within the original jurisdiction of the federal District Court within the reason of the rule that a suit by or against a federal corporation involves a federal question. The bonds were those of a federal railroad corporation, but the suit was brought before passage of the Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, § 5, in 1916 Supp., p. 137.

A suit by or against federal railroad corporation is now an exception to the general rule that an action by or against a federal corporation arises under a law of the United States. See Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, § 5, 1916 Supp., title JUDICIARY, p. 137.

Suits against officers of national banks.

—An action against directors in a national bank by a purchaser of its stock to recover damages for false reports of the bank's financial condition, upon which the plaintiff had relied, presents a federal question, since R. S. sec. 5239 in title NATIONAL BANKS, vol. V, p. 180, expressly authorizes recovery of such damages, and especially as it was held in Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, (1907) 206 U. S. 158, 27 S. Ct. 638, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002, and to like effect in Thomas v. Taylor, (1912) 224 U. S. 73, 32 S. Ct. 403, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 673, and Jones Nat. Bank v. Yates, (1915) 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788, that the rule expressed by that statute is exclusive and precludes a common-law liability for fraud and deceit. Chesbrough v. Woodworth, (1917) 244 U. S. 72, 37 S. Ct. 579, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1000.

Action under federal Employers' Liability Act.—Where the allegations in a complaint by an administrator to recover for death of his intestate show that the deceased was employed in interstate commerce when injured, the case arises under a law of the United States, to wit, the federal Employers' Liability Act, 1909 Supp., p. 584. Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Suit arising under mining laws.—In Hopkins v. Walker, (1917) 244 U. S. 486, 37 S. Ct. 711, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1270, it was held that the bill in a suit to remove a cloud on the title of a placer mining claim stated a case of which the District Court had jurisdiction.

Suits relating to federal land laws.—Title still in United States.—The federal courts have no jurisdiction to quiet title to public land, the title to which is in the United States. The Land Department of the United States is a special tribunal with judicial functions, and has exclusive jurisdiction of issues affecting title to the public land until patent is issued. Reed v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 234 Fed. 123.

Suits in relation to price discrimination.—The federal courts may exercise jurisdiction of suits brought to recover for price discriminations forbidden by the Clayton Act, Oct. 15, 1914, ch. 323 (1916 Supp., p. 267), although the Federal Trade Commission has not determined that there was such discrimination. Frey v. Cudahy Packing Co., (D. C. Md. 1916) 232 Fed. 640, following Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co., (1913) 230 U. S. 184, 33 S. Ct. 893, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1446, Ann. Cas. 1915A 315, wherein it was held that the federal courts had jurisdiction to award damages for the discrimination therein set up, although the Interstate Commerce Commission had not acted or been asked to act.

A bill in equity asserting a lien under the judgment of a federal court, and an intervening petition asserting title under a decree of a federal court, present federal questions. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Guardian Trust Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 166, 35 S. Ct. 334, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 579.

VI. DIVERSE CITIZENSHIP (p. 289)

State citizenship.—Where the plaintiff swore that some time before bringing the suit he had become a citizen of Maryland, and whether he had or had not depended upon the intention with which he had removed from Norfolk, Va., to Baltimore, and the District Court heard his testimony and was obviously satisfied with it, the Circuit Court of Appeals was also satisfied. Garrett v. Mallard, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 335, 151 C. C. A. 351.

A state is not a citizen.—A suit by a state suing as the real party plaintiff cannot be removed by a defendant on the ground of diverse citizenship. Title Guarantee, etc., Co. v. Idaho, (1916) 240 U. S. 136, 36 S. Ct. 345, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 566.

An action in the name of a state to recover taxes is not removable on the ground of diverse citizenship. Nevada-California Power Co. v. Hamilton, (D. C. Nev. 1916) 235 Fed. 317. Thus it has been held that a suit by a state to recover taxes on property omitted from taxation, brought against nonresidents, is not removable to the federal court. Darnell v. State, (1910) 174 Ind. 143, 90 N. E. 769.

State a real or merely nominal party.—In an action by a state for the use and benefit of certain depositors in a state bank against a nonresident former bank commissioner and the nonresident surety on his bond for losses alleged to have been suffered by each of the individuals named as the result of alleged neglect of official duty imposed by the state upon the bank commissioner, the question whether the state could be regarded as a merely nominal plaintiff in respect of the removability of the case on the ground of diverse citizenship, was mentioned but not discussed or determined by the Supreme Court, other questions being decisive. Title Guaranty, etc., Co. v. Idaho, (1916) 240 U. S. 136, 36 S. Ct. 345, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 566.

Citizenship of corporation.—"The state in which a corporation is organized determines the citizenship whether it has offices and transacts business in the state in which the suit is sought to be brought or not. Johanson v. Matson Treadwell Gold Min. Co., 225 Fed. 270." Martin v. Matson Nav. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1917) 239 Fed. 188.

"All the decisions and text-writers agree that, where one corporation is formed by the consolidation of two or more corporations, the consolidated corporation is a citizen of each state in which any one of the constituent companies was a citizen." Case v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., (W. D. S. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 862.

For jurisdictional purposes a corporation is to be regarded as a citizen of the state by whose laws it was created. Peterborough R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 97, 152 C. C. A. 147.

A corporation is a mere creature of local law, incapable of having legal existence beyond the limits of the sovereignty creating it, and it must be treated as a citizen of the state creating it, within the meaning of that clause of the Constitution extending judicial power in federal courts to controversies between citizens of different states. Thomas v. South Butte Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 968; Everett R., etc., Power Co. v. U. S., (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 806.

Incorporation under Act of Congress.—Diverse citizenship does not arise in the case of a suit by a citizen of a state against a railroad company incorporated under an Act of Congress. Bankers' Trust Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 295, 36 S. Ct. 569, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1010.

Waiver.—Where the jurisdiction is based on diverse citizenship, and the only defect as to jurisdiction is simply as to the district in which suit is brought, the objection is waived, if the parties make up the issues without objecting to the jurisdiction of the court. Collins v. Williamson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 59, 143 C. C. A. 653.

Consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction. Hence where in a bill in equity all of the several plaintiffs, except one, and all of the several defendants were citizens of the state where the suit was brought, a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction could properly be made by a defendant though he had answered to the merits. Hastings v. Hoog, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 234 Fed. 103.

Arrangement of parties as to adverse interests.—If an alignment of parties in an equity suit according to their interests makes community of citizenship between some of the plaintiffs and some of the defendants, the bill must be dismissed. Hamer v. New York Rys. Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 266, 37 S. Ct. 511, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125.

Where a minority stockholder in a corporation sued the majority stockholder and the corporation itself for an accounting of funds of the corporation alleged to have been misappropriated it was held that the corporation could not be aligned on the side of the plaintiff. Baillie v. Backus, (D. C. Ore. 1916) 230 Fed. 711.

In a suit by heirs to set aside a will and for partition of the estate, the interest of another heir who was also a legatee was adverse to the plaintiffs, and, being made a defendant, could not be aligned with the plaintiffs in determining the question of diversity of citizenship. Sutton v. English, (1918) 246 U. S. 199, 38 S. Ct. 254, 62 U. S. (L. ed.)

Proper, necessary or indispensable parties.—"In a determination of the jurisdiction of the national courts and the right to remove causes of action to them, indispensable parties only should be considered, because all others may be dismissed or disregarded, if their presence would oust or restrict the jurisdiction or the right." Rogers v. Penobscot Min. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 606, 83 C. C. A. 380, quoted and followed in Webb v. Southern R. Co., (S. D. Ala. 1916) 235 Fed. 578, 584.

There are three classes of parties to a bill in equity. They are: 1. Formal parties. 2. Persons having an interest in the controversy, and who ought to be made parties, in order that the court may act on that rule which requires it to decide on, and finally determine the entire controversy, and do complete justice, by adjusting all the rights involved in it. These persons are commonly termed necessary parties; but if their interests are separable from those of the parties before the court, so that the court can proceed to a decree, and do complete and final justice, without affecting other persons not before the court, the latter are not indispensable parties. 3. Persons who not only have an interest in the controversy, but an interest of such a nature that a final decree cannot be made without either affecting that interest, or leaving the controversy in such a condition that its final determination may be wholly inconsistent with equity and good conscience. Minnesota v. Northern Securities, Co., (1902) 184 U. S. 199, 22 S. Ct. 308, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 499, followed in Hawes v. Madison First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 51, 143 C. C. A. 645.

Where defendants brought into a suit in equity by amendment of the bill on the court's order were citizens of the same state as the plaintiff, but were not indispensable parties, the jurisdiction of the court was not ousted. Weiland v. Pioneer Irrigation Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 519, 151 C. C. A. 225.

In Seattle v. Great Northern R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1913) 239 Fed. 1009, where a Washington railroad corporation had constructed a tunnel in the city of Seattle and subsequently sold and conveyed to a foreign corporation all its properties and franchises, and had by reason of the statute of limitations ceased to be liable in damages for negligent construction and operation of said tunnel, it was not a necessary party to an action for the recovery of such damages against said foreign corporation, although the franchise and property thus conveyed were not relieved from liability.

All persons who have such an interest in the subject matter of a suit in a federal court as to render their presence necessary in order to make the final decree effectual are indispensable parties, and must be joined, although their citizenship is such as will oust the jurisdiction of the court. Hawes v. Madison First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 51, 143 C. C. A. 645.

Under the usual rule of the federal courts, if a case may be finally decided between the parties litigant without bringing others before the court, who would, generally speaking, be necessary parties, such parties may be dispensed with, if they are citizens of another state. This in no real sense conflicts with the principle that, if those not before the court have rights so closely related to the issues between the parties in court that a final decision cannot be made between them without affecting the rights of those not before the court, then the court may not dispense with such persons. Ex p. Equitable Trust Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 571, 145 C. C. A. 457.

Representative parties—In general.—It is settled that the jurisdiction of the federal courts depends upon the personal citizenship of the parties to the record and not upon the citizenship of the parties whom they represent. Memphis St. R. Co. v. Bobo, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 708, 146 C. C. A. 63a.

An action by a trustee in bankruptcy brought in a state court to recover property fraudulently transferred by the bankrupt—an action authorized by section 70e of the Bankruptcy Act—may be removed to the federal court on the ground of diverse citizenship. Ewing v. Leszynsky, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 811, denying motion to remand.

Suit by foreign administrator.—In the absence of a state statute authorizing a foreign administrator to sue in its courts, a nonresident administrator cannot institute and maintain an action for damages on account of the death of his decedent by negligence against a resident individual or corporation on the ground of diverse citizenship. Klug v. Martinsburg Power Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1916) 229 Fed. 861.

In holding that, on the face of a declaration in an action by a citizen of Arkansas in his representative capacity as administrator appointed by a Tennessee probate court against a Tennessee corporation, there was the requisite diversity of citizenship to give the federal District Court in Tennessee jurisdiction, the court accepted as conclusive a decision by the highest court of Tennessee that a Tennessee statute providing that certain nonresident executors and administrators shall be treated as citizens of Tennessee was to be construed, in connection with other statutes of the state, as enacted for the sole purpose of extending the privilege of suing in the state courts in forma pauperis, and consequently that the statute did not exclude nonresident executors or administrators from resort to federal courts under appropriate conditions.

Several parties plaintiff or defendant.—Where there are two or more joint plaintiffs and two or more defendants and suit is brought jointly, each of the plaintiffs must be capable of suing each of the defendants, in order to support the jurisdiction founded on diverse citizenship. Hastings v. Hoag, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 234 Fed. 103.

Where a party made a defendant to a bill in equity by voluntary intervention was a citizen of the same state with the plaintiffs, an application of the plaintiffs and said defendant to amend the bill by striking out the latter was granted against the other defendant's objection, there being no contention that the application was collusively made, and it appearing to the court that said defendant was not an indispensable, though a proper party. Jennings v. Smith, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 242 Fed. 561.

Where a bill was brought by citizens of Louisiana against citizens of Georgia, including permanent administrators of a decedent's estate, to have the plaintiffs declared next of kin and heirs entitled to the entire estate, alleging that several of the defendants claimed the entire estate adversely to the plaintiffs, another citizen of Louisiana, who was made a defendant and whose interest in the estate, if he had any, would be merely in common with the others whose rights rested on the same ground with his, was held not to be an indispensable party; and, his citizenship being the same as the plaintiffs, he was stricken from the bill by amendment on his and their application. Jennings v. Smith, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 242 Fed. 561.

Pleading citizenship.—A corporation can be a citizen of only the state which created it and an allegation in a complaint that the defendant "is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey" in legal intentment, avers citizenship and is sufficient to confer jurisdiction on a federal court. De Biasi v. Normandy Water Co., (D. C. N. J. 1915) 228 Fed. 234.

In Peterborough R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 97, 152 C. C. A. 147, holding that the federal District Court in New Hampshire had no jurisdiction on the ground of diverse citizenship of a suit in which the plaintiff was alleged to be a New Hampshire corporation and a citizen of that state and the defendant was alleged to be a Massachusetts corporation and a citizen of that state, the court took judicial notice that the defendant was a public corporation organized and existing under the laws of New Hampshire, doing business in said state, and therefore a citizen thereof.

Jurisdictional question as issue of fact.—In Kever v. Philadelphia, etc., Coal, etc., Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 814, the plaintiff demanding a trial by jury upon the question of citizenship, the court said: "While questions of jurisdiction may be disposed of upon motion, when they depend upon questions of law from facts appearing in the record, it would seem that either party should be entitled to demand a jury trial as to any issue which substantially goes to the merits of a cause of action, which must be tried by a jury, if either of the parties so demand. While, therefore, the question of citizenship might be a conclusion of law, if the facts are admitted or settled, nevertheless, in the present condition of the case, it would seem that the plaintiff has a right to insist that a plea of this nature be tried as one of the essential elements of the cause of action, as to which a jury trial is a matter of right."

Similarly, in Lehigh Val. Coal Co. v. Washka, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 42, 145 C. C. A. 230, it was stated "that if the defendant elects to plead the jurisdictional question, when this is raised for the first time upon the trial, the court should proceed to a determination of the facts from which the question of jurisdiction should be judged. If that question is decided against the defendant, or if he be held to have waived his right to object, the court may then proceed with the trial of the action upon the merits. Thus the court may leave the issue on the merits to the jury, conditional upon the finding by the jury in favor of the plaintiff upon the jurisdictional question."

VII. SUITS BETWEEN CITIZENS AND ALIENS (p. 297)

Several parties plaintiffs and defendants.—The authorities are in conflict as to whether a federal court has jurisdiction of a case where citizens of a state are plaintiffs and citizens of a different state and aliens are defendants. It has been held that such a case would fall within the federal jurisdiction. Bradshaw v. Bowden, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 226 Fed. 323. See to the same effect Ryan v. Ohmer, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 165.

X. ANCILLARY PROCEEDINGS (p. 298)

Meaning of term.—"An ancillary bill or suit may, in a general way, be said to be a suit or proceeding in equity growing out of a prior suit in the same court, dependent upon, and instituted for the purpose either of impeaching or enforcing the judgment or decree in the prior suit, to the end that more complete justice may be done among all parties in interest; and the jurisdiction of such a suit is dependent upon the jurisdiction of the court of the prior suit." Ferguson v. Omaha, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 513, 142 C. C. A. 145.

In federal court.—Where a plaintiff began several actions at law in a federal court against a guaranty company, all being cognizable in that court because arising under a law of the United States, and the guaranty company, conceiving that it had a partial equitable defense, not admissible at law, which was common to all the cases, and other partial defenses in particular cases, exhibited in that court a bill describing the actions at law, setting forth the defenses, showing that nothing was in controversy beyond the defenses, and praying that the entire matter be examined and adjudicated in a single proceeding in equity and further proceedings at law enjoined, this bill was properly framed as a dependent and ancillary bill and the court had jurisdiction to entertain it as such in virtue of the jurisdiction already acquired. Eichel v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (1917) 245 U. S. 102, 38 S. Ct. 47, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A bill was not ancillary to foreclosure proceedings in which a decree had been entered and a sale had thereunder where to set up a wholly independent cause of action concerning which no reservation was made in the decree of foreclosure. Hamer v. New York Rys. Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 266, 37 S. Ct. 511, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125.

"The law is that the jurisdiction of the court as regards the principal suit cannot be questioned in an ancillary proceeding or suit. . . . The rule is that neither the citizenship of the parties nor any other factor that would ordinarily determine jurisdiction has any bearing on the right of the court to entertain jurisdiction of an ancillary suit." McCabe v. Guaranty Trust Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 845, 156 C. C. A. 357.

A federal court has jurisdiction of a suit ancillary or supplemental to a suit pending in such court, without regard to the citizenship of the parties, the amount in controversy, or the nature of the controversy. Kirkland v. Knox, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 806, 145 C. C. A. 116.

Appeal bonds.—"A suit on a bond given on appeal is not an original suit, but an outbranch of the suit in which the bond was given, and the jurisdiction of the original suit gives jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the suit on the bond." American Surety Co. v. Shultz, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 280, 138 C. C. A. 522.

Recovery of assets.—Where suit was brought to recover property claimed by the receivers as part of their trust estate, the possession of which was refused by the defendants, and the receivers were appointed by the federal court in which the suit was brought, and pursuant to its order, such suit was held to be auxiliary to the main action in which they had been appointed and the court had jurisdiction irrespective of the citizenship of the parties or the amount involved. Kirkland v. Knox, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 806, 145 C. C. A. 116.

A bill, by a purchaser at a foreclosure sale, filed in the same court as the original suit to foreclose the mortgage, for the purpose of determining the rights of third parties claiming to have acquired, during the pendency of the foreclosure suit, some right or interest in or to a portion of the premises included in the mortgages is ancillary to the main suit and one of which the court has jurisdiction. Ferguson v. Omaha, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 513, 142 C. C. A. 145.

In state court.—A purely ancillary suit is not removable to a federal court apart from the original suit. State v. Flannelly, (1916) 96 Kan. 833, 154 Pac. 235.

XI. CRIMES AND OFFENSES (p. 299)

Nature of jurisdiction.—The District Court, which has jurisdiction of all crimes cognizable under the authority of the United States, acts equally within its jurisdiction whether it decides a man to be guilty or innocent under the criminal law, and whether its decision is right or wrong. An objection that the indictment does not charge a crime against the United States goes only to the merits of the case. Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 60, 36 S. Ct. 255, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 526.

Common-law offenses.—While it is well settled that there are no common-law offenses against the United States, it is also quite well settled by the decisions of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia that this does not apply to the District of Columbia. Tyner v. U. S., (1904) 23 App. Cas. (D. C.) 324. See to the same effect Harrison v. Moyer, (N. D. Ga. 1915) 224 Fed. 224.

XII. PLACE OF BRINGING SUIT (p. 302)

The word "only" as used in this section must, it is held, be construed as synonymous with the word "alone," that is, "of or by itself," "without anything more," "exclusive," and, so considered, it would seem that, when it is sought to found jurisdiction on diversity of citizenship and also upon another jurisdictional fact, the case would not fall within this exception. Memphis v. Board of Directors, (W. D. Tenn. 1916) 228 Fed. 802.

"Diversity of citizenship alone would not suffice where neither plaintiffs nor defendants were residents or citizens of the state of the forum." Albert v. Bascom, (W. D. Tex. 1917) 245 Fed. 149.

Where there is only one defendant and the jurisdiction depends on diversity of citizenship alone, the suit must be brought in either the district of the residence of the defendant or of the plaintiff, and not in the district where the defendant is found. Camp v. Gress, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 549.

Suits by and against aliens and foreign corporations.—An alien is not within the language and purpose of this section, and may be sued in any district in which he can be served with process. Keating v. Pennsylvania Co., (N. D. Ohio, 1917) 245 Fed. 155.

An alien, although resident in a state, can maintain a suit against a citizen of the United States only in the district in which defendant resides or is an inhabitant. Lehigh Val. Co. v. Washko, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 42, 145 C. C. A. 230; Kuzma v. Witherbee, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 232 Fed. 286; Vitkus v. Clyde Steamship Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 288; Lukosewicz v. Philadelphia, etc., Coal, etc., Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 292.

"While citizens of states may sue in the state of the citizenship of either plaintiff or defendant, aliens, though living in a state can sue only in the state of defendant's citizenship, and for the same reason a citizen may sue an alien wherever process can be served on him, though the alien lives, is resident, in another state than that of plaintiff or the court. So an alien, resident, in the sense of living, in Montana, cannot bring suit in this court [in Montana] against a citizen of Idaho, though a citizen of Montana, residing in Idaho, can, all because citizenship, not residence controls." Best v. Great Northern R. Co., (D. C. Mont. 1917) 243 Fed. 789.

Venue of action by an informer to recover a penalty given him by a federal statute is not governed by this section, but by R. S. sec. 732, now constituting Judicial Code, § 43, 1912 Supp. p. 152. Tomkins v. Paterson, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 238 Fed. 879.

Contempt proceeding.—Upon examination of a proceeding for contempt for violation of an injunctive order, it was held in Mitchell v. Dexter, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 926, 157 C. C. A. 276, that the proceeding was civil in nature, and not distinguishable in that behalf from Gompers v. Bucks Stove, etc., Co., (1911) 221 U. S. 418, 31 S. Ct. 492, 55 S. (L. ed.) 797, 34 L. R. A. (N. S. 874, and that a federal District Court in Wisconsin had no authority to issue a writ directed to the marshal for the district of Massachusetts for the arrest of a person in the latter state and his removal to the Wisconsin district to answer for violation of an injunction.

Foreclosure proceedings.—A suit to foreclose a purchase-money mortgage may be brought in the district in which the land is located without regard to the citizenship of the parties. Burke v. Mountain Timber Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 224 Fed. 591.

Waiver of objections.—Where a bill sufficiently alleged diversity of citizenship, but did not allege residence in the district where the suit was brought, an objection for absence of the residential allegations came too late when made for the first time after a full hearing on a motion for a preliminary injunction. Great Lakes, etc., Transp. Co. v. Scranton Coal Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 603, 152 C. C. A. 437.

XIII. SUITS BY ASSIGNEES (p. 306)

History and purpose of the provision.—"This limitation on the jurisdiction of the United States courts has with some changes been in continuous force since the Judiciary Act of 1789. The history of this provision is set forth in the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of New Orleans v. Quinlan, 173 U. S. 191, 19 S. Ct. 329, 43 L. Ed. 64; the three acts governing the matter before the enactment of the new Judicial Code being section 11 of the Judiciary Act of 1789, the act of March 3, 1875, and the act of March 3, 1887, as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888. The purpose of this provision of the law seems to have been twofold: First, to narrow the jurisdiction of the District Court, as granted in the immediately preceding portion of the first subdivision of section 24 of the Judicial Code, over suits between citizens of different states and between citizens of a state and foreign states, citizens or subjects; and, second, to prevent the creation of jurisdiction in the District Courts by assignment made for the purpose of bringing about an apparent diversity of citizenship." Baltimore Trust Co. v. Scriven County, (S. D. Ga. 1916) 238 Fed. 834.

"The intent of the statute was to prevent citizens of the same state from creating a diversity of citizenship by assignment, and from thereby conferring upon the assignee by indirection a right to sue in the courts of the United States which otherwise he would not have possessed. Lipschitz v. Napa Fruit Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 698, 139 C. C. A. 228.

A suit to recover the contents of a chose in action can only be maintained in a federal court where the assignor could have sued in that court if no assignment had been made. Clear Lake Power, etc., Co. v. Craig, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 598, 141 C. C. A. 354; Brown v. Ketcher, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 92, 145 C. C. A. 280.

Jurisdiction must appear on record.—"The decisions of this court have settled the following propositions . . . That the bill or other pleading must contain an averment showing that the suit could have been maintained by the assignor if no assignment had been made." Kolze v. Hoadley, (1906) 200 U. S. 76, 26 S. Ct. 220, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 377.

In Houck v. Bank of Brinkley, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 881, 155 C. C. A. 469, reversing judgment for the plaintiff in a federal District Court in Missouri, and directing a dismissal for want of jurisdiction, the court, premising that the note in suit was payable to bearer under the law merchant and under the Negotiable Instruments Law of Missouri, said: "The note in question is payable to the order of the makers thereof, and is not a liability of such makers until it is negotiated or transferred by them."

Citizenship at time suit commenced.—Where the citizenship of an assignor of a chose in action is material, it has all been considered with reference to the time when the action is commenced. Lips v. Napa Fruit Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 698, 139 C. C. A. 228.

Actual relation of parties controls.—A federal District Court in Georgia had jurisdiction of an action by Baltimore banks against a Georgia county and Georgia guarantors on notes made by the county to a Georgia bank, which transferred them to the plaintiffs, where it appeared that the payee was only a nominal party to the notes, with no beneficial interest whatever in them, but merely acted as agent for the maker in negotiating the notes, and had no right of action on the notes. Baltimore Trust Co. v. Screven County, (S. D. Ga. 1916) 238 Fed. 834.

To what assignment or transfer applicable.—The federal court has jurisdiction of a suit against an alien by a citizen administrator of a citizen assignee of an alien. Sands v. Carruthers, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 243 Fed. 636.

The term "chose in action."—The words of this section refer only to a cause of action based on contract. Stotesbury v. Huber, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 237 Fed. 413, citing Kolze v. Hoadley, (1906) 200 U. S. 76, 26 S. Ct. 220, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 377, and Shoecraft v. Bloxham, (1888) 124 U. S. 730, 8 S. Ct. 686, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 574.

This provision in the statute did not preclude a suit by the assignee of an oil and gas mining lease in Oklahoma against the landowners and a second lessee to restrain the latter from drilling the land for oil and gas and to cancel his lease as a cloud on the plaintiff's title, although the plaintiff and his immediate assignor were citizens of the same state, where the plaintiff was not seeking to enforce any executory contractual provisions of the lease, and was asserting no claim based upon either tort or breach of contract arising in favor of his assignor and assigned by him. Shaffer v. Marks, (E. D. Okla. 1917) 241 Fed. 139.

Whether a claim is a chose in action is a question of interpretation as applied to particular facts. Clear Lake Power, etc., Co. v. Woodland Bank, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 213 Fed. 109, affirmed (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 698, 141 C. C. A. 454.

Deed to be considered mortgage as "chose in action."—In Clear Lake Power, etc., Co. v. Capay Ditch Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 634, 141 C. C. A. 390, reversing (N. D. Cal. 1914) 213 Fed. 399, it appeared that the plaintiff had acquired by conveyance the title to land which its predecessor in interest had subjected to a lien by executing an instrument in form a deed but intended to be a mortgage. The mortgage lien had expired by limitation, but the deed constituted a cloud upon the plaintiff's title. The District Court held that the instrument was a chose in action, and an action to have it declared a mortgage fell within the terms of this section. But in reversal, the Circuit Court of Appeals held that in its essential features the cause of suit was one to quiet title to real estate and that the bill to redeem being based upon the effect imposed by a state statute upon the instrument executed by the complainant's predecessor in interest to the defendant, the suit was not based upon any chose in action and therefore did not fall within the terms of this section. See also Clear Lake Power, etc., Co. v. Stephens, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 642, 141 C. C. A. 398; Clear Lake Power, etc., Co. v. Adamson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 645, 141 C. C. A. 401.

A suit by the grantee of standing timber to prevent by injunction trespass and conversion of timber on the ground that it would result in irreparable injury for which there is not adequate remedy at law is not a suit by an assignor, etc., within this section. Crown Orchard Co. v. Dennis, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 652, 144 C. C. A. 62, distinguishing but following on the question of jurisdiction, Ambler v. Epinger, (1890) 137 U. S. 480, 11 S. Ct. 173, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 765.

Share in a decedent's estate.—An assignment of a share amounting to a stated sum out of a supposed larger legacy is not within the language of this section, as a legacy establishes a beneficial and not a contractual claim. Stotesbury v. Huber, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 237 Fed. 413.

An action for money had and received was held not to be a suit to recover upon any promissory note, or other chose in action. Manasha Wooden Ware Co. v. Southern Oregon Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 83, 156 C. C. A. 511, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 90, 156 C. C. A. 518.

Pleading citizenship of corporation.—Where it is alleged in the complaint in an action on a note, that it was given to a corporation "duly chartered, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws" of a state other than that of the plaintiff's residence and the articles of incorporation, the due incorporation and existence of the corporation were admitted by stipulation, it is equivalent to an admission that the corporation was chartered and existed under the laws of that other state and was a citizen thereof. Piedmont Carolina R. Co. v. Shaw, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 973, 138 C. C. A. 227.

XIV. SERVICE OF PROCESS (p. 311)

The conformity Acts.—"It is settled law that jurisdiction cannot be acquired in an action begun in this court by the issue and levy of an attachment, but that personal service of process upon the defendant is indispensable." Cleveland, etc., Coal Co. v. J. H. Hillman, etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 245 Fed. 200.

Jurisdiction by attachment.—In Missouri Valley Bridge, etc., Co. v. Blake, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 417, 145 C. C. A. 411, where jurisdiction of the state court was obtained over a nonresident defendant corporation only by attachment of its property pursuant to the state statute, it was held that the case was properly removed by said defendant, the court saying: "We are of opinion that the state court had acquired jurisdiction by the levy under the attachment and the execution of the order of publication. This jurisdiction was not lost by removal to the federal court, although the latter court could not have acquired original jurisdiction by attachment and publication. Craddock v. Fulton, (N. D. W. Va. 1905) 140 Fed. 426; Courtney v. Pradt, [1905] 196 U. S. 89, 25 S. Ct. 208, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 398."

Jurisdiction by substituted service.—In Hudson Nav. Co. v. Murray, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 236 Fed. 419, a bill was filed in the New Jersey Court of Chancery, and the defendant being a nonresident and not found in the state, the court made an order as authorized by the New Jersey statute directing the defendant to appear, plead, answer or demur within two months and providing for service upon him of notice of the pendency of the suit. The notice was duly served and the defendant removed the case to the federal court on the ground of diverse citizenship, in which court he specially appeared and moved to vacate the order for service made by the state court and the service itself. The court held that the order and service constituted due process of law and the defendant's motion was denied.

Privilege from service of civil process.—In Stewart v. Ramsay, (1916) 242 U. S. 128, 37 S. Ct. 44, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 192, where jurisdiction of the federal District Court in Illinois was invoked on the ground of diverse citizenship, the defendant pleaded in abatement that he was a resident of Colorado and was served with process while in attendance upon the District Court as a witness in a case wherein he was plaintiff, and that the process was served while he was returning from the court room after testifying. Judgment sustaining this plea on demurrer thereto was affirmed.

On foreign corporation.—A federal District Court has no jurisdiction to enforce a personal liability, in the absence of consent, unless it is doing business within the state in such manner and to such extent as to warrant the inference that it is present there. And even if it is doing business within the state, the process will be valid only if served upon some authorized agent; service of summons upon the president of a foreign corporation while he was passing through the state, engaged exclusively on personal matters unconnected with the company's affairs, was insufficient. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. McKibbin, 243 U. S. 264, 37 S. Ct. 280, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 710.

Service of process on a foreign corporation doing no business in the state by serving summons upon its president temporarily in the federal district and not engaged in the transaction of any business for or on account of the corporation, was insufficient. Meisukas v. Greenough Red Ash Coal Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 54, 37 S. Ct. 593, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 987.

In Toledo R., etc., Co. v. Hill, (1917) 244 U. S. 49, 37 S. Ct. 591, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 982, it was held, upon the facts there stated, that the foreign corporation defendant was not doing business in the state where the suit was brought, and service of process upon a director and vice-president residing in that state was insufficient to confer jurisdiction over it.

Service upon a sales agent of a corporation who resided in the Eastern District of New York, but who had his office in the Southern District was insufficient service upon the corporation to give jurisdiction to the federal court in the Eastern District, where the corporation made sales and deliveries of coal in the Eastern District, but had no regular place of business or representative in that district. Harasimowicz v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 295.

A sales agent of a foreign corporation, without discretionary powers, and acting under the direction and control of the home office, is not a managing agent within the meaning of a state statute authorizing service upon such agent. American Oil, etc., Co. v. Western Gas Constr. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 505, 152 C. C. A. 383.

"A service in an action at law on a foreign corporation in conformity to a state statute is good in the federal courts, unless the notice thus provided is not adequate according to the rules of due process of law." Beach v. Kerr Turbine Co., (N. D. Ohio, 1917) 243 Fed. 706.

Who is "a managing agent" of a foreign corporation within the meaning of a state statute requiring service upon him in an action against such corporation, was discussed and on the facts of the case it was held that a valid service was made in that manner in Beach v. Kerr Turbine Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 243 Fed. 706, holding also that the corporation was doing business in the state.

I. CASES INVOLVING FEDERAL QUESTION (p. 313)

Questions involved already settled.—In Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. American Cotton Oil Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 11, 143 C. C. A. 313, holding a case removable as one based upon the Carmack amendment of the Interstate Commerce Act and therefore presenting a federal question, the court said: "It is insisted with apparent earnestness by the appellee that no cause is removable where the law involved has once been decided, construed, and settled by the Supreme Court of the United States; and the Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, [1910] 219 U. S. 186, 31 S. Ct. 164, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 167, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 7, is referred to as having construed and settled the Carmack Amendment. Since, however, the law relating to removal of causes because of a federal question is precisely the same as that upon which the original jurisdiction of the federal court because of such question depends, this contention, if meritorious, would seem to destroy the original jurisdiction and the right of removal as well."

Other questions involved.—Where a cause of action involving a federal question is united with a cause of action that is nonremovable, the entire case may be removed. Bedell v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ohio, 1917) 245 Fed. 788, 791.

Suit based on Carmack amendment.—A case in a state court based upon the Carmack Amendment of the Interstate Commerce Act was removable as presenting a federal question. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. American Cotton Oil Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 11, 143 C. C. A. 313.

Case involving federal land laws.—See State Improvement-Development Co. v. Leininger, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 884.

Patent laws.—See Charroin v. Romort Mfg. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 1011.

Action on federal Employers' Liability Act.—A federal question appears where the allegations in a complaint against an interstate railroad company to recover for personal injuries show that plaintiff was employed in interstate commerce when injured; and the action would be removable were it not for the proviso in Judicial Code, § 28, 1912 Supp., p. 144, forbidding removal of actions based on the federal Employers' Liability Act. Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A suit by a postmaster to enjoin a post office inspector from removing and delivering to any third party any of the property in plaintiff's possession as postmaster, alleging that the defendant claimed that the plaintiff had been removed and alleging that said removal was unlawful, was removable from a state court to the federal court, regardless of the amount in controversy. Porter v. Coble, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 244, 158 C. C. A. 404.

Joinder in petition for removal.—In State Improvement-Development Co. v. Leininger, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 884, the court expressed the opinion that where a suit involves a federal question as to one alone of several defendants, it is not necessary that his codefendants shall unite with him in a petition for removal on that ground, in order to entitle him to a removal.

How federal question presented.—Whether a case is removable or not as one arising under the laws of the United States is to be determined by the allegations of plaintiff's complaint or petition, and if the case does not thus appear to be removable, it cannot be made removable by any statement in the petition for removal or in subsequent pleadings by the defendant. Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Whether a case is removable as one arising under the laws of the United States "depends upon the plaintiff's declaration." American Well Works Co. v. Layne, etc., Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 257, 36 S. Ct. 585, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 987.

"There can be no removal on such grounds unless they necessarily appear in the complaint, and that, too, unaided by anything alleged in anticipation or in avoidance of defenses which may be interposed." Nevada-California Power Co. v. Hamilton, (D. C. Nev. 1916) 235 Fed. 317.

"A federal defense has never been considered to be a cause for removal from a state court to a federal court. Whether a statute or law of the United States is involved in an action must be ascertained from the allegations contained in the declaration." Smith v. Barnett, (W. D. N. Y. 1917) 242 Fed. 83, remanding a case because the alleged federal question, if any, consisted of a defense based on the effect of the Interstate Commerce Act.

Speaking of an action by the state to recover taxes under Nevada Rev. Laws, § 3661, the court said: "It is impossible to assume that such an action could be removed to this court on the ground that it does or may involve a question arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States." Nevada-California Power Co. v. Hamilton, (D. C. Nev. 1916) 235 Fed. 317.

II. DIVERSE CITIZENSHIP AND ALIENAGE

1. In General (p. 315)

A state is not a citizen.—See cases under this side head in notes to vol. IV, p. 265, § 1, supra, at p. 1258.

Action by assignee.—A suit against an alien by a citizen administrator of a citizen assignee of an alien is removable. Sands v. Carruthers, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 243 Fed. 636.

Both plaintiff and defendant nonresidents.—"An action brought in a state court outside of the federal court district of the plaintiff's residence is not, on objection of plaintiff, removable to the federal court on the petition of the defendant, who is a resident of another state," on the ground of diverse citizenship. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Hodge, (1916) 53 Okla. 427, 157 Pac. 60, followed in Ft. Smith, etc., R. Co. v. Knott, (Okla. 1916) 159 Pac. 847. "A suit commenced in a state court in a federal district, of which neither plaintiff nor defendant are residents, though they are residents of different states, cannot be removed to the federal court of the state wherein the action is pending, for the reason that such federal court had no jurisdiction of the original suit." Gist v. Equitable Surety Co., (1915) 161 Wis. 79, 151 N. W. 382, where such removal on the ground of diverse citizenship was denied. "It is well settled that . . . a controversy between a citizen of one state and a citizen of another state in a third state is not removable." Stewart v. Cybur Lumber Co., (1916) 111 Miss. 844, 72 So. 276.

3. How Amount in Controversy Made to Appear (p. 319)

From the record.—A plaintiff having a claim exceeding the jurisdictional amount for removal may sue for a sum less than the jurisdictional amount and thus prevent the defendant from removing the case. Harley v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1913) 245 Fed. 471.

Counterclaim.—Where the plaintiff's pleading in an action at law fixed the amount in controversy at $2,950 and the defendant pleaded a counterclaim of $158.40, and removed the cause, it was remanded because the amount in controversy was less than $3,000. Harley v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1913) 245 Fed. 471.

4. Who May Remove the Suit (p. 320)

Only the defendant.—Where a defendant filed an answer and cross-complaint at the same time with his petition and bond for removal, wherein he sought a personal judgment against the plaintiff, he thereby became a plaintiff and ceased to be a "defendant" entitled to remove the case. Hansen v. Pacific Coast Asphalt Cement Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 243 Fed. 283.

One not a party to the record.—In First Nat. Bank v. Pancake, (1916) 172 N. C. 513, 90 S. E. 515, after the death of the nonresident defendant, certain parties filed a purported certificate of their qualifications as executors by appointment of a court in a sister state, and without leave declared themselves parties defendant and filed a petition for removal. The court held that "not having been made parties by any order of court, and not having presented a case which would have entitled them to be recognized as parties, they were not in condition to ask for removal."

Aliens.—A foreign corporation and an alien individual who were sued jointly in tort in a court of the state of which the plaintiffs were citizens, had a right as "nonresidents" to remove the suit to the federal court, although the alien was a resident of that state, the word "nonresidents" being construed as "non-citizens" of the state. Best v. Great Northern R. Co., (D. C. Mont. 1917) 243 Fed. 789.

One of several necessary defendants cannot alone remove the cause, where there is no separable controversy. O'Neil v. Birdseye, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 254.

5. Petition for Removal (p. 322)

Averment of citizenship.—Where a defendant seeking to remove a case brought against him by a citizen shows merely that he is a citizen of the United States, and the record is barren of evidence that he is a citizen of any state, he must be regarded as a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff and therefore not entitled to removal on the ground of diversity of citizenship. Hough v. Societe Electrique Westinghouse de Russie, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 341.

Of corporation.—An averment that a corporation is a citizen of a particular state is insufficient; the averment should be that it is a corporation organized under the laws of that state. Fentress Coal, etc., Co. v. Elmore, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 328, 153 C. C. A. 254, reversing a judgment for the plaintiff in a case removed on such insufficient petition, but with leave to amend the record in the court below, and thus support the judgment, by making the proper averment.

Fraudulent joinder to prevent removal.—In a petition for removal by a non-resident lessee railroad company of an action of tort against said company and its resident lessor, an allegation that the said lessor company was "wrongfully, fraudulently and falsely" made a party for the sole purpose of preventing removal to the federal court, without any intention on the part of the plaintiff of proving against it any of the tortious acts alleged by the plaintiff, was on its face insufficient under the decisions of the federal Supreme Court. McAllister v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 302, 37 S. Ct. 274, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 735.

III. SEPARABLE CONTROVERSIES

2. Who May Remove (p. 328)

Alien.—In Hough v. Societe Electrique Westinghouse de Russie, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 635, the court allowed an alien defendant to remove a case on the ground of a separable controversy, but the question whether an alien had a right of removal on that ground was not raised or discussed. In Bradshaw v. Bowden, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 226 Fed. 323, it seems to have been assumed that an alien defendant may remove a suit on the ground of a separable controversy.

4. Separable Character of Controversy (p. 329) .

The federal court will follow the state rule as to whether a cause of action is entire. Beckwith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 223 Fed. 858.

Event of suit not a test.—“In Lathrop, etc., Co. v. Interior Constr., etc., Co., [1909] 215 U. S. 246, 30 S. Ct. 76, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 177, it was held that where the plaintiff insisted on the joint liability of the nonresident and resident defendants, the dismissal of the complaint on the merits as to the defendants who were citizens of the same state with the plaintiff did not make the case then removable, and did not prevent the plaintiff from taking a verdict against the defendants, who might have removed the suit had they been sued alone, or had there originally been a separable controversy as to them.” American Car, etc., Co. v. Kettelhake, (1915) 236 U. S. 311, 35 S. Ct. 355, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 594.

Where the defendants are charged with a joint negligence in the state court it is not necessary that the recovery upon the trial be against all in order to constitute a nonseparable controversy. Beckwith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 223 Fed. 858.

Misjoinder.—In Hough v. Societe Electrique Westinghouse de Russie, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 635, an action at law, Judge Learned Hand said: “The question whether the controversies are separable depends altogether upon the way the plaintiff has laid his action.”

“It has become the settled law of the Supreme Court of the United States that, whether the action is joint or several only is a question exclusively for the state court to determine.” Rountree v. Mt. Hood R. Co., (D. C. Ore. 1916) 228 Fed. 1010.

Where the grievances alleged in a complainant's bill raise one controversy, which can be fully determined without the presence of another party, “that its determination also concludes or precludes another is no reason why it should not be treated as a separable one, and be subject to removal into the federal court.” English v. Supreme Conclave, etc., (D. C. N. J. 1916) 235 Fed. 630, distinguishing Regis v. United Drug Co., (C. C. Mass. 1910) 180 Fed. 201.

“An action of tort, which might have been brought against many persons or against any one or more of them, and which is brought in a state court against all jointly, contains no separate controversy which will authorize its removal by some of the defendants into the Circuit Court of the United States, even if they file separate answers and set up different defenses from the other defendants, and allege that they are not jointly liable with them, and that their own controversy with the plaintiff is a separate one. . . . A separate defense may defeat a joint recovery, but it cannot deprive a plaintiff of his right to prosecute his suit to final decision in his own way. The cause of action is the subject-matter of the controversy, and that is, for all the purposes of the suit, whatever the plaintiff declares it to be in his pleadings.” Powers v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1898) 169 U. S. 92, 18 S. Ct. 264, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 673.

Action against master and servant.—In an action by a servant against the master and another to recover damages for personal injuries, both being charged with negligence, there is no separable controversy. Deutsch v. Alaska Gastineau Min. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 237 Fed. 215, citing Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Willard, (1911) 220 U. S. 413, 31 S. Ct. 460, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 521.

Where the plaintiff's pleading in an action of tort against master and servant for personal injuries shows an individual liability on the part of the servant, there is no separable controversy. Southern R. Co. v. Sewell, (1916) 18 Ga. App. 544, 90 S. E. 94.

Action of tort against lessor and lessee railroad company.—Where the plaintiff's pleading in an action against a resident lessor railroad company and its nonresident lessee railroad company to recover for negligently running over and killing plaintiff's intestate in the operation of the road, stated a cause of action against the lessor company, according to the decisions of the highest court of the state, the lessee railroad company had no removable separable controversy. McAllister v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 302, 37 S. Ct. 274, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 735.

In the case of Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. McWhirt, (1917) 243 U. S. 422, 37 S. Ct. 392, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 826, U. S. Adv. Ops. 1916, p. 392, affirming (Mo. 1916) 187 S. W. 830, an action for personal injuries by negligence was brought in a Missouri state court against two railroad companies, one incorporated in Missouri and the other in Illinois. The former had constructed and still owned the railroad, and the latter was operating it under a lease. The court said: “The latter sought to remove the case against it into the federal court upon the ground that the same involved a distinct and separable controversy between citizens of different states. But the petition for removal was denied, and rightly so. Under the local law the case stated in the plaintiff's pleading was one of joint liability on the part of the defendants, and, for the purpose of passing upon the petition for removal, this was decisive of the nature of the controversy, there being no showing that the defendants were fraudulently joined for the purpose of preventing a removal."

Malicious prosecution and false imprisonment.—In Bradshaw v. Bowden, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 226 Fed. 323, the court said: "Plaintiff, in his complaint, after alleging jurisdictional facts, states (paragraph II): 'That on the 15th day of August, 1914, the defendants herein, the defendant corporation through its duly accredited officers, agents, and servants, and its codefendants, wrongfully and unlawfully entered into, arrested the plaintiff and imprisoned the plaintiff in the common jail of the city of Seattle, and kept him imprisoned in said jail without color of authority, and in furtherance of said scheme and confederation as aforesaid, until August 19, 1914, when plaintiff was liberated in manner and form hereinafter set out'—and further sets out that, upon a hearing in court upon such alleged unlawful and fraudulent charge, plaintiff was fully exonerated and discharged, and that he was compelled to go to large expense, and alleges injury to this good name and reputation in the sum of $25,000, which he seeks to recover from each of the defendants. The plaintiff, in his complaint, has elected to sue the defendants jointly, and upon the face of the complaint, which was the only pleading on file at the time the removal was ordered, there is no separable controversy between the plaintiff and the petitioning defendant, and the cause is therefore not removable upon that ground. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Willard, [1911] 220 U. S. 413, 31 S. Ct. 460, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 521."

A suit in equity by a receiver of a railroad company against a nonresident railroad company and resident individuals to enjoin them from carrying out a conspiracy to injure plaintiff's company by violating a certain contract with him as to routing of traffic, did not show a removable separable controversy with the defendant railroad company, as the action was brought essentially in tort against all the defendants as wrongdoers. Smith v. Barnett, (W. D. N. Y. 1917) 242 Fed. 83.

Suit in equity against conspirators.—In a suit in equity against several defendants to recover property held by several of them and alleged to have been obtained by the fraud and conspiracy of some of the defendants, one of the defendants so charged cannot have a separable controversy with the plaintiff. O'Neil v. Birdseye, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 254, the court holding that the case could not be distinguished from Baillie v. Backus, (D. C. Ore. 1916) 230 Fed. 711, "where it was held that one conspirator alone could not remove claiming a separable controversy."

Bill by corporation receiver against directors.—Where a state statute prohibited directors of a corporation from paying dividends except upon the surplus or from the net profits arising from the business of the corporation, and imposed a joint and several liability upon them for any wilful or negligent violation, which in case of insolvency was enforceable by the receiver to the full amount of any loss sustained by the corporation by reason of such diversion, and such receiver filed a bill against former directors of a corporation, praying that the defendants "be decreed jointly and severally to pay the full amount of the said dividends," there was no separable controversy authorizing removal by one of the defendants. Holcombe v. Ames, (1917) 87 N. J. Eq. 486. 100 Atl. 609.

Action against corporation and liquidator.—In Hough v. Société Electrique Westinghouse de Russie, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 635, modifying on rehearing, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 341, an action at law brought in the New York Supreme Court by a citizen of New York against a foreign corporation and its liquidator, the latter being a citizen of New York, it was held that the case was properly removed by the defendant on the ground of a separable controversy.

An action against principal and surety on a contractor's bond for public work, to recover damages for its breach, was not removable by the surety. Seattle v. Beer's Bldg. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1917) 242 Fed. 988.

Action for money loaned.—In German-American Mercantile Bank v. Gas Service Corp., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 827, holding that there was no removable separable controversy, the court said: "The main purpose of the action is to recover the money loaned to the defendant Gas Service Company upon the faith and credit of the Surety Company, it 'being interested in the project for which the money to be loaned as aforesaid is to be used,' and 'admits that all money advanced to said parties upon their promissory note is advanced upon the strength of this contract of guaranty, and . . . further acknowledges that it is interested in the making of said loan, and will receive a valuable consideration for the execution of this agreement.' The controversy, the contract of loan, is indivisible. The fact that the evidence of the relation of the parties to this contract of loan is on separate sheets of paper, instead of one paper, does not change the relation or the rights of the parties to the controversy; and because of the fact that the plaintiff might have sued the parties separately, but elects to sue them jointly, the defendant is not given the right to say that the action shall be several. Torrence v. Shedd, [1892] 144 U. S. 527, 2 S. Ct. 726, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 528."

5. How Separable Controversy Made to Appear (p. 338)

From plaintiff's pleading.—"In deciding whether or not a separable controversy exists between the plaintiff and the defendant claiming the right to remove, the cause of action alleged in the plaintiff's pleading must be accepted as the only criterion of the decision, and if it is there alleged that the cause of action is joint, and if it appears that some of the defendants are citizens of the same state with the plaintiff, it must be held that the suit is not removable." Holcombe v. Ames, (1917) 87 N. J. Eq. 486, 100 Atl. 609, following National Docks, etc., Connecting R. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1893) 52 N. J. Eq. 58, 28 Atl. 71, affirmed 52 N. J. Eq. 590, 33 Atl. 50.

V. NO APPEAL FROM ORDER REMANDING (p. 349)

"This court has more than once held that such an order is not subject to review, directly or indirectly, but is final and conclusive. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 580-583, 16 S. Ct. 389, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 536, 542, 543; McLaughlin Bros. v. Hallowell, 228 U. S. 278, 286, 33 S. Ct. 465, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 835, 839; Pacific Live Stock Co. v. Lewis, 241 U. S. 440, 447, 36 S. Ct. 637, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1084." Yankaus v. Feltenstein, (1917) 244 U. S. 127, 37 S. Ct. 567, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1036.

Indirect review forbidden.—Where the federal court, by its remanding order, adjudges that the removal proceedings were unauthorized, "that order is not subject to review, either directly or indirectly, but is final and conclusive." Pacific Live Stock Co. v. Lewis, (1916) 241 U. S. 440, 36 S. Ct. 637, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1084, holding that in a subsequent suit in the same federal court by the defendant in the first suit, involving the same subject matter, the said defendant, now plaintiff, was not entitled to an injunction to restrain the continued prosecution of the former case in the state court, on the assumption that the removal proceedings were effective.

An order of remand is not reviewable by a state appellate court on appeal from a judgment of the state court in the cause after remand. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Conway, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 182 S. W. 52.

Vol. IV, p. 349, sec. 3.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 350)

Necessity of petition.—"As we have very recently held in Key v. West Kentucky Coal Co., [W. D. Ky. 1916] 237 Fed. 258, a case cannot be removed on a mere 'motion' made in the state court, and particularly after (the transcript having been filed) a motion to remand the case has been sustained by the federal court. The statute does not authorize the removal of a case on motion. That must be done upon a petition which conforms to the requirements of the law at the time it is filed." Nelson v. Black Diamond Min. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 264.

To what district removable.—Where there is the requisite diversity of citizenship and amount in controversy, a suit by a plaintiff in the court of a state of which neither party is a citizen may be removed by the defendant to the federal court in that district. Hohenberg v. Mobile Liners, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 245 Fed. 169.

Where the plaintiff in a suit in a New York court was a citizen of Pennsylvania and the defendant a citizen of New Jersey, the cause was remanded on motion of the plaintiff after its removal to the federal court in New York. O'Neil v. Birdseye, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 254.

A suit by an alien against a corporation created by a state other than that in which the suit is brought may be removed to the federal court for the district in which the suit is pending. This is because an alien is without the language and purpose of the venue provisions now constituting Judicial Code, § 51, 1912 Supp., p. 153, and the defendant corporation might have sued the plaintiff in that federal court had it been able to serve him with process in that district, and the plaintiff having brought himself into the district by beginning his action in it, has placed himself in a situation in which process can be served on him, and the removal proceedings have the same force and effect as the service of process on him. Keating v. Pennsylvania Co., (N. D. Ohio, 1917) 245 Fed. 155.

Judicial Code, § 29, 1912 Supp., p. 145, title JUDICIARY, requires in plain language that the removal, if made at all, must be to the federal district in which the suit is pending. Stewart v. Cybur Lumber Co., (1916) 111 Miss. 844, 72 So. 276.

"But whatever may be the force of the argument in favor of removal, based upon language and history, it ignores wholly the purpose and spirit of all the removal acts. While it has often been said by the courts that the law of removals is wholly statutory, yet the express words of the statute cover only a small part of the cases arising in actual practice. It is possible for some 150 different cases of diverse citizenship and citizenship and alienage to be presented in removal cases; but the statutes expressly cover only a very few of these, the rest being left to construction. It is thus often necessary to disregard express words, and find the proper rule from the intent and history of the legislation." Eddy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wis. 1915) 226 Fed. 120.

In Eddy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wis. 1915) 226 Fed. 120, an action by a Montana citizen was brought against a Wisconsin citizen (corporation) in a Minnesota state court, and removed on the ground of diverse citizenship to the federal court in the district of Wisconsin. The plaintiff's motion to remand was granted.

An alien may be sued in any federal district in which he may be found and in which valid service is made upon him. Hence if he is sued in a state court and the case is removable, it may be removed to the federal court for that district. Bradshaw v. Bowden, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 226 Fed. 323.

Where only one of the plaintiffs was a resident of the district to which it was proposed to remove a case on the ground of diverse citizenship, it was conceded that the cause was not removable to that court over the objection of the nonresident plaintiff unless it fell within one of the provisions of Judicial Code, § 57, 1912 Supp., p. 155. Consolidated Interstate Callahan Min. Co. v. Callahan Min. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 528.

In New York Coal Co. v. Sunday Creek Co., (S. D. W. Va. 1916) 230 Fed. 295, an action was brought by a Maine corporation in an Ohio court against a West Virginia corporation and a New Jersey corporation. Both defendants were doing business in Ohio, where the contract of lease, whose covenants were alleged to have been broken by defendants, was being executed. The West Virginia corporation specially appeared and filed a petition for removal to the federal court for the southern district of West Virginia, that being the state and district of its incorporation and residence. The state court granted the petition, and the plaintiff moved to remand the case to the state court for lack of jurisdiction in the federal court. The motion to remand was granted.

In Pavick v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Wis. 1914) 225 Fed. 395, the plaintiff, a resident of Iowa, sued the defendant, a resident of the eastern district of Wisconsin, in the state court of Minnesota. The court ordered a remand on plaintiff's motion.

II. PETITION FOR REMOVAL (p. 351)

Time to file petition for removal.—A case is not removable on a petition alleging a fraudulent joinder of defendants to prevent removal unless such petition is filed within the time required by the federal statute. Key v. West Kentucky Coal Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 258.

Removal of condemnation proceedings.—In In re Seattle, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 237 Fed. 100, the court remanded a case because the petition for removal of a condemnation proceeding was filed too late.

State court's interpretation of state statute.—A decision of the highest court of a state construing the state statute fixing the time in which a defendant shall answer or otherwise plead should be followed by the federal court. Waverly Stone, etc., Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 238 Fed. 561.

Extension of time.—"It is settled in this court that, whensoever this act of Congress is applicable, its reference to statute or rule time means the time fixed by statute or rule, and not a time later fixed by extension on order of court or stipulation of parties. See Wilson's Case, [1907] 135 Ia. 531, 113 N. W. 348, 14 Ann. Cas. 266." Markey v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1915) 171 Ia. 255, 153 N. W. 1053.

A petition for removal is filed too late where the statutory time for the defendant to answer or otherwise plead has expired, though within the time extended by a local rule of the state court in which the cause is pending, especially where the highest court of the state has decided that the statute authorizing the court to extend the time to plead does not have the effect to extend the time for removal. Waverly Stone, etc., Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 239 Fed. 561, granting a motion to remand.

In Pilgrim v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., (D. C. N. J. 1916) 234 Fed. 958, a rule of the New Jersey Supreme Court authorized the making of an order by said court, or a justice thereof, extending the time for filing an answer beyond the twenty days required by another rule for a defendant's answer. The defendant having obtained such an order, filed a petition for removal within the extended period, but after expiration of twenty days specified in the main rule. Plaintiff's motion to remand on the ground that the petition for removal was not filed in time was granted.

In State Improvement-Development Co. v. Leininger, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 884, the court said: "The objection that the proceeding to remove was not taken in time is not well grounded. The time of the defendants to appear was duly extended by the state court; it having, upon stipulation of the parties, made an order that 'the time for hearing application for injunction is extended to and including August 10, 1912, at ten o'clock A. M., the defendants to have the same rights as if the last-named date was the return day.' The relief asked against the defendant Leininger being an injunction, the effect of this order was to give him to and including the date indicated in the order in which to make return to the order to show cause and to plead. On that date he presented and filed his petition and bond for removal, and this was in time. . . . It being within the power of the state court, under the statutes of the state and its rules, to grant the extension given, which is not questioned, a petition filed within the time thus given is within the statute. Chiatovich v. Hanchett, [C. C. A. Nev. 1897] 78 Fed. 193, and cases there cited."

Where the time to file pleadings is given at some particular term by order of court and the same is not objected to, such order is taken to have been acquiesced in by defendant, and his right of removal is thereby waived. Dills v. Champion Fiber Co., (1917) 175 N. C. 49, 94 S. E. 694.

The term "rule of the state court."—"The reference in the federal statute to the rule of the state court in which suit is brought to answer or plead clearly relates, not to special orders granted upon application or stipulations of parties in any given case, but rather to a general rule fixing the date at which all defendants are required to appear in order to avoid being held in default." Wilson v. Big Joe Block Coal Co., (1907) 135 Ia. 531, 113 N. W. 348, 14 Ann. Cas. 266, followed in a case removed from an Iowa court in Waverly Stone, etc., Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 239 Fed. 561.

"This term 'rule of court' appearing in the statute has reference to a standing rule having the force of law. Mecke v. Mineral Co., 122 N. C. 790-797, 29 S. E. 781; Fox v. Railroad (C. C.), 80 Fed. 945." Dills v. Champion Fiber Co., (1917) 175 N. C. 49, 94 S. E. 694.

Extension of time by written stipulation was recognized as efficacious to that end in Hinman v. Barrett, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 621, disapproving rulings of other courts to the contrary.

In Solomon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 240 Fed. 231, the plaintiff gave the defendant a written stipulation extending the time "to answer, plead or make any motion." On the next day after expiration of the extended time, the plaintiff stipulated that the defendant should have 20 days' further time to "answer," but struck out the words "demur or otherwise plead." "On such a stipulation, even if we assumed the default was opened thereby, the power to remove was lost," said the court, granting a motion to remand where the cause was removed on a petition subsequently filed.

"That a case not removable when commenced may afterwards become removable is settled by Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S. 594; Martin v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 151 U. S. 673, 688, 691; Powers v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 169 U. S. 92; and Fritzlen v. Boatmen's Bank, 212 U. S. 364." Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A case arising under the laws of the United States and between citizens of different states, but nonremovable on the complaint, because arising under the federal Employers' Liability Act (see proviso to Judicial Code, § 28, 1912 Supp., p. 144), "cannot be converted into a removable one by evidence of the defendant or by an order of the court upon any issue tried upon the merits," and such conversion can only be accomplished by the voluntary amendment of his pleadings by the plaintiff. Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In Bedell v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 245 Fed. 788, where plaintiff amended his pleading and served a new summons, a petition for removal filed before plaintiff could have taken judgment for want of an answer was held to have been in time under the state law and practice.

An increase of the amount sued for, by amendment of plaintiff's pleading, by which the case for the first time becomes one of federal cognizance, extends the time to file application for removal. Markey v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1915) 171 Ia. 255, 153 N. W. 1053; Martin v. Richmond Cotton Oil Co., (1916) 194 Mo. App. 106, 184 S. W. 127.

Where a suit first became removable by reason of plaintiff's amendment of his pleading increasing the ad damnum above the jurisdictional amount, the defendant's petition for removal filed on the day he first had actual knowledge of the amendment was in time, even though it was about two weeks after the amendment, for which leave of court had been obtained, was filed; constructive notice of the amendment not being the equivalent of actual notice. Markey v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1915) 171 Ia. 255, 153 N. W. 1053, citing as "substantially in point," Fogarty v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (S. D. Cal. 1903) 121 Fed. 941.

An order of nonsuit in the trial court of a state as to one of two defendants, a resident, the other being a nonresident, which is appealed from by the plaintiff with the right of review in the Supreme Court of the state, does not make the case removable as to the nonresident defendant. Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S.

Direction of verdict.—"It is, however, well settled by the later opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States that where an action is properly brought in a state court against a nonresident defendant and a resident defendant, sued jointly, the fact that the trial court may erroneously, at the conclusion of the evidence, direct a verdict in favor of the resident defendant, does not authorize a removal of the action as to the nonresident defendant, on the ground of diverse citizenship, if exception is taken to the ruling of the court in directing the verdict. In such a case the resident defendant will be treated as a party to the suit until the question has been terminated by the state appellate court." Landers v. Tracy, (1916) 171 Ky. 657, 188 S. W. 763, following American Car, etc., Co. v. Kettelhake, (1915) 236 U. S. 311, 35 S. Ct. 355, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 594.

Second petition for removal.—"Two things must concur to vindicate the filing of a second petition for removal, namely, the appearing in the record for the first time of a state of facts which authorizes the removal and the prompt filing by the defendant of a new petition showing the facts as they then exist." Key v. West Kentucky Coal Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 258, 261, where a case removed and remanded and again removed was again remanded.

An averment of residence of parties is not the equivalent of an averment of citizenship. Hinman v. Barrett, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 621.

Averments of fraudulent joinder.—"It is only in cases wherein the facts alleged in the petition for removal are sufficient to fairly raise the issue of fraud that the state court is required to surrender its jurisdiction." Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, affirming (1914) 166 N. C. 24, 81 S. E. 1003.

An allegation of fraudulent joinder is not alone sufficient in a petition for removal. W. P. Carmichael Co. v. Miller, (Tex. Civ. App. 1915) 178 S. W. 976.

A petition for removal alleging a fraudulent joinder in general terms is insufficient to effect a removal. Cogdill v. Clayton, (1915) 170 N. C. 526, 87 S. E. 338.

"It is not sufficient to charge generally or by indefinite averments that the joinder is or was intended to be in fraud and prevention of the nonresident's right of removal. Hough v. Southern R. Co., [1907] 144 N. C. 692, 57 S. E. 469; Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co. v. American Tobacco Co., [1907] 144 N. C. 352, 57 S. E. 5, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 270." Hollifield v. Southern Bell Telephone, etc., Co., (1916) 172 N. C. 714, 90 S. E. 996.

"The right of removal may not be defeated by a fraudulent joinder of a resident defendant having no real connection with the controversy; but the defendant seeking removal must allege facts that form the conclusion that the joinder is fraudulent, unless it is apparent upon the face of the complaint, and merely to apply the term 'fraudulent' will not suffice." Martin v. Matson Nav. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1917) 239 Fed. 188.

Where the facts stated in detail in a petition for removal, and not controverted, show that the joinder of a codefendant was altogether fraudulent and collusive and was made with the sole intent to prevent a removal, it sufficed to effect a removal. Nelson v. Black Diamond Min. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 264.

In Bradshaw v. Bowden, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 226 Fed. 323, an action for malicious prosecution was removed to the federal court, where, denying the plaintiff's motion to remand, the court held the allegations of fraudulent joinder made in the petition for removal were sufficient.

"In no case can the right of removal be established by a petition to remove which amounts simply to a traverse of the facts alleged in the plaintiff's petition, and in that way undertaking to try the merits of a cause of action, good upon its face." Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, affirming (1914) 166 N. C. 24, 81 S. E. 1003.

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Whiteaker, (1915) 239 U. S. 421, 36 S. Ct. 152, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 360, affirming (1913) 252 Mo. 438, 160 S. W. 1009, the allegations of fraudulent joinder were held insufficient.

In Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, affirming (1914) 166 N. C. 24, 81 S. E. 1003, the allegations of fraudulent joinder were held insufficient.

"The cause of action is the subject of the controversy, and that is whatever the plaintiff declares it to be in his complaint and is the basis for order of removal. But where it is charged in the petition for removal that persons are fraudulently joined as parties defendant for the purpose of denying to the petitioner the right of removal to the federal forum, and issue is taken upon this charge, the issue thus raised forms the basis which determines the forum in which the cause should be tried. If no issue is taken of the charge made, then the allegations stand as confessed. Bradshaw v. Bowden, [(W. D. Wash. 1914) 226 Fed. 323]. If issue is taken, then that issue must be determined by this court." Trana v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 824.

Where a plaintiff in an action of tort for death by wrongful act caused by negligence joined lessor and lessee railroad companies as defendant joint tortfeasors, his motive for so doing was immaterial. Case v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., (W. D. S. C. 1915) 225 Fed. 862, remanding to the state court a case which had been removed on the alleged ground of fraudulent joinder.

Where a suit by a postmaster against a post-office inspector was removable as arising under the postal laws, and a petition for removal was verified by one signing his name as "United States Attorney" and "attorney for petition," the verification was sufficient, as it was possible that the words "United States Attorney" were descriptio personæ. Porter v. Coble, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 244, 158 C. C. A. 404, where it seems also that the objection was first made in the appellate court.

Amending petition in federal court.—In Brady v. J. B. McCrary Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 244 Fed. 602, the citizenship of plaintiff and defendant in a removed case was sufficiently alleged in the petition for removal, but, the action being on an assigned claim and the jurisdiction depending on the citizenship of the assignor, such citizenship was not alleged. After argument on a motion to remand, and before any ruling thereon could be made, the defendant filed a motion for leave to amend the petition by showing the citizenship of plaintiff's assignor, and the motion was granted and motion to remand denied.

The court has power to allow amendment of an averment of residence in a petition for removal by alleging citizenship in proper form. Hinman v. Barrett, (N. D., N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 621.

Filing petition and bond.—The lodging of a sufficient petition and bond with the clerk of the court is sufficient, whether he places his file mark thereon or not. Brady v. J. B. McCrary Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 244 Fed. 602.

III. BOND FOR REMOVAL (p. 360)

See notes to 1912 Supp., p. 145, Jud. Code, § 29, infra, p. 1315.

Execution by foreign surety company.—Where a bond was signed by the president of the petitioning defendant corporation, and by a surety company by its agent and attorney in fact, with the surety company's corporate seal attached it was "amply sufficient to authorize the state judge to accept the same, unless something was brought to his attention questioning the validity of said bond." Brady v. J. B. McCrary Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 244 Fed. 602, where the court, denying a motion to remand, overruled objection that the bond was insufficient on its face, because it was "executed by a foreign corporation in a foreign jurisdiction with a foreign surety company, and it is not made to appear that the seals affixed have been authorized."

In Brady v. J. B. McCrary Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917), denying a motion to remand upon the contention that it did not appear that the surety on the bond, which was a foreign surety company, was authorized to do business in Florida, where the removal was had, the court said: "The foreign corporation act of Florida has been construed by the state supreme court as making the contracts voidable and not void, and such act has been amended by the legislature at its session in 1915. But in any event by the terms of the act the foreign corporation not complying with the act can take no advantage of such noncompliance, but is bound by its contracts. Section 29 of the Judicial Code requires 'surety,' not 'sureties.'"

IV. RELATIVE AUTHORITY OF STATE AND FEDERAL COURTS (p. 362)

The mere filing of a petition for removal, in due time and after notice, if the petition be sufficient and accompanied by a sufficient bond, automatically effects a removal, notwithstanding refusal of the state court to order a removal. Brady v. J. B. McCrary Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 244 Fed. 602.

"The orderly and proper procedure upon presenting a petition and bond for removal is to apply to the state court for a formal order granting the petition; but where this is done, and the order is refused, the cause, if a proper one for removal under the law, stands nevertheless as effectually removed from the jurisdiction of the state court as though such order had been granted." State Improvement-Development Co. v. Leininger, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 884.

"As the petition for removal was per se sufficient, and as the proper bond was given and approved by the state court when the petition was filed, no order of the state court removing the case to this court was necessary. It was, ipso facto, removed by the filing of the petition for removal and the giving of the bond." Nelson v. Black Diamond Min. Co., (N. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 264.

A case is ipso facto removed on filing a sufficient petition and bond, though the state judge denied removal. Webb v. Southern R. Co., (S. D. Ala. 1916) 235 Fed. 578.

Where a petition for removal, sufficient for that purpose, was filed coincidentally with a demurrer to the complaint, the action of the state court in denying an order of removal did not result in its retaining jurisdiction of the cause for the purpose of passing upon such demurrer. State Improvement-Development Co. v. Leininger, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 884.

"If, upon the face of the record, including the petition for removal, the suit does not appear to be removable, then the state court is not bound to surrender its jurisdiction, and may proceed as if no application for removal had been made." Steed v. Henry, (1915) 120 Ark. 583, 180 S. W. 508.

V. EFFECT OF PETITION AS GENERAL OR SPECIAL APPEARANCE (p. 366)

A foreign corporation having removed a case may properly move in the federal court to set aside the service upon it for noncompliance with the state statute requiring such service to be made upon "a managing agent," and also for the reason that the said corporation was not doing business in the state. Beach v. Kerr Turbine Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 243 Fed. 706.

VI. STATE COURT TO PROCEED NO FURTHER (p. 367)

Effect of merely docketing case in federal court.—Where the state court granted an order of removal, which was reversed on appeal by the state Supreme Court, and upon the cause coming on again for trial the defendants set up that the case had been docketed in the federal court, that no motion had been made to remand the same, that the order removing it had not been revoked, and that the case was then pending for trial in the federal court, a subsequent judgment by the state court in favor of the plaintiff on the merits was affirmed by the state and by the federal Supreme Courts upon determining that the order of removal was erroneous. Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, affirming (1914) 166 N. C. 24, 81 S. E. 1003.

Injunction against further proceeding.—In Webb v. Southern R. Co., (S. D. Ala. 1916) 235 Fed. 578, the defendant, having filed a sufficient petition and bond for removal in the state court, which refused to make an order of removal, filed a transcript in the federal court with a petition for an injunction against further prosecution of the suit in the state court, and a restraining order was issued, which was afterward made permanent.

In Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. American Cotton Oil Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 11, 143 C. C. A. 313, a defendant, having removed a removable case, brought a bill in equity in the federal court where the case was pending to enjoin the plaintiff from further harassing him by attempting to proceed with the suit in the state court, the latter having refused to grant the removal. It was held that the injunction should be granted. For a similar instance of injunction granted on a bill filed see Consolidated Interstate Callahan Min. Co. v. Callahan Min. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 528.

Second petition for removal.—"Several general propositions are very clearly established by the authorities cited, among them, that the removal statute does not authorize nor permit the filing of a second petition for removal, except where, before the trial on the merits, the plaintiff changes the parties by a dismissal of the local defendant, or where before, or even during, the trial he amends his pleading, and thereby increases the amount in controversy to a sum exceeding $3,000, exclusive of interest and costs, or himself does some other thing analogous to those mentioned." Key v. West Kentucky Coal Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 258.

VII. CIRCUIT COURT TO PROCEED (p. 368)

Restraining proceedings in state court.—"If a cause is properly removed from a state to a federal court, the latter may, when it is necessary to do so, issue an injunction to restrain further proceedings in the state court, if such court should persist in proceeding." This it may do in an ancillary suit for injunction for the purpose of protecting its own jurisdiction, and in such suit, the court having denied a motion to remand, the jurisdiction acquired by the removal cannot be questioned or re-examined, and the court "can only consider the question of jurisdiction of the ancillary suit so far as to ascertain whether the ancillary character of the suit is made to appear by the allegations of the bill." McCabe v. Guaranty Trust Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 845, 156 C. C. A. 357.

When injunction denied.—Since a decree in equity is to be shaped as the rights of the parties exist at the time of the decree, and where the answer to an ancillary bill for injunction against further proceedings in the state court in a removed case admitted the intention of the defendant to proceed in the state court if the latter should decide that the case was not removable, but said court afterward but before decree on the ancillary bill, granted the removal, the federal court properly refused to grant the injunction and its dismissal of the bill without prejudice was affirmed. McCabe v. Guaranty Trust Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 845, 156 C. C. A. 357.

Vol. IV, p. 371, sec. 5.

Jurisdiction doubtful.—"It is the duty of the court to remand, where there is doubt as to whether the case has been properly removed." Hanset v. Pacific Coast Asphalt Cement Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 243 Fed. 283. "To the same point is State v. Puget Sount Traction, etc., Co., (W. D. Wash. 1917) 243 Fed. 748; Orr v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 242 Fed. 608.

"It is the duty of the court where doubt exists as to jurisdiction to remand the cause to the state court." Harley v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1913) 245 Fed. 471.

"This court, being in doubt about its jurisdiction, followed the general rule obtaining in such situations, and . . . sustained the motion to remand." Key v. West Kentucky Coal Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 258.

"The federal courts have almost uniformly denied removal in doubtful cases." Eddy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wis. 1915) 226 Fed. 120.

In the Eighth Circuit the rule is stated to be that if, on a motion to remand, the question of federal jurisdiction is doubtful the jurisdiction should be retained, and the motion denied. Strother v. Union Pac. R. Co., (W. D. Mo. 1915) 220 Fed. 731, citing Boatmen's Bank v. Fritzlen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 650, 68 C. C. A. 288; In re Mississippi River Power Co., (S. D. Iowa 1917) 241 Fed. 194.

Actual controversy.—To invoke the jurisdiction of a court of justice, it is primarily essential that there be involved a genuine and existing controversy, calling for present adjudication as involving present rights, and although a case may have originally presented such a controversy, if before decision it has, through act of the parties or other cause, lost that essential character, it is the duty of the court, upon the fact appearing, to dismiss it. Southern Pac. Co. v. Eshelman, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 227 Fed. 928.

Petition for removal not filed in time.—Where a motion to remand was made on the sole ground that there was no removable separable controversy, the court found it unnecessary to consider that ground, but remanded the case because the petition for removal was not filed in time. Waverly Stone Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Iowa 1917) 239 Fed. 561.

Delay in filing transcript.—A case will not be remanded on account merely of delay in filing a transcript in the federal court, where such delay is not made one of the grounds for the motion to remand. Nelson v. Black Diamond Min. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 264.

In Waverly Stone, etc., Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Iowa 1917) 239 Fed. 561, the court remanded a cause partly because a copy of the record was not filed until after a delay of more than three months, no excuse for the delay being shown, although the plaintiff's motion to remand was based solely upon the ground that there was no separable controversy.

Elimination of ground of removal.—

Where a suit was brought in a state court for infringement of a registered trademark and removed to the federal court because a federal question was involved, and in the federal court the complainant amended his bill, omitting all mention of the registered trademark, and alleged unfair competition, the court denied defendant's motion to dismiss and granted complainant's motion to remand the cause to the state court. Fischer v. Star Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 955.

Where damages exceeding the jurisdictional amount for removal were laid in one cause of action in a complaint and below the jurisdictional amount in the other cause of action there stated, and after removal the federal court sustained a demurrer to the first cause of action without leave to amend, the court suo motu thereupon remanded the case to the state court as to the remaining cause of action. Jones v. Western Union Tel. Co., (S. D. Cal. 1916) 233 Fed. 301.

Reduction of amount in controversy.—

In Jellison v. Krell Piano Co., (E. D. Ky. 1917) 246 Fed. 509, a suit for the recovery of $2,900 for services and to enjoin violation of a copyright was removed for diversity of citizenship on a petition alleging that the matter in dispute exceeded $3,000. In the federal court the action for injunction was dismissed on plaintiff's motion, leaving a suit to recover only $2,900. Upon such dismissal and because the suit as it then stood could not have been removed, a motion to remand was made. Upon much consideration the motion was denied, the court following Kirby v. American Soda Fountain Co., (1904) 194 U. S. 141, 24 S. Ct. 619, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 911, and the following two cases in the Circuit Court of Appeals for the same circuit: Hayward v. Nordberg Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 85 Fed. 4, 54 U. S. App. 639, 29 C. C. A. 438; Riggs v. Clark, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1896) 37 U. S. App. Div. 626, 71 Fed. 560, 18 C. C. A. 242, although the court found it "difficult to reconcile the Soda Fountain Case with the Seeligson and Torrence Cases," the latter two cases being Texas Transportation Co. v. Seeligson, (1887) 122 U. S. 519, 7 S. Ct. 1261, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1150, and Torrence v. Shedd, (1892) 144 U. S. 527, 12 S. Ct. 726, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 528.

Parties collusively made or joined.—

Friendly suit.—In Stephens v. Ohio State Telephone Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 240 Fed. 759, where it was contended that jurisdiction of certain suits was lacking because they were collusive, the court said: "In argument it is urged with considerable insistence that the court has before it a case squarely within the provisions of sections 19 and 20, and particularly the latter, of the act of October 15, 1914. There is no evidence of collusion between the parties in this case; that the original parties may be friendly antagonists is not, however, improbable. Counsel's surmise may be correct, but something more than this is necessary to make their 'collusion' reprehensible."

Suit not within original federal jurisdiction in the particular district.—In American Oil, etc., Co. v. Western Gas Constr. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 505, affirming an order of the court below setting aside the service of summons, in a case removed from a New York court, the plaintiff was a New Jersey corporation and the defendant was an Indiana corporation. After observing that the case was not removable at all, since neither of the parties resided in New York, the court said: "But this objection may be waived, and it has been waived by the defendant by virtue of its petition to remove, and by the plaintiff by virtue of its appearance to contest the motion to set aside service of process. If it had not intended to waive the objection as to jurisdiction, it should have moved to remand. In re Moore, (1908) 209 U. S. 490, 28 S. Ct. 585, 706, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 904, 14 Ann. Cas. 1164."

Where jurisdiction of the federal court by a removal was sustainable only on the ground of diverse citizenship, but neither of the parties is a citizen and resident of the state where the suit was brought, a motion to remand by the plaintiff, who appeared specially for the purpose of the motion, and had not appeared generally or otherwise waived the lack of jurisdiction over the parties, was granted. Peninsula Lumber Co. v. Royal Indemnity Co., (D. C. Ore. 1916) 237 Fed. 297, holding that this ruling was necessitated by the decision in Ex p. Wisner, (1906) 203 U. S. 449, 27 S. Ct. 150, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 264, which, in the opinion of the court, had not been overruled by later decisions.

In Doherty v. Smith, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 233 Fed. 132, where nonresident citizen plaintiffs sued nonresident citizen defendants and the latter removed the case for diverse citizenship, it was remanded on motion of the plaintiffs.

In Jackson v. William Kenefick Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 233 Fed. 130, the plaintiff, an alien, sued two citizens and residents of Oklahoma in the New York Supreme Court. The defendants removed for diverse citizenship, but on motion of the alien plaintiff the court remanded the case on the authority of Kamenicky v. Catterall Printing Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 400, and Odhner v. Northern Pac.

R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 188 Fed. 507, both of which cases were in the same circuit.

In Ivanoff v. Mechanical Rubber Co., (N. D. Ohio 1916) 232 Fed. 173, an action in an Ohio state court removed to the federal court for that district, a motion by the plaintiff to remand the case was granted, Clarke, J., saying: "The plaintiff being an alien and the defendant a nonresident of this district, because organized under the laws of New Jersey, this case could not have been commenced in this court."

Although only one of the plaintiffs in an action was a resident of the state and federal district, the action was removable to that district on the ground of diverse citizenship, over the objection of the nonresident plaintiff, where the action was "to enforce . . . claim to . . . real or personal property within" the district as provided in Judicial Code, § 57, 1912 Supp., p. 155. Consolidated Interstate Callahan Min. Co. v. Callahan Min. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 528.

Where the plaintiff in an action in a New York court against a New Jersey corporation did not allege his citizenship or residence, and the defendant appeared and answered generally and removed the case upon a petition alleging that the plaintiff was a citizen of New York, it had no right to object to being sued in that district when it developed on the trial that the plaintiff was an alien. Sawickas v. Singer Mfg. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 600.

"Where fraudulent joinder is charged in the petition, for the purpose of denying the petitioner the right of the federal court, and issue is taken by plaintiff upon the charge made in the petition, the issue thus raised forms the basis upon which the proper forum is to be determined. . . . Issue having been taken upon the charge of fraudulent joinder, and affidavits being submitted by the respective parties, that issue must be determined by this court." Deutsch v. Alaska Gastineau Min. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 237 Fed. 215.

"No denial of any of the allegations of the petition for removal was in any manner made by the plaintiff, and they must be taken as true. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. v. Southern R. Co., [C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907] 153 Fed. 122, 126, 82 C. C. A. 256, 11 Ann. Cas. 766; Dishon v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., [C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904] 133 Fed. 471, 66 C. C. A. 345." Nelson v. Black Diamond Min. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 264, a case of removal on a petition alleging diverse citizenship and fraudulent joinder of a codefendant.

In Hough v. Societe Electrique Westinghouse de Russie, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 231 Fed. 341, the court said that upon the issue of fraudulent joinder to prevent removal, the defendant must show more than that no relief could be granted in the state court against the party alleged to have been fraudulently joined. He must show that the plaintiff could not reasonably suppose that such relief could be given, but, upon proof of that fact, "it would necessarily follow that the joinder was fraudulent; but it is irrelevant that the plaintiff's motive was to prevent removal, provided he supposed that he had an honest chance to procure judgment against" the party.

"It may reasonably be presumed . . . where defendants manifestly not jointly liable are nevertheless joined, that the act of joinder was not an act of good faith, but was done for some ulterior purpose, and I take it that such an act could not well be made the basis for resisting removal." Rountree v. Mt. Hood R. Co., (D. C. Ore. 1916) 228 Fed. 1010.

In Trana v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 824, the evidence taken upon an issue raised by a petition for removal charging fraudulent joinder showed that the nonresident petitioning defendant's liability, if any, did not arise out of the same transaction as the alleged liability of the local defendant; that the cause of action against the local defendant, if any, was ex delicto, whereas the liability, if any, of the nonresident petitioning defendant was ex contractu; and that under the decisions of the state Supreme Court construing the state statute the two actions could not be joined. Therefore a motion to remand was denied.

In Rountree v. Mt. Hood R. Co., (D. C. Ore. 1916) 228 Fed. 1010, where the nonresident railroad company was joined with its resident general manager, Early, and a removal was had on a petition alleging fraudulent joinder, a motion to remand was granted.

In Deutsch v. Alaska Gastineau Min. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1916) 237 Fed. 215, which was an action for damages for personal injuries brought by a servant against the master and another alleged to be the master's general foreman, the case was removed on a petition alleging a fraudulent joinder of defendants, quoted in the opinion, but the court, after consideration of affidavits presented on both sides of the issue, remanded the case.

In Seattle v. Great Northern R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1913) 239 Fed. 1009, it was held, upon consideration of proof by affidavits filed by defendant, that a resident corporation had been fraudulently joined with a foreign corporation as defendant, the plaintiff having knowledge that the said resident corporation could not be made liable in the action, and plaintiff's motion to remand on the ground of want of diverse citizenship was denied by the court.

Affidavits may be used and considered by the court in determining, on a motion to remand, whether a defendant was fraudulently joined to prevent removal, as alleged in the petition for removal. Seattle v. Great Northern R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1913) 239 Fed. 1009.

How question of jurisdiction raised and determined.—An averment in the petition for removal that the amount in controversy exceeds $3,000 must be taken as admitted if no issue is made thereon. Port of Seattle v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1917) 242 Fed. 986.

Order of court ex mero motu.—In Charroin v. Romort Mfg. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 1011, where a cause was removed on the ground of a federal question, and an amended complaint and demurrer thereto were filed, the federal court after examination of the complaint held that no federal question appeared, and remanded the case, although no motion to remand had been made.

In Waverly Stone, etc., Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 239 Fed. 561, the court remanded a case because the petition for removal was not filed in time, and the copy of the record was not entered in the federal court in time, although the motion to remand was based solely upon the ground that there was no federal question.

"The motion to remand always raises some question of law arising upon the record, and a 'speaking' motion is about as indefensible as a 'speaking' demurrer." Berry v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1915) 228 Fed. 395.

In Closser v. Strawn, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 227 Fed. 139, the reason in support of the motion to remand was stated in the motion to be: "That the said District Court sitting in equity has no jurisdiction in the action, neither of the subject-matter thereof nor of the parties thereto, or any of them."

A motion to remand is quoted in full in Nelson v. Black Diamond Min. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 264.

Reconsidering an order denying a motion to remand.—Though a motion to remand for want of a jurisdictional amount in controversy has been denied by one judge it may be granted at a later stage of the case by another judge, as the court's jurisdiction is always open to challenge. Harley v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1913) 245 Fed. 471.

Costs.—Where a case was remanded because the petition for removal was not filed in time nor a copy of the record filed until after a delay of three months beyond the statutory period, with no excuse shown therefor, the remand was at the cost of the removing defendant, although the plaintiff's motion to remand was based solely on another ground not considered by the court. Waverly Stone, etc., Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 239 Fed. 561.

Vol. IV, p. 378, sec. 6.

Vacating service of process.—Where a foreign corporation defendant upon special appearance removed a case, and upon special appearance in the federal court moved to vacate service of summons, on the ground that it was not doing business in the state, which motion was overruled, the objection to jurisdiction was not waived by filing an answer to the merits which reiterated the objection to the jurisdiction. Toledo R., etc., Co. v. Hill, (1917) 244 U. S. 49, 37 S. Ct. 982, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 982.

Sufficiency of service of process.—"The defendant may raise any question which might have been raised had the writ issued from that court to which the cause has been removed." Feister v. Hulick, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 228 Fed. 821.

When the question of sufficiency of service of process upon a defendant in the state court is properly raised by him in the federal court after removal, the latter court will determine for itself whether jurisdiction was acquired over him, and in this respect is not bound by the state court decisions. Hudson Nav. Co. v. Murray, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 236 Fed. 419; Feister v. Hulick, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 228 Fed. 821.

"If actions are started and removed into this court, the sufficiency of the service under the state law is still to be tested by the necessities required to give jurisdiction in an action instituted at the outset in the federal court. Goldey v. Morning News, (1895) 156 U. S. 518, 522, 15 S. Ct. 559, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 517." Vitkus v. Clyde Steamship Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 288, 289.

Waiver of objection.—In Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Bigger, (1915) 239 U. S. 330, 36 S. Ct. 127, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 310, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 990, 133 C. C. A. 673, the railroad company, a federal corporation, was sued in the District Court of Bexar county, Texas, for personal injuries suffered by the plaintiff, a passenger. On defendant's petition the case was removed to the federal court for the western district of Texas, where an amended complaint was filed, suggesting Bigger's death, and his wife and children were made parties plaintiff; the defendant demurred generally, answered to the merits, and afterward, by leave of court, amended the answer, so that the latter contained a general demurrer, a general denial of the allegations, and set up special matters in defense, but "it contained no plea or exception to the jurisdiction in the court, state or federal." The case was continued and set for trial upon motion of defendant, which then filed a second amended answer, in which it set up that it was incorporated under an Act of Congress, had its domicile in Dallas, Texas, that no part of its road was in Bexar county, and the action was improperly brought in the latter county, and the court was without jurisdiction to try it, it being "one arising under and involving damages for personal injury." Insufficiency of the petition in law was also alleged, and there was a general denial of the allegations of the petition, besides special matters of defense. A judgment for plaintiff was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and by the Supreme Court.

Defendant privileged from service of process.—In Feister v. Hulick, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 228 Fed. 821, the defendant, a nonresident of Philadelphia, was the driver of an automobile which struck and killed the plaintiff's husband. He was arrested and held to answer before a coroner's jury of inquest, and was discharged at the inquest. After he had left the building in which the inquest was held he was served with a summons in the present case which had issued out of one of the courts of common pleas in and for Philadelphia county. Having removed the case, he moved in the federal court to set aside the service of summons, and the motion was granted.

Amendment by substitution of plaintiff.—In Roman v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 595, the plaintiff, a New York administrator, sued a Pennsylvania corporation in a court of New York to recover under a Pennsylvania statute for the death of his decedent in that state. The defendant appeared generally and removed the action on the ground of diverse citizenship. In the federal court the defendant answered to the merits. It was held that he thereby waived objection to the maintenance of the action in that court, and precluded himself from objecting to the allowance of an amendment by substituting an alien plaintiff for the citizen administrator.

Vol. IV, p. 378, sec. 7.

Writ of certiorari issued.—In State improvement Development Co. v. Leininger, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 884, an application for removal was resisted, and a hearing was had thereon, whereupon the state court entered an order that the petition be denied. The federal court, upon application of the petitioner for removal, issued a writ of certiorari directing the state court to certify the records and proceedings in the cause, which was accordingly done.

Vol. IV, p. 380, sec. 8.

Liberal construction.—The view has been taken that, considering the primary purpose of this provision and the comprehensive terms in which it is couched, it should receive a liberal construction, with a view to giving effect to the legislative intent. "Otherwise," it is said, "a party having a local cause of action clearly falling within federal jurisdiction could not prosecute it in a federal court, for the reason that he could not bring his adversary into the only court having jurisdiction of the subject matter." Consolidated Interstate Callahan Min. Co. v. Callahan Min. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 528.

On service by publication the court is without power to enforce a personal judgment. Albert v. Bascom, (W. D. Tex. 1917) 245 Fed. 149.

Where the action, taken as a whole, is not one which could be determined by the court so as to give the plaintiff the full and complete relief he seeks, without rendering a personal judgment, or decree against an absent nonresident defendant, and by reason of the nonresidence of the plaintiff the federal court has no jurisdiction on the ground of diverse citizenship alone, the action cannot be maintained under this section upon service by publication. O'Neil v. Birdseye, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 254.

Judgments affecting the particular property only may be entered, unless the defendants are served with process in the district or voluntarily submit themselves to the jurisdiction of the court. Dutton v. Waycross First Nat. Bank, (S. D. Fla. 1917) 244 Fed. 236.

Residence in the district.—"A suit to establish a lien upon or claim to property under section 57 of the Judicial Code may be maintained in the district of the state where the property is situated, though neither plaintiff nor defendant is a resident thereof." Albert v. Bascom, (W. D. Tex. 1917) 245 Fed. 149.

To what suits applicable.—Chose in action.—In Wabash R. Co. v. West Side Belt R. Co., (W. D. Pa. 1916) 235 Fed. 645, dismissing a bill for want of jurisdiction within this section, the court said: "The property in question is a chose in action, a debt owing by the West Side Belt, a citizen of this district, to the Wabash Company, nonresident defendant. The proceeding is therefore an attempt to establish what might be called an attachment lien, or equitable charge upon the moneys in the hands of the West Side Belt Company to answer the debt of an absent defendant."

A plenary suit by a trustee in bankruptcy cannot be instituted under this section against a debtor of the bankrupt and the bankrupt's assignee of the debt, in order to set aside the assignment and recover the amount of the debt as an alleged preference. The trustee's right to the debt may be personal property, but it is not personal property of such a character within the district as to give the court exclusive dominion and control of it; hence his chose in action is not personal property within the district. Murphy v. Ford Motor Co., (S. D. Ohio 1916) 241 Fed. 134.

Suit for debt and accounting.—A suit against devisees and executors of a deceased tenant in common, who was trustee of the plaintiffs, who were his co-tenants, the decedent not having accounted, and the suit being in substance one for debt and accounting, was not maintainable in a federal District Court in Texas wherein the land was situated, where neither plaintiffs nor defendants were residents or citizens of the state. Albert v. Bascom, (W. D. Tex. 1917) 245 Fed. 149.

Patent rights are not such tangible property within the district as justifies the court in proceeding against parties who are citizens and residents of other states and other districts, to remove a cloud upon the title to the same. Standard Gas Power Co. v. Standard Gas Power Co., (N. D. Ga. 1915) 224 Fed. 990.

But in another case, where the plaintiff had entered into a contract to invent, design and construct a certain line of machinery, it was held that the District Court has jurisdiction of a suit to quiet title to certain manufactured machines, patents, application for patent, drawings, patterns and specifications in which absent defendants claimed and asserted an ownership and proprietary interest. Burpee v. Guggenheim, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 226 Fed. 214.

Illegal stock or bonds.—Illegal stock may be considered as casting a cloud upon the equitable title or the interest which genuine stockholders have, by virtue of their shares of stock, not in the stock, but in the property of the corporation, since it impairs that title or interest, and in a suit the object of which is to remove a cloud upon the equitable title of the holders of the genuine stock to the property of the corporation, where such property is not within the district, substituted service cannot be had under this section. Hudson Nav. Co. v. Murray, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 233 Fed. 466.

A federal court has jurisdiction under this provision to determine whether illegal bonds have been issued by a corporation, and, if so, by a proper decree to remove the cloud cast upon the title of bondholders. Thompson v. Emmett Irrigation Dist., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 560, 142 C. C. A. 192.

Where the purpose of a suit is to obtain a decree requiring the surrender of stock certificates and directing their cancellation it is not material that the certificates are within the district, the question being whether the property, upon the title of which, it is alleged, the invalid issue of stock creates a cloud, is within the district. Hudson Nav. Co. v. Murray, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 233 Fed. 466.

An action by stockholders against a nonresident mining company asking that a receiver be appointed to take over and manage the entire business of the corporation, whose property is located in the district of the plaintiffs, until the question as to which of two groups of individuals were elected directors can be determined by a competent tribunal and that the result of the election be determined by the court, has been held to be one involving the status of property within the district within the meaning of this provision. Consolidated Interstate Callahan Min. Co. v. Callahan Min. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 528.

Easement in land.—An action by a telegraph company, a citizen of New York, against a railroad corporation, a citizen of Kentucky, involving the right of the telegraph company to occupy the right of way of the railroad company in another state, is maintainable in the federal court for the district in which the property is located, the claim being regarded as one to an easement in land, or right to occupy land. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1915) 229 Fed. 234.

Claim to real estate of decedent.—In Jennings v. Smith, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 242 Fed. 561, a suit in equity was brought by citizens of Louisiana to establish their claim to the entire estate of a decedent, as heirs and next of kin, against citizens of Georgia claiming in their own behalf the same entire estate. The suit was brought in the southern district of Georgia where all the defendants resided, and where a part of the estate was situated. The court held that it was in part, at least, a suit to enforce a legal or equitable claim to real property within that district, and therefore cognizable by the federal court for that district; and that an amendment of the bill was allowable by making the permanent administrators of the decedent parties defendant, although they were residents of the northern district, but citizens of Georgia; that said administrators were proper, if not necessary parties, whose addition by amendment was authorized by Judicial Code, § 52, and by Equity rule 37 (superseding the old rule, No. 49) and by the new Equity rule 28; and that, as the adverse claims of the defendants living in the southern district was the substantial thing to which the jurisdiction of the court initially attached, the addition of the permanent administrators as parties did not divest the court of its jurisdiction.

Removed cases.—This provision in its terms applies only to suits commenced in a District Court and is said to be inapplicable to a suit begun in a state court and removed to a federal court. Therefore the fact that the method of substituted service provided for in a state statute does not conform to that provided for in this section or that the state statute permits substituted service in cases for which this section has made no provision, does not require that a federal court, when a case is removed to it, must set aside the service where it is otherwise perfectly valid and in harmony with the requirements of the Federal Constitution and the principles of natural justice and would justify a binding decree in the state court. Hudson Nav. Co. v. Murray, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 236 Fed. 419.

Enforcement of liens.—"The lien must have existed anterior to the suit," and not one caused by the institution of the suit itself. Albert v. Bascom, (W. D. Tex. 1917) 245 Fed. 149.

Diversity of citizenship.—"The primary purpose of the statute was to enable federal courts to acquire jurisdiction of the persons of nonresident parties whose presence might be necessary to an adjudication of local actions touching the status of property within the district, in cases depending for federal jurisdiction upon diversity of citizenship." Consolidated Interstate Callahan Min. Co. v. Callahan Min. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 528.

Effect of judgment.—Where, in an action on a promissory note, the note was not in the district, either when the suit was commenced or the appearance order was served on the defendants, it was held that it could not be deemed constructively within that district, upon the theory that its situs followed the legal holder, and therefore no jurisdiction was acquired as to defendants who did not appear and a decree against them was void and subject to collateral attack on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Pensacola State Bank v. Thornberry, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 611, 141 C. C. A. 367.

There may be a waiver by a defendant of the objection that a proceeding was not commenced in the proper district by his appearance and the filing of a motion to dismiss the case on the merits. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1915) 229 Fed. 234.

Vol. IV, p. 387, sec. 3.

Service of process.—This section was intended to place receivers upon the same plane with railroad companies, both as respects their liability to be sued for acts done while operating a railroad, and as respects the mode of service. See Lamb v. Whitman, (1916) 17 Ga. App. 687, 87 S. E. 1095; Gursky v. Blair, (1916) 218 N. Y. 41, 112 N. E. 431, L. R. A. 1915F 359.

Acts and transactions in carrying on business.—An action for damages against a receiver of a steamship company for negligence resulting in a collision may be brought without previous leave of court.

Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Eastern Steamship Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 228 Fed. 726.

Leave to sue.—An order made denying a request by a landlord for permission to sue a receiver to recover immediate possession of premises, it being claimed by him that the lease is subject to forfeiture and that he is entitled to have that right determined with all reasonable speed, is a final order from which an appeal may be taken. Odell v. H. Batterman & Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 292, 138 C. C. A. 534, reversing (E. D. N. Y. 1914) 217 Fed. 305.

The institution of a foreclosure suit in a federal court against an interstate railroad company and the appointment of a receiver therein did not abate an action for mandamus in a state court to compel the railroad company to remove one of its bridges over a navigable stream on the ground that it was a public nuisance, and under this provision of the federal statute it would be good practice to bring in the receiver as a defendant. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1916) 99 Kan. 188, 161 Pac. 937.

Garnishment of receiver.—Where, pending an appeal from a judgment for plaintiff in an action wherein a federal receiver was served with process of garnishment, the parties stipulated for the sale of property in the garnishee's hands, the proceeds to be subject to the direction of the court, the trial court, as ancillary to the original judgment, had jurisdiction to enforce the stipulation by directing payment to the plaintiff from the proceeds, and the garnishee having acted on the stipulation could not question such right of the court in the premises. Lamb v. Whitman, (1916) 19 Ga. App. 27, 90 S. E. 736.

A state court has no jurisdiction to grant, by injunction against the receiver of a railroad company appointed by a federal court, in a suit brought without leave of the federal court, specific performance of an executory contract made by the railroad company, which the receiver has not assumed. Dickinson v. Willis, (S. D. Ia. 1916) 239 Fed. 171.

Vol. IV, p. 393, sec. 649.

Circuit Courts were abolished and their powers and duties imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289, 291. This section is therefore now applicable to the present District Courts. Phoenix Securities Co. v. Dittiner, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 892, 140 C. C. A. 892; Gord Pine Lumber Co. v. Duke, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 714, 144 C. C. A. 124; Chautauqua Institute v. Zimmerman, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 371, 147 C. C. A. 307; McCoach v. Continental Passenger R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 976, 147 C. C. A.

"Section 566 of the Revised Statutes requiring that actions at law in the District Courts be tried by jury, has no application to the District Courts as now organized." Wm. Edwards Co. v. La Dow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 378, 144 C. C. A. 520.

Vol. IV, p. 398, sec. 5.

Only final decisions reviewable.—The finality essential to sustain an appeal is not wanting in an order which denies a petition by which a witness, who offered in evidence in an equity suit certain exhibits owned by him that the court later ordered impounded in the custody of the clerk, seeks to enjoin on constitutional grounds the use of such exhibits before the grand jury as a basis for an indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed in such suits. Pelzman v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 7, 38 S. Ct. 417, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) ____.

Moot questions.—In U. S. v. Hamburg-Amerikanische, etc., (1916) 239 U. S. 466, 36 S. Ct. 212, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 387, which was an appeal from a judgment of the District Court holding an agreement of ocean steamship companies including British and German, in violation of the Anti-Trust Act, it was held that the merits of the case would not be considered in the view of the European war which made the question a moot one.

"On this direct appeal a reversal is sought of a decree below which dismissed the bill for want of jurisdiction. There is a motion to dismiss on the ground that 'the questions involved upon this appeal are moot questions . . . for the reason that subsequent to the dismissal of the bill herein by the lower court the appellant as plaintiff instituted in the Supreme Court of the state of New York, county of New York, an action upon the same alleged cause of action against the same defendants and that such action in the Supreme Court of the State of New York was heard and determined and that a final judgment upon the merits therein was rendered dismissing the complaint filed in said action as against this appellee.' But as our power to review is limited to the question of jurisdiction alone and as the ground of the motion obviously involves the defense of 'the thing adjudged,' going to the merits, the motion to dismiss is overruled." Male v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 97, 36 S. Ct. 351, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 544.

APPEALS DIRECT TO SUPREME COURT

Clause 1. In Any Case in Which the Jurisdiction of the Court Is in Issue (p. 399)

When jurisdiction is in issue—In general.—Whether the District Court acquired jurisdiction over the defendant may be reviewed by direct appeal. G. & C. Merriam Co. v. Saalfeld, (1916) 241 U. S. 22, 36 S. Ct. 477, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 868.

Under this section the federal Supreme Court had jurisdiction to review an order quashing a summons because served on a nonresident while he was returning from the court room after testifying in a case in which he was a party. Stewart v. Ramsay, (1916) 242 U. S. 128, 37 S. Ct. 44, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 192, citing G. & C. Merriam Co. v. Saalfeld, (1916) 241 U. S. 22, 36 S. Ct. 477, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 868, to the point that it is well settled "that a direct writ of error lies in such a case."

Sufficiency of service of process upon a foreign corporation defendant makes a question of jurisdiction reviewable under this clause. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. McKibbin, (1917) 243 U. S. 264, 37 S. Ct. 280, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 710.

In Stevirmac Oil, etc., Co. v. Dittman, (1917) 245 U. S. 210, 38 S. Ct. 116, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, about eighteen months after a default judgment against the plaintiff in error, the marshal's return having been previously amended by order of the court so as to show personal service upon the defendant (plaintiff in error), the plaintiff in error filed an application to set aside the judgment on the ground of want of jurisdiction by proper service of summons, that the marshal's amended return was false, and that the court had no power to order the marshal to amend his return. Upon hearing the application, with accompanying affidavits, the court refused to set aside the former judgment and overruled the application. While conceding that the judgment overruling the application was a final judgment and reviewable in the proper court, the federal Supreme Court dismissed a writ of error brought under Judicial Code, § 238, 1912 Supp., p. 231, for the reason that "no question is made concerning the jurisdiction of the court to entertain the proceeding to set aside the former judgment, and that the real controversy arises from the attack upon the authority of the court to order an amendment of the marshal's return, and to render the original judgment."

A question of jurisdiction of the court below, within the meaning of the statute, "is, whether, as a federal court, it had power to entertain the cause." Male v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 97, 36 S. Ct. 351, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 544.

Objection to a libel in rem against a vessel on the ground that it was immune to proceedings in any court by reason of being under requisition by the Italian government for the purpose of transporting military supplies, went equally to the jurisdiction of any court, state or federal, and appeal from a decree was properly taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Attualita, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 909, 152 C. C. A. 909.

Objection that an indictment does not charge a crime against the United States goes only to the merits of the case and not to the jurisdiction of the court. Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 60, 36 S. Ct. 255, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 526.

Other illustrations.—American Well Works Co. v. Layne, etc., Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 257, 36 S. Ct. 585, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 987, reversing an order dismissing a suit for want of jurisdiction on the ground that the state court from which the case had been removed was without jurisdiction because the cause of action arose under the patent laws.

Bankers' Trust Co. v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 295, 36 S. Ct. 569, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1010, affirming a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a suit to foreclose a mortgage by a railroad company incorporated by an Act of Congress, jurisdiction of the suit being forbidden by the Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, § 5, 1916 Supp., p. 137.

Latta, etc., Constr. Co. v. The Raithmoor, (1916) 241 U. S. 166, 36 S. Ct. 514, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 937, reversing a decree which dismissed, for want of jurisdiction, a libel in rem in so far as it sought to recover for the damages negligently inflicted by a colliding vessel upon an unfinished pier intended to support a government beacon.

G. & C. Merriman Co. v. Saalfeld, (1916) 241 U. S. 22, 36 S. Ct. 477, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 868, affirming a decree quashing the service of process against a nonresident by substituted service, and setting aside all proceedings based thereon.

Pinel v. Pinel, (1916) 240 U. S. 594, 36 S. Ct. 416, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 817, affirming a decree dismissing a bill because the amount in controversy was insufficient to give the court jurisdiction.

Cuyahoga River Power Co. v. Akron, (1916) 240 U. S. 462, 36 S. Ct. 402, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 743, reversing a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a bill by a hydro-electric power company to prevent a municipality from appropriating the waters of a stream, the Supreme Court holding that the bill presented a question arising under the Federal Constitution.

Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 60, 36 S. Ct. 255, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 526, a writ of error to review a conviction for false personation of a federal officer, the writ of error being dismissed on the ground that the contention of plaintiff in error that the construction of the Constitution was involved and that his constitutional rights were violated was without foundation.

Rogers v. Hennepin County, (1916) 239 U. S. 621, 36 S. Ct. 217, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 469, affirming a decree which dismissed a bill in a suit to enjoin the collection of taxes, there being an insufficient amount in controversy.

Glenwood Light, etc., Co. v. Mutual Light, etc., Co., (1915) 239 U. S. 121, 36 S. Ct. 30, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 174, holding that the court below erred in dismissing a bill on final hearing on the ground that the jurisdictional amount of $3,000 was not involved.

Equivalent of certificate.—A recital in the order of the district judge allowing a writ of error that the plaintiff's petition "had been dismissed by the judgment of this court upon consideration solely of the question of this court's jurisdiction of the action," was held sufficient to take the place of the certificate required by the Judicial Code, § 238. McAllister v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 302, 37 S. Ct. 274, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 735, citing Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co., (1902) 185 U. S. 282, 22 S. Ct. 681, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 910, and Herndon-Carter Co. v. Norris, (1912) 224 U. S. 496, 32 S. Ct. 550, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 857.

Separate appeals.—If a party prosecute a direct appeal to the Supreme Court and also a writ of error from the Circuit Court of Appeals the latter court cannot compel an election of which method shall be pursued on penalty of dismissing the writ of error. Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 535, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 912.

Review limited to question of jurisdiction.—Where the District Court dismissed an action against a state bank commissioner and the surety on his bond on the ground that the action was against a state in violation of the 11th amendment, the questions whether the state statute made the surety liable, or whether the plaintiff's pleading or the case was defective in any particular, the federal Supreme Court was not required to decide, since upon neither question was the judgment of the District Court defensively invoked. Johnson v. Lankford, (1918) 245 U. S. 541, 38 S. Ct. 203, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

"Such appeals or writs of error do not bring here the merits of the controversy, and impose upon this court the single duty of determining whether the district court had jurisdiction of the case." Stevirmac Oil, etc., Co. v. Dittman, (1917) 245 U. S. 210, 38 S. Ct. 116, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Decision right, but for wrong reason.—Where the District Court erred in dismissing an action on the ground that it was an action against a state, its judgment was nevertheless affirmed where the record showed that the parties were citizens of the same state, and no constitutional or other federal question was involved. Martin v. Lankford, (1918) 245 U. S. 547, 38 S. Ct. 547, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Clauses 4-6. Questions Under the Constitution and Treaties of the United States (p. 405)

Review not limited.—If the United States Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review a case originating in a federal District Court on the ground that a constitutional question is in issue, it may determine "all questions involved in the case, including questions of state law, irrespective of the disposition that may be made of the federal question, or whether it be found necessary to decide it at all. Siler v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1917) 213 U. S. 175, 191, 29 S. Ct. 451, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 753, 757; Ohio Tax Cases, (1914) 232 U. S. 576, 586, 34 S. Ct. 372, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 738, 743." Greene v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 499, 37 S. Ct. 673, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1280, Ann. Cas. 1917E 88. To the same point is McCurdy v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 263, 38 S. Ct. 289, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

If the decree of the District Court is a general one on the merits and the bill charged a violation of the Constitution of the United States a direct appeal to the Supreme Court brings up the whole case. Northwestern Laundry v. Des Moines, (1916) 239 U. S. 486, 36 S. Ct. 206, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 396.

Clause 4. Construction or Application of Constitution (p. 406)

In general.—It is expressly provided that appeals and writs of error may be taken direct from a District Court to the Supreme Court in cases involving the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States. Carolina Glass Co. v. South Carolina, (1916) 240 U. S. 305, 36 S. Ct. 293, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 658; Badders v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 391, 36 S. Ct. 367, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 706.

Income tax.—Where a stockholder sues to enjoin the corporation from paying a tax under the Income Tax Law of 1913 on the ground of its unconstitutionality and the injunction is refused by the District Court a direct appeal lies to the Supreme Court. Stanton v. Baltic Min. Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 278, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 546.

Habeas corpus cases.—A decision of a federal court denying a writ of habeas corpus has been held to be reviewable by direct appeal to the Supreme Court, where the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States is necessarily involved. Horn v. Mitchell, (1917) 243 U. S. 247, 37 S. Ct. 293.

For other habeas corpus cases taken direct to the Supreme Court see Kelly v. Griffin, (1916) 241 U. S. 6, 36 S. Ct. 487, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 861; Bingham v. Bradley, (1916) 241 U. S. 511, 36 S. Ct. 634, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136; Abbott v. Brown, (1916) 241 U. S. 606, 36 S. Ct. 689, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1199; Frank v. Mangum, (1915) 237 U. S. 309, 35 S. Ct. 582, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 969; Collins v. Johnston, (1915) 237 U. S. 502, 35 S. Ct. 649, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1071; Ebeling v. Morgan, (1915) 237 U. S. 625, 35 S. Ct. 710, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1151; Morgan v. Devine, (1915) 237 U. S. 632, 35 S. Ct. 712, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1153; Henry v. Henkel, (1914) 235 U. S. 219, 35 S. Ct. 54, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 203; Drew v. Thaw, (1914) 235 U. S. 432, 35 S. Ct. 137, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 302.

Treaty.—Unless the question raised is substantial the United States Supreme Court will dismiss, for want of jurisdiction, a case brought before it direct from the District Court. Chin Fong v. Backus, (1916) 241 U. S. 1, 36 S. Ct. 490, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 859, wherein an appeal from a judgment of the District Court dismissing a petition for habeas corpus was itself dismissed, it appearing that, while the appellant claimed that a treaty was drawn in question, the facts showed that the question really related to the construction of statutes regulating Chinese immigration and the right of a person of Chinese descent to enter the United States.

Vol. IV, p. 409, sec. 6.

II. FINAL DECISIONS (p. 410)

The jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of Appeals extends to the review only of final decisions, except as provided in the next section 7 now embodied in Judicial Code, § 129, 1912 Supp., p. 195. Crooker v. Knudsen, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 857, 147 C. C. A. 51.

When decision is final.—No judgment is final which does not terminate the litigation between the parties on the merits of the case, or on some severable phase thereof, nor until it is entered in a court from which execution can issue. Crooker v. Knudsen, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 857, 147 C. C. A. 51.

Part of a decree may be final and part interlocutory for purposes of an appeal. Historical Pub. Co. v. Jones Bros. Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 784, 145 C. C. A. 655, wherein, in a suit to enjoin the infringement of two copyrights, the bill was dismissed as to an alleged infringement, and this was held to be a final decree, although as to the other infringement an interlocutory decree was entered.

An order sustaining a demurrer to a plea of recoupment for a greater amount than that claimed by the plaintiff, the record not showing any disposition of the issues raised by that plea and a plea of general denial, was not final for the purpose of a writ of error. Treadwell v. Corker, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 348, 157 C. C. A. 540.

Order dismissing counterclaim.—In Economy Fuse, etc., Co. v. Killark Electric Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 120, 148 C. C. A. 614, an order amending an answer by dismissing a counterclaim without prejudice on the motion of the defendant was held not final, and therefore not appealable.

A judgment denying an application to set aside a default judgment, on the ground that the latter was rendered without jurisdiction, the application having been heard on affidavits, was declared to be final and reviewable in the Circuit Court of Appeals, "in view of the nature of the attack made upon the original judgment." Stevirmac Oil, etc., Co. v. Dittman, (1917) 245 U. S. 210, 38 S. Ct. 116, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Order denying leave to intervene.—"In intervention there are two classes of cases — one class in which the intervention is not indispensable to the preservation or enforcement of the claim of the petitioner, and there the permission to intervene is discretionary with the court; another class in which the petitioner claims a lien upon or an interest in specific property in the exclusive jurisdiction and subject to the exclusive disposition of a court, and his interest therein can be established, preserved, or enforced in no other way than by the determination and action of that court. The petitioner who has a claim of the latter class has an absolute right to intervene in the proceeding in which the court holds the exclusive custody and dominion of the property, permission for him to intervene is not discretionary with the court, and he may review by appeal an order refusing that right." Swift v. Black Panther Oil, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 20, 156 C. C. A. 448.

A decree on a libel in rem against a ship by which the latter is released from arrest in effect terminates the proceeding against her and is appealable. The Attualita, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 909, 152 C. C. A. 43.

Decrees in patent suits.—In Stromberg Motor Devices Co. v. Arnson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 891, 153 C. C. A. 19, the complainant filed a bill upon two patents, one to Ahara and one to Richard. The District Court entered a decree sustaining the Ahara patent with the usual directions as to injunction and accounting, and dismissed the bill as to the Richard patent without costs to either party. The complainant appealed from that part of the decree dismissing the bill as to the Richard patent. It was held that the decree was not final, and the appeal was dismissed.

In habeas corpus.—An order overruling a demurrer to a petition for a writ of habeas corpus and granting the petition is not appealable. But an appeal from an order discharging the petitioner from custody will lie. Backus v. Yep Kim Yuen, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 848, 142 C. C. A. 372.

No appeal lies from an order made by the district judge in vacation on the hearing of the issues raised by a petition for the writ of habeas corpus and the return thereto. Hoskins v. Funk, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 278, 152 C. C. A. 266.

Order disposing of writ of arrest.—No appeal lies from an order sustaining or dissolving a writ of arrest in a civil action. Crooker v. Knudsen, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 857, 147 C. C. A. 51.

III. REVIEW BY CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEALS "IN ALL OTHER CASES," ETC. (p. 414)

Methods of review.—An order adjudging one guilty of contempt in violating an injunction decree in a civil suit affecting water rights may be reviewed on appeal, as the judgment "is not primarily punitive in its nature, but it is a judgment in a civil and remedial proceeding, instituted to protect and enforce private rights, and to that end to compel obedience of the decree of the court." Hanley v. Pacific Live Stock Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 522, 148 C. C. A. 288.

V. WHEN DECISIONS OF CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEALS ARE FINAL (p. 416)

In general.—"The jurisdiction referred to, it has come to be settled, means the jurisdiction of the United States District Court as originally invoked." Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1917) 245 U. S. 359, 38 S. Ct. 130, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Jurisdiction depending entirely on diverse citizenship, etc.—Where plaintiff's pleading showed that the federal jurisdiction was invoked solely upon the ground of diversity of citizenship, the appeal was necessarily dismissed. Hitchman Coal, etc., Co. v. Mitchell, (1916) 241 U. S. 644, 36 S. Ct. 450, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1218, followed in Eagle Glass, etc., Co. v. Rowe, (1917) 245 U. S. 275, 38 S. Ct. 80, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is final and not reviewable on writ of error where it was rendered in a case removed from a state court to the federal District Court on a petition setting up diversity of citizenship as the ground of removal without alluding to any other ground. Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1917) 245 U. S. 359, 38 S. Ct. 130, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Jurisdiction not depending entirely on diverse citizenship, etc.—A judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals which was rendered in a case removed from a state court to the federal District Court on a petition containing an allegation that the complaint alleged a cause of action arising under the Interstate Commerce Act, and making that fact, as well as diversity of citizenship, a ground of removal, was reviewable by the federal Supreme Court on writ of error. Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1917). 245 U. S. 562, 38 S. Ct. 203, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

On writ of error to the Circuit Court of Appeals the Supreme Court had jurisdiction to review the whole case where the plaintiff's complaint not only alleged diverse citizenship of the parties, but that certain orders of a state court upon which the defendant relied were void as having been entered without due process of law, in violation of the Federal Constitution, and the contention was insisted upon in both the lower courts. Chaloner v. Sherman, (1917) 242 U. S. 455, 37 S. Ct. 136, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 427, citing Howard v. U. S., (1902) 184 U. S. 676, 681, 22 S. Ct. 543, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 754, 757.

Where the District Court had jurisdiction of a suit in equity not only on the ground of diverse citizenship, but because the bill was dependent and ancillary and the jurisdiction to entertain it was referable to that invoked in actions at law out of which it arose, which actions were cognizable as arising under a law of the United States, the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals was appealable to the Supreme Court. Eichel v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (1917) 245 U. S. 102, 38 S. Ct. 47, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Under criminal laws.—"A conviction for a criminal although summary contempt is, for the purposes of our reviewing power, a matter of criminal law not within our jurisdiction on error." Toledo Newspaper Co. v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing a writ of error.

VI. CERTIFYING QUESTIONS TO SUPREME COURT (p. 418)

The power to certify was enlarged by Judicial Code, § 239. See notes to said section 239, infra, p. 1319, citing U. S. v. Lane, (1917) 245 U. S. 166, 38 S. Ct. 94, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Form of certificate.—In Ricaud v. American Metal Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 304, 38 S. Ct. 312, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, the court decided that "for the purpose of making an end of the litigation, we will proceed to answer the question," but said: "There is no denying that there is much of merit in the objection to the form of this certificate, including the form of the questions, for the reason that the certificate, instead of containing a 'proper statement of the facts on which the questions and propositions of law arise,' as is required by rule 37 of this court, contains a statement of what is 'alleged and denied' by the parties plaintiff and defendant in their pleadings, with the additional statement that there was evidence 'tending to establish the facts as claimed by each party,' but without any finding whatever as to what the evidence showed the facts to be, and the first question, on which the other two depend, is in terms based entirely on an 'assumed' statement of facts."

"Whole record and cause" brought up.—This was done by certiorari after certification of questions by the Circuit Court of Appeals in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jacoby, (1916) 242 U. S. 39, 37 S. Ct. 49, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 165.

VII. REVIEW BY SUPREME COURT ON CERTIORARI (p. 420)

This power is sparingly exercised.—Houston Oil Co. v. Goodrich, (1918) 245 U. S. 440, 38 S. Ct. 140, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing at the hearing a writ of certiorari as having been improvidently granted, the court saying: "The record discloses no sufficient reason within the rule long observed why we should review the judgment below. Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 506, 17 S. Ct. 665, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 1095."

"As has been many times declared, this is a jurisdiction to be exercised sparingly, and only in cases of peculiar gravity and general importance, or in order to secure uniformity of decision." Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Wolf, (1916) 240 U. S. 251, 36 S. Ct. 269, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 629.

When such power will be exercised.—In a trademark infringement case heard on two writs of certiorari, one to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and the other to the same court for the Seventh Circuit, Mr. Justice Pitney said: "No question is raised respecting the propriety of passing upon the questions at issue on a review of decisions rendered upon applications for temporary injunction. Both district courts granted such injunctions, and both Circuit Courts of Appeals reversed upon grounds that went to the merits. These courts differed upon fundamental questions, and it was because of this that the writs of certiorari were allowed, the situation being such that it was deemed proper to allow them before final decrees were made, notwithstanding the general rule to the contrary." Hanover Star Milling Co. v. Metcalf, (1916) 240 U. S. 403, 36 S. Ct. 357, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 713.

In Central Trust Co. v. Chicago Auditorium Ass'n, (1916) 240 U. S. 581, 36 S. Ct. 412, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 811, L. R. A. 1917B 580, "in view of the general importance of the question of the amount allowable in its relation to the questions involved in the trustee's appeal," certiorari was granted to review a decree allowing as a provable debt against a bankrupt estate, a part of the damages growing out of the bankrupt's breach of an executory contract.

At what stage of proceedings.—"Except in extraordinary cases the writ is not issued until final decree." Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Wolf, (1916) 240 U. S. 251, 36 S. Ct. 269, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 629.

A writ of certiorari was dismissed as improvidently granted in Furness v. Yang-Tsze Ins. Ass'n, (1917) 242 U. S. 430, 37 S. Ct. 141, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 409, where the court said: "We should have denied the petition therefor if the facts essential to an adequate appreciation of the situation had then been brought to our attention. Petitions of this character are at the risk of the party making them, and whenever, in the progress of the cause, facts develop which, if disclosed on the application, would have induced a refusal, the court may, upon motion by a party, or ex mero motu, dismiss the writ. United States v. Rimer, 220 U. S. 547, 55 L. ed. 578, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 596; State, Malone, Prosecutor, v. Water Comrs., 30 N. J. L. 247."

"Directly within the rule announced in" the foregoing case, said the court, a writ of certiorari was dismissed as improvidently granted in Tyrrell v. District of Columbia, (1917) 243 U. S. 1, 37 S. Ct. 361, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 557.

Effect of granting or denying writ.—"It is, of course, sufficiently evident that the refusal of an application for this extraordinary writ is in no case equivalent to an affirmance of the decree that is sought to be reviewed." Per Mr. Justice Pitney in Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Wolf, (1916) 240 U. S. 251, 36 S. Ct. 269, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 629.

Hearing and examination.—In Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Wolf, (1916) 240 U. S. 251, 36 S. Ct. 269, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 629, a suit to restrain infringement of a trademark and unfair competition, the Circuit Court on final hearing dismissed the bill. This decree was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals with directions to decree an injunction and an accounting; that court overruling, however, the claim that a trademark right was asserted in the bill and had not been abandoned. Complainant petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari to review that decision, which was denied (1909) 214 U. S. 514, 29 S. Ct. 696, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 1063. Pursuant to the mandate of the Circuit Court of Appeals, the Circuit Court decreed an injunction and a reference for accounting of damages and profits and the master recommended a decree for a stated substantial sum. But the court adjudged a recovery of $1 nominal damages, (E. D. Mo. 1912) 192 Fed. 930. Complainant appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals, which court reversed the decree, with directions that the master's report be confirmed and decree entered against defendant, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1913) 206 Fed. 611, 124 C. C. A. 409. The Supreme Court allowed a writ of certiorari, and on the hearing complainant insisted that he had a valid trademark which was infringed by the defendant. Mr. Justice Pitney said: "It is contended that this question is settled otherwise, at least as between these parties, by the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals on the first appeal, and our refusal to review that decision upon complainant's petition for a writ of certiorari, and that the only questions open for review at this time are those that were before the Court of Appeals upon the second appeal. This, however, is based upon an erroneous view of the nature of our jurisdiction to review the judgments and decrees of the Circuit Court of Appeals by certiorari under sec. 240, Judicial Code, derived from sec. 6 of the Evarts Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 828. . . . The decree that was sought to be reviewed by certiorari at complainant's instance was not a final one, a fact that of itself alone furnished sufficient ground for the denial of the application; besides which it appears, by reference to our files, that the application was opposed by the present petitioner upon the ground that the case, however important to the parties, involved no question of public interest and general importance, nor any conflict between the decisions of state and federal courts, or between those of federal courts of different circuits. It is, of course sufficiently evident that the refusal of an application for this extraordinary writ is in no case equivalent to an affirmance of the decree that is sought to be reviewed. And, although in this instance the interlocutory decision may have been treated as settling 'the law of the case' so as to furnish the rule for the guidance of the referee, the district court, and the Court of Appeals itself upon the second appeal, this court, in now reviewing the final decree by virtue of the writ of certiorari, is called upon to notice and rectify any error that may have occurred in the interlocutory proceedings."

VIII. REVIEW BY SUPREME COURT IN CASES NOT MADE FINAL (p. 422)

Only final judgments.—No appeal lies from a decree of a federal Circuit Court of Appeals which affirmed an interlocutory order of a District Court denying an application for a preliminary injunction upon the ground that there was an adequate remedy at law, where final decree dismissing the bill was neither entered in the District Court nor directed by the Circuit Court of Appeals so as to preclude amendment of the bill and further proceedings. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Weld County, (1918) 247 U. S. 282, 38 S. Ct. 510, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Federal question.—Where it sufficiently appears from an amended bill that jurisdiction did not depend solely upon the citizenship of the respective parties but that the controversy involved with other questions the construction of an Act of Congress prescribing the authority of a territorial legislature, the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals is not final. Christianson v. King County, (1915) 239 U. S. 356, 36 S. Ct. 114, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 327.

But a mere formal statement in a bill that the cause of action is one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States is not sufficient to establish that fact so as to authorize the Supreme Court to review a judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals under this section. Norton v. Whiteside, (1915) 239 U. S. 144, 36 S. Ct. 97, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 186.

The question as to the construction of the word "officer" as used in the Criminal Code of March 4, 1909, ch. 321, § 32, 1909 Supp., p. 414, and whether it includes a congressman does not involve the Constitution of the United States so as to permit an appeal to the Supreme Court under this section. Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 60, 36 S. Ct. 255, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 526.

Value of matter in controversy.—"It long has been settled that the jurisdiction conferred by Congress upon any court of the United States in a case where the matter in controversy exceeds a certain sum of money does not include cases where the rights of the parties are incapable of being valued in money, and therefore excludes habeas corpus cases." Horn v. Mitchell, (1917) 243 U. S. 247, 37 S. Ct. 293, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 700.

In an action by the United States to recover penalties for certain violations of the Hours of Service Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2939, title RAILROADS, 1909 Supp., p. 581, where defendant challenged and sought to have reviewed only so much of the judgment against it affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals as awarded recovery of six penalties of $150 each, for as many separate violations of the Act, the requisite jurisdictional amount of $1,000 was not in dispute and a writ of error was dismissed. San Pedro, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 307, 38 S. Ct. 498, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Vol. IV, p. 428, sec. 11.

Time of taking appeal, etc., from Porto Rico, see note to 1916 Supp., p. 135 (Act of Jan. 28, 1915), infra, p. 1323.

Vol. IV, p. 436, sec. 687.

Suits by states.—The Supreme Court would be ousted of jurisdiction of a suit by a state if it should appear that a citizen of the state was an indispensable party. New Mexico v. Lane, (1917) 243 U. S. 52, 37 C. Ct. 348, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 588.

Where United States necessary party.—In New Mexico v. Lane, (1917) 243 U. S. 52, 37 S. Ct. 348, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 588, the court dismissed for want of jurisdiction, because there were questions of law and of fact upon which the United States would have to be heard, an original bill filed by the state of New Mexico against the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office to establish the state's asserted title to certain lands under the school land grant, and to restrain the Interior Department from disposing of such lands.

Vol. IV, p. 439, sec. 688.

Prohibition.—A writ of prohibition will not be issued by the federal Supreme Court to prevent further proceedings in an action brought against a contractor and a petitioner for the writ as its surety, under the Act of Feb. 24, 1905, ch. 778, in PUBLIC CONTRACTS, vol. 10, p. 343, on the ground that the rights of some of the claimants were asserted after the one-year period of limitation which the statute fixes. Ex p. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 19, 38 S. Ct. 430, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, where the court said: "This depends upon facts which are not before us and besides involves a question within the competency of the court to decide concerning which, therefore, there is no basis for granting the writ of prohibition or sanctioning a resort to any other extraordinary legal remedy."

Vol. IV, p. 443, sec. 690.

Questioning jurisdiction.—On appeal or writ of error the question of appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court will be noticed and determined by the court, though the question be not suggested or argued by counsel. Swift v. Hoover, (1916) 242 U. S. 107, 37 S. Ct. 56, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 175, dismissing an appeal for want of jurisdiction noticed by the court sua sponte.

Vol. IV, p. 450, sec. 700.

Waiver without written stipulation.—Where waiver of a jury trial is effected either by express oral consent or by personal attendance upon the trial without objection, but without the filing of a written stipulation, rulings of the court upon the trial are not reviewable, for such a submission to the decision of the court is not within the provisions of R. S. secs. 649 and 700. Wm. Edwards Co. v. La Dow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 378, 144 C. C. A. 520.

An oral waiver of trial by jury does not satisfy the statute. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 527, 143 C. C. A. 595.

Findings and review.—In Sierra Land, etc., Co. v. Desert Power, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 982, 144 C. C. A. 264, the court made the general finding, "And the court, having fully considered the premises, finds the issue in favor of the defendant," and entered a judgment accordingly. It was held that the Appellate Court could not, on writ of error, inquire into the sufficiency of the testimony to support the finding where there was no application to the trial court for a declaration of law that upon the whole case the finding should be for the plaintiff, and an exception to the refusal to grant the application, and that the Appellate Court was limited to a review of such rulings as were excepted to during the progress of the trial.

In Good Pine Lumber Co. v. Duke, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 714, 144 C. C. A. 124, where the record showed no agreed statement of facts and no special finding of facts by the judge, but a general finding, embodied in the judgment assigning no other reason than that the law and the evidence was in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, only the rulings of the court during the progress of the case, duly presented by a bill of exceptions, could be reviewed.

Rulings and exceptions.—In Phoenix Securities Co. v. Dittmar, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 892, 140 C. C. A. 336, on writ of error to review a judgment for the plaintiff, there being no finding of facts, the court said: "Upon the assignment that there was no evidence to sustain the judgment, the question arises: To what extent may the decision of the court below be reviewed here upon the writ of error? . . . The case at bar was submitted to the court for decision upon the pleadings and evidence at the close of the trial, and the question whether there was any evidence to sustain the judgment for the plaintiff was not presented to the court. Under these circumstances, upon a review of the case in this court, we are confined to the consideration of the question whether the complaint stated a cause of action, and whether any objection was taken and exception reserved to the admission of testimony in the course of the trial."

Vol. IV, p. 458, sec. 701.

Applicable to Circuit Courts of Appeals.—Under this section the Circuit Court of Appeals is vested with power to modify as well as to affirm or reverse any judgment of the District Court, and in a case tried without a jury, where the findings of fact made by the court are undisputed, as well as when they are agreed upon by the parties, the proper judgment may be rendered thereon in the appellate tribunal after a reversal of the judgment of the trial court. U. S. v. Illinois Surety Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 653, 141 C. C. A. 409.

"The writ of certiorari when issued to the Court of Appeals is not limited to cases in which final judgment has been entered, but only to cases in which the judgment when entered is final." George A. Fuller Co. v. Otis Elevator Co., (1918) 245 U. S. 489, 38 S. Ct. 180, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

See notes to 1912 Supp., p. 236, Judicial Code, § 251, infra, p. 1320.

A writ of certiorari was dismissed as improvidently granted in Tyrrell v. District of Columbia, (1917) 243 U. S. 1, 37 S. Ct. 361, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 557, because the petitioner for certiorari had not reserved an exception to the charge of the court on the exact point which was made the basis of the writ of certiorari.

II. FINAL JUDGMENTS OR DECREES IN ANY SUIT IN THE HIGHEST COURT OF A STATE (p. 469).

See Bruce v. Tobin, (1917) 245 U. S. 18, 38 S. Ct. 7, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, as cited in notes to Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, § 2, ante, this volume, title JUDICIARY, at p. 412.

Judgment only interlocutory.—A judgment of the Washington Supreme Court affirming on certiorari a judgment of the state Superior Court to the effect that the petitioner was entitled to condemn and appropriate certain land for a private way of necessity, and remanding the cause for further proceedings, was interlocutory and not reviewable by the federal Supreme Court, where, in view of the decisions of the state Supreme Court, such a judgment was to be interpreted as being subject to a condition that the proper compensation be first ascertained and paid. Washington v. Superior Court, (1917) 243 U. S. 251, 37 S. Ct. 295, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 702.

Prohibition is a distinct suit and the judgment finally disposing of it is a final judgment. Mt. Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck Co. v. Alabama Interstate Power Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 30, 36 S. Ct. 234, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 507; Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Michigan R. Commission, (1916) 240 U. S. 564, 36 S. Ct. 424, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 802.

Highest court of the state.—A writ of error was properly prosecuted to the Court of Appeals of Ohio where the Supreme Court of the state had denied an application to direct the Court of Appeals to certify the record for review, and had dismissed a writ of error for want of jurisdiction. Cuyahoga River Power Co. v. Northern Realty Co., (1916) 244 U. S. 300, 37 S. Ct. 643, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1153.

Where the Court of Appeals of Ohio specifically affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Cincinnati and ordered "that a special mandate be sent to the Superior Court of Cincinnati to carry this judgment into execution," and the Ohio Supreme Court overruled an application to direct the Court of Appeals to certify its record to the Supreme Court for review, a writ of error from the federal Supreme Court addressed to the Superior Court of Cincinnati was dismissed because it should have been directed to the Court of Appeals. Cincinnati Second Nat Bank v. Okeana First Nat. Bank, (1916) 242 U. S. 600, 37 S. Ct. 236, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 518.

III. FICTITIOUS QUESTIONS (p. 469)

Frivolous claim.—The claim that interstate commerce was unlawfully burdened by requiring that the delivery track owned by a railway company which, though technically a separate legal entity, was the mere agency or instrumentality of two other railway companies through joint ownership and control, should be treated, with respect to intrastate traffic, precisely as many other similarly used and situated tracks had always been used by the owning companies, was too unsound to merit consideration by the federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court: Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Minneapolis Civic, etc., Assoc., (1918) 247 U. S. 490, 38 S. Ct. 553, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In Valley Steamship Co. v. Wattawa, (1917) 244 U. S. 202, 37 S. Ct. 523, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1084, the court said: "The first point relied upon is entirely without merit, and inadequate to support our jurisdiction. In the absence of congressional legislation the settled general rule is that without violating the commerce clause, the states may legislate concerning relative rights and duties of employers and employees while within their borders, although engaged in interstate commerce," citing cases.

VI. VALIDITY OF STATUTE OF OR AUTHORITY EXERCISED UNDER STATE (p. 473)

Drawn in question.—Where the attorney for the plaintiff in an action on the federal Employer's Liability Act, which the defendant settled before trial by paying a certain amount, intervened and claimed his fee, pursuant to his contract with the plaintiff, and recovered judgment for the same, against the defendant in the action, the federal Supreme Court had jurisdiction of a writ of error as against the contention that the validity of the state statute giving attorneys a lien upon a cause of action, so far as it applied to a lien upon a cause of action arising on the federal Employers' Liability Act was not sufficiently shown to be a ground of the judgment, where the question was called to the attention of the trial court and was discussed at length by the appellate state court. Dickinson v. Stiles, (1918) 246 U. S. 631, 38 S. Ct. 415, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Due process of law.—On writ of error to review a decree which affirmed a decree in favor of a state railroad commission in a suit by a railroad common carrier to enjoin it from enforcing its order requiring locomotives to be equipped with headlights of not less than 1,500 candle power, the railroad company could not insist that the order was so indefinite and uncertain in its terms as not to furnish an intelligible measure of the company's duty, and was therefore a denial of due process of law, where the State Supreme Court held that the railroad commission had power to grant relief through a rehearing, and that without first resorting to that method of procedure the company was not entitled to have the order set aside by the courts, and the record on the writ of error showed that the company was accorded a hearing upon the very question of modification of the order, but abandoned it. Vandalia R. Co. v. Public Service Commission Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 255, 37 S. Ct. 93, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 276.

"The due process clause does not take up the laws of the several states and make all questions pertaining to them constitutional questions, nor does it enable this court to revise the decisions of the state courts upon questions of state law. Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 186, 15 S. Ct. 777, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 941, 943; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 112, 16 S. Ct. 80, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 91, 94; Castillo v. McCormico, 168 U. S. 674, 683, 684, 18 S. Ct. 229, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 622, 625, 626." Enterprise Irrigation Dist. v. Farmers Mut. Canal Co., (1917) 243

U. S. 157, 37 S. Ct. 318, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 644, disregarding the claim that the state court, in disposing of some of the questions, including that of estoppel in pais, misconstrued or misapplied the statutory and common law of the state, and thereby infringed the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th amendment.

Impairing contracts—By statute.—"In cases of this character, the jurisdiction of this court does not depend upon the form in which the legislative action is expressed, but rather upon its practical effect and operation as construed and applied by the state court of last resort, and this irrespective of the process of reasoning by which the decision is reached, or the precise extent to which reliance is placed upon the subsequent legislation. McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 116, 117, 19 S. Ct. 134, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 382, 387, 388; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 77, 20 S. Ct. 545, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 673, 680; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 589, 24 S. Ct. 767, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 1124, 1129; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 215 U. S. 170, 175, 30 S. Ct. 40, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 144, 147; Fisher v. New Orleans, 218 U. S. 438, 440, 31 S. Ct. 57, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1099; Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v. Louisiana, 233 U. S. 362, 376, 34 S. Ct. 627, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1001, 1006; Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Behrman, 235 U. S. 164, 170, 35 S. Ct. 62, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 175, 180. . . . Where this court is called upon in the exercise of its jurisdiction to decide whether state legislation impairs the obligation of a contract, we are required to determine upon our independent judgment these questions: (1) Was there a contract? (2) If so, what obligation arose from it? (3) Has that obligation been impaired by subsequent legislation? Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 77, 20 S. Ct. 545, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 673, 680; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 147, 21 S. Ct. 575, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 788, 791; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 589, 24 S. Ct. 767, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 1124, 1129." Detroit United R. v. Michigan, (1916) 242 U. S. 238, 37 S. Ct. 87, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 268.

VII. TITLE, RIGHT, PRIVILEGE, OR IMMUNITY CLAIMED UNDER CONSTITUTION, TREATY, OR STATUTE OF OR AUTHORITY EXERCISED UNDER UNITED STATES (p. 476)

In general.—It cannot be held that any right of plaintiff in error under a law of the United States was infringed by a decision and judgment when the law creating the supposed right was not enacted until after the judgment. Vandalia R. Co. v. Public Service Commission, (1916) 242 U. S. 255, 37 S. Ct. 93, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 276.

The fact that the plaintiff's pleading does not refer in terms to a federal statute determining the defendant's liability is not controlling as to whether a federal question exists, and if the plaintiff's cause of action requires the application of the federal statute and his right thereunder is denied in a state court the federal Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review the federal question involved. Jones Nat. Bank v. Yates, (1916) 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788.

Several grounds.—In Wellsville Oil Co. v. Miller, (1917) 243 U. S. 6, 37 S. Ct. 362, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 559, affirming a judgment which dismissed an appeal from a judgment dismissing the petition in a suit to protect rights under an oil and gas lease in Oklahoma, and to set aside a subsequent conflicting lease, the court said: "Before coming to consider the merits of the errors relied upon, we observe that because of the federal nature of the court which authorized the lease whose validity was involved, the subject matter with which the case dealt (Indian land), and the asserted want of power in the Secretary of the Interior to disapprove the lease, and the further assertion that the court had no authority in any event to subject the lease to the approval of the Secretary, we think the issues involved so concern matters of inherently federal nature as to afford jurisdiction. Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; Fritzen v. Boatmen's Bank, 212 U. S. 364, 53 L. ed. 551, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366; Ohio ex rel. Davis v. Hildebrand, 241 U. S. 565, 60 L. ed. 1172, 36 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708. We therefore overrule the motion to dismiss."

Boundaries between states.—"Whether two states of the Union, either by long acquiescence in a practical location of their common boundary, or by agreement otherwise evidenced, have definitely fixed or changed the limits of their jurisdiction as laid down by the authority of the general Government in treaty or statute, is in its nature a federal question." Cissna v. Tennessee, (1918) 246 U. S. 289, 38 S. Ct. 309, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Full faith and credit clause.—An essential step in invoking the full faith and credit clause as to a judgment in another state is that the faith and credit that it has by law or usage in the courts of the state of its rendition must be brought to the attention of the court where the judgment is offered. Gasquet v. Lapeyre, (1917) 242 U. S. 367, 37 S. Ct. 165, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 367.

Impairment of the obligation of a contract by judicial decision does not raise a federal question. Kryger v. Wilson, (1916) 242 U. S. 171, 37 S. Ct. 34, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 229.

Judgment of federal court.—The Supreme Court had jurisdiction on writ of error to review a decree in which a decree of a federal court was an element of decision against the plaintiff in error and was claimed by him to be an element in his favor. Donohue v. Vosper, (1917) 243 U. S. 59, 37 S. Ct. 350, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 592.

Under federal Employers' Liability Act.—In Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mims, (1917) 242 U. S. 532, 37 S. Ct. 188, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 476, more fully described infra, p. 1294, a writ of error was dismissed because the party's claim under the federal Employers' Liability Act was not asserted at the proper time and in the proper manner.

Under national banking laws.—In Union Nat. Bank v. McBoyle, (1917) 243 U. S. 26, 37 S. Ct. 370, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 570, a writ of error to review a judgment declaring plaintiffs to be the owners of certain shares of stock which they had purchased from the cashier of a national bank, was dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Property taken for private purpose.—In O'Neill v. Learner, (1915) 239 U. S. 244, 36 S. Ct. 54, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 249, it was held that a federal question was presented, it appearing that a claim of the plaintiffs in error that property of theirs was taken for a private purpose in violation of the due process of law provision in the Federal Constitution, was denied. See to the same effect Myles Salt Co. v. Iberia, etc., Drainage Dist., (1916) 239 U. S. 478, 36 S. Ct. 204, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 392.

Under corporate charter conferred by Congress.—In Knights of Pythias v. Mims, (1916) 241 U. S. 574, 36 S. Ct. 702, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179, a motion to dismiss a writ of error to a state court was denied because the suit was against a corporation chartered by Congress and it turned on the construction given the charter.

Under Interstate Commerce Act.—Where the Carmack amendment is in issue in the state court because of a claim for damages for loss of goods shipped in interstate commerce, the Supreme Court of the United States has jurisdiction to review the judgment of the state court if some right accruing under the statute is denied. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Dettlebach, (1916) 239 U. S. 588, 36 S. Ct. 177, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 453.

In an action against an initial carrier of an interstate shipment, for its negligence and that of connecting carriers, on a through bill of lading containing, among other things, a stipulation that the carrier should not be liable for damages unless claims for damages were reported to the delivery line within thirty-six hours after the consignee had been notified of the arrival of the freight at the place of delivery, the defendant's answer, making one of the issues upon which the case was tried and decided, set up this clause in the bill of lading and the failure of the plaintiff to comply with it. It was held that a right was involved which was the creation of a federal statute, viz., the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906, and the action was necessarily founded on that amendment. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Starbird, (1917) 243 U. S. 592, 37 S. Ct. 462, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 917.

Under Safety Appliance Act.—Where an order of a state railroad commission was not invalid as regarded the Safety Appliance Act of Feb. 17, 1911, 1912 Supp., p. 339, under the controlling principles declared in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Georgia, (1913) 234 U. S. 280, 290, 34 S. Ct. 829, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1312, 1317, the validity of such order having been affirmed by the state Supreme Court, its validity could not be attacked on writ of error in the federal Supreme Court on the ground that it infringed the subsequently enacted amendatory Safety Appliance Act of March 4, 1915, 1916 Supp., p. 215. Vandalia R. Co. v. Public Service Commission, (1916) 242 U. S. 255, 37 S. Ct. 212, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 276.

Under removal statutes.—Denial of a defendant's contention, at the close of the plaintiff's evidence, that the case which was confessedly not before removable had become removable by failure to prove the allegation which made the case previously nonremovable, did not constitute a denial of federal right where, according to the established doctrine of the federal Supreme Court, the defendant had not acquired a right of removal at that time. Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Guaranty of republican form of government.—"As has been decided repeatedly, the question whether this guaranty has been violated is not a judicial but a political question, committed to Congress, and not to the courts. Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 39, 42, 12 L. ed. 581, 597, 599; Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Oregon, 223 U. S. 118, 56 L. ed. 377, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Kiernan v. Portland, 223 U. S. 151, 56 L. ed. 386, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Marshall v. Dye, 231 U. S. 250, 256, 58 L. ed. 206, 207, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Ohio ex rel. Davis v. Hildebrandt, 241 U. S. 565, 60 L. ed. 1172, 36 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708."

VIII. DRAWN IN QUESTION OR SPECIALLY SET UP AND CLAIMED (p. 480)

Necessity.—Unless some title, right, privilege, or immunity is duly and specially claimed, the federal Supreme Court has no jurisdiction. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Taber, (1917) 244 U. S. 200, 37 S. Ct. 522, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1082.

Time to raise question or make claim.—A claim of federal question first made in an application for leave to file a second petition for rehearing comes too late. Bilby v. Stewart, (1918) 246 U. S. 255, 38 S. Ct. 264, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Nothing is better settled than that it is too late to raise a federal question for the first time in a petition for a rehearing, after the final judgment of the state court of last resort. If, however, the state court actually entertains the petition and decides the federal question, and this appears by the record, the statutory requirement that the right shall be specially set up and denied is complied with. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Harold, (1916) 241 U. S. 371, 36 S. Ct. 665, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1050.

"The claim under the Carmack Amendment was first set up and asserted in a petition for rehearing after the judgment in the trial court was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the state. The petition was not entertained, but was denied without passing upon the federal question thus tardily raised. That question therefore is not open to consideration here." St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Shepherd, (1916) 240 U. S. 240, 36 S. Ct. 274, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 622.

In Saunders v. Shaw, (1917) 244 U. S. 317, 37 S. Ct. 638, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1163, holding that the court had jurisdiction on a writ of error, where the state Supreme Court had declined to consider an application by plaintiff in error for a rehearing, it was said: "The record discloses the facts but does not disclose the claim of right under the 14th amendment until the assignment of errors filed the day before the chief justice of the state granted this writ. Of course ordinarily that would not be enough. But when the act complained of is the act of the supreme court, done unexpectedly, at the end of the proceeding, when the plaintiff in error no longer had any right to add to the record, it would leave a serious gap in the remedy for infraction of constitutional rights if the party aggrieved in such a way could not come here. The defendant was not bound to contemplate a decision of the case before his evidence was heard, and therefore was not bound to ask a ruling or to take other precautions in advance. The denial of rights given by the 14th Amendment need not be by legislation. Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 227 U. S. 278, 57 L. ed. 510, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312. It appears that shortly after the supreme court had declined to entertain the petition for rehearing the plaintiff in error brought the claim of constitutional right to the attention of the chief justice of the state by his assignment of errors. We do not see what more he could have done."

In Nevada-California-Oregon R. Co. v. Burrus, (1917) 244 U. S. 103, 37 S. Ct. 576, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1019, an action for breach of a contract to furnish plaintiff (defendant in error) a special train to carry him to a designated point, the plaintiff got a judgment, and the only question before the federal Supreme Court was whether any rights of the defendant under the Interstate Commerce Act had been infringed. The ground on which such an infraction was alleged was that the trial court, after the trial had been going on for more than a day, refused to allow the answer to be amended so as to set up that no tariff rate for special trains had been filed by the defendant and that therefore the contract was illegal. The defendant had mentioned the point at the beginning of the trial, but this was the first time that it was presented in proper form under the state practice, although some months had elapsed since the beginning of the suit, and demurrers and other defenses had been interposed without suggesting this one. The Supreme Court of the state declined to overrule the discretionary judgment of the court below; and the federal Supreme Court said: "We perceive no reason why this court should interfere with the practice of the state."

In Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mims, (1917) 242 U. S. 532, 37 S. Ct. 188, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 476, the plaintiff administratrix sued a railroad common carrier for wrongful death of her intestate, nothing in her complaint tending to state a cause of action under the federal statute. The defendant filed an answer which was a specific denial under the state Code of Civil Procedure, and when the case was called for the second trial the defendant asked leave to amend its answer by pleading "gross and wilful contributory negligence" on the part of the deceased, which was granted, and the trial proceeded until plaintiff rested her case. The defendant then for the first time offered to introduce testimony which it was claimed, if admitted, would have tended to prove that the train which the deceased was in the act of approaching to inspect when he was killed was engaged in interstate commerce and that the deceased was in this respect and otherwise engaged in interstate commerce." The trial court rejected this proffer of testimony on the ground that it came too late and was not relevant to any issue tendered by the pleadings in the case. No application was made for leave to amend the answer by adding the claim under the federal law. The federal Supreme Court dismissed a writ of error because the defendant's claim was not asserted at the proper time and in the proper manner.

The proper way to raise the question or make the claim.—Where an action against a railroad company for death of an employee was based upon the state statute, the answer did not set up or rely upon the federal Employers' Liability Act, the trial court's attention was not called thereto, and, although urged to hold liability dependent upon it, the state Supreme Court declined to pass upon that point because not presented to the trial court, and this ruling was in entire accord with the state statute and established practice, the federal Supreme Court dismissed a writ of error for want of jurisdiction. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Taber, (1917) 244 U. S. 200, 37 S. Ct. 522, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1082.

Where an action was brought on a through bill of lading against an initial carrier of an interstate shipment, for its negligence and that of connecting carriers, and the defendant's answer set up a stipulation in the bill of lading and the plaintiff's failure to comply with it, this was a sufficient claim of right under the Carmack Amendment of the Interstate Commerce Law, as the state court must take judicial notice of the federal statute and the settled law that the bill of lading contained the entire contract upon which the responsibilities of the parties rested. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Starbird, (1917) 243 U. S. 592, 37 S. Ct. 462, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 917, where the court said: "The federal right is not required to be pleaded in any special or particular form. It is enough that it be relied upon and in a proper manner called to the attention of the court."

In Valley Steamship Co. v. Wattawa, (1917) 244 U. S. 202, 37 S. Ct. 523, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1084, dismissing for want of jurisdiction a writ of error to the Ohio Court of Appeals, the court said: "The second reason for reversal now set up was not presented to the trial court in any form. It was not pointed out clearly, if at all, by the petition in error before the Court of Appeals, and was not definitely mentioned in the opinion of that court, whose powers only extend to a review of the trial court's judgment for errors appearing on the record. Section 12, 247, Ohio General Code, as amended by 103 Ohio Laws, pp. 405, 431. The question, therefore, is not properly before us. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 308, 309, 47 L. ed. 480, 484, 485, 63 L. R. A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375."

Effect of opinion of state court.—In Cissna v. Tennessee, (1918) 246 U. S. 289, 38 S. Ct. 309, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, holding that the court had jurisdiction of a writ of error, although the record did not show that plaintiff in error specially set up in the state courts any contention that the decision of the merits turned upon questions of federal law, except as might appear by inference from the nature of the grounds upon which the decision was rested, the court said: "But if the supreme court of the state treated federal questions as necessarily involved and decided them adversely to plaintiff in error, and could not otherwise have reached the result that it did reach, it becomes immaterial to consider how they were raised. Miedreich v. Lauenstein, 232 U. S. 236, 243; North Carolina R. Co. v. Zachary, 232 U. S. 248, 257; Mallinckrodt Works v. St. Louis, 238 U. S. 41, 49." The court then pointed out that the opinion of the state court made it clear that the decision adverse to the plaintiff in error turned essentially upon questions of federal law.

A writ of error will be dismissed where, from absence of an opinion by the court below, it is impossible to say whether its judgment was rested upon state questions adequate to sustain it independent of the federal questions, or upon such federal questions, both being in the case. Cuyahoga River Power Co. v. Northern Realty Co., (1916) 244 U. S. 300, 37 S. Ct. 643, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1153.

IX. DECISION OF STATE COURT (p. 485)

Decision, when adverse.—It has never been required that a federal right must be denied in terms, but it has been uniformly held that it is sufficient if the state court necessarily denied it in the judgment rendered. So where the defendant in an action against an initial carrier of an interstate shipment, for its negligence and that of connecting carriers, set up in its answer the breach of a stipulation in the through bill of lading, and insisted that it had not been complied with, and the state court, in stating in its decision against the defendant that the bill of lading would be controlling in the absence of special facts which it found as to the effect of verbal notice given to certain agents in New York, necessarily denied the defendant's contention of federal right, viz., that the provision of the bill of lading was conclusive of the rights of the parties, by virtue of the Carmack Amendment of the Interstate Commerce Law. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Starbird, (1917) 243 U. S. 592, 243 S. Ct. 462, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 917.

"Where the state court does not decide against the plaintiff in error upon an independent state ground, but, deeming the federal question to be before it, actually entertains it and decides it adversely to the federal right asserted, this court has jurisdiction to review the judgment, assuming it to be a final judgment as it is here." Rogers v. Hennepin County, (1916) 240 U. S. 184, 36 S. Ct. 265, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 594.

Decision adverse by implication.—A federal question which will sustain a writ of error to a state court is involved in the denial of a requested instruction that a common-law marriage was not recognized by the Chickasaw Indians, and that a marriage of Chickasaws without a compliance with their laws was void, where, considering all the requests for rulings and the ruling themselves, it may be assumed that the request meant that a marriage of Chickasaws, although in accord with their customs, was invalid under a Chickasaw law unless solemnized by a judge or ordained preacher, and, by implication, that the Act of Congress of May 2, 1890, 26 Stat. at L. 98, ch. 182, § 38, did not validate the marriage in accordance with still prevailing custom, if no judge or preacher added his sanction. Carney v. Chapman, (1918) 247 U. S. 102, 38 S. Ct. 449, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Other grounds of decision.—In Municipal Securities Corp. v. Kansas City, (1918) 246 U. S. 63, 38 S. Ct. 224, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a writ of error to a decision of the Missouri Supreme Court, the opinion of the latter court was quoted, and it was then said: "It therefore follows that the Missouri Supreme Court rested its decision upon a ground of general law adequate to support it, independently of the decision upon alleged violation of federal right under the Fourteenth Amendment. In that situation it is well settled that a case from a state court is not reviewable here."

Where the state court "rested its judgment upon a non-federal ground adequate to support it, the existence of a federal question is of no significance." Bilby v. Stewart, (1918) 246 U. S. 255, 38 S. Ct. 264, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The existence of ample and efficient administrative remedies under state laws, and the failure on the part of the plaintiff in error to resort to them in the state court, prevents him from taking advantage of a federal question involved in the case, and securing a review by the federal Supreme Court. Mellon Co. v. McCafferty, (1915) 239 U. S. 134, 36 S. Ct. 94, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 181.

In proceedings by an Ohio power company to condemn land by eminent domain four preliminary questions were required by the state law to be passed upon by the Common Pleas Court, viz., the existence of the petitioning corporation, its right to make the appropriation, its inability to agree as to the compensation to be paid for the property, and the necessity for the appropriation. The case did not come to a jury trial on the question of compensation because, after hearing evidence on the preliminary issues, on motion of the defendants it entered an order dismissing the petition, no reason for such decision having been expressed. The case was taken to the Ohio Court of Appeals, it being assigned as error that the trial court had erred in its rulings on the four preliminary questions, and it was further alleged that the refusal of the court to order the condemnation of the land upon the theory that it was not subject to be condemned because, after the suit had been brought, it had been acquired by the traction company (admitted on its own motion as a party), and by it dedicated to a public use, constituted an impairment of the contract rights of the plaintiff and a taking of its property without due process of law, in violation of the Federal Constitution. Following a judgment of affirmance without a written opinion, the power company applied to the state Supreme Court to direct the Court of Appeals to certify the record for review, which was denied, and a writ of error which was prosecuted to the Court of Appeals from the Supreme Court was dismissed for want of jurisdiction for the stated ground that the case did not "involve any question arising under the Constitution of the United States or the state of Ohio." The federal Supreme Court dismissed a writ of error to the state Court of Appeals, on the ground that there were independent state grounds broad enough to sustain the judgment. Cuyahoga River Power Co. v. Northern Realty Co., (1916) 244 U. S. 300, 37 S. Ct. 643, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1153.

Where the disposition of the case by the state court depended upon the construction of statutes of the United States, and the opinion of the state court showed that those statutes were considered and federal rights asserted under them denied, and the controlling effect of the federal statutes necessarily followed in view of the nature of the rights dealt with, the Supreme Court had jurisdiction on a writ of error. California v. Deseret Water Oil, etc., Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 415, 37 S. Ct. 394, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 821, citing Miedreich v. Lanenstein, (1913) 232 U. S. 236, 242, 34 S. Ct. 309, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 584, 589; North Carolina R. Co. v. Zachary, (1913) 232 U. S. 248, 257, 34 S. Ct. 305, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 591; Ann. Cas. 1914C 159; Rogers v. Hennepin County, (1916) 240 U. S. 184, 188, 36 S. Ct. 265, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 594, 597.

Decisions on questions of fact.—"The question arises, whether the basis of fact upon which the state court rested its decision denying the asserted federal rights has any support in the record; for if not, it is our duty to review and correct the error." Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Newport, (1918) 247 U. S. 464, 38 S. Ct. 566, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Various grounds of decision — State procedure.—Whether the local rule of practice, that if instructions are offered upon any issue respecting which the jury should be instructed and they are incorrect in form or substance, it is the duty of the trial court to prepare or direct the preparation of a proper instruction upon the point in place of the defective one, was applicable in the case at bar, "is a question of local law, with which we have no concern," said the court in Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Holloway, (1918) 246 U. S. 525, 38 S. Ct. 379, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, distinguishing Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. De Atley, (1916) 241 U. S. 310, 36 S. Ct. 564, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1016, on the ground that in the latter case the state court "assumed for the purposes of its decision that the local rule applied, and was thereby led to decide a question of federal law," and "consequently we had and exercised jurisdiction to review its decision upon that question."

"An objection that a copy of the declaration sued upon should have been filed with the declaration is a matter of state procedure and not open here." Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Cherry, (1917) 244 U. S. 25, 37 S. Ct. 492, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 966.

Municipal nonliability.—In Municipal Securities Corp. v. Kansas City, (1918) 246 U. S. 63, 38 S. Ct. 224, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a suit was brought against a city by the assignee of certain tax bills to recover on the ground that the defendant by its official acts, ordinances, and conduct appropriated to the public use the property and property rights of the plaintiff, consisting of valid and subsisting liens upon certain real estate without making compensation therefor, and thereby violated the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. But the state court held that, in view of the agreement of plaintiff's assignor with the defendant, and of the constitution and statutes of the state, and provisions in the defendant's charter, recovery could not be had upon any theory of contract, nor could he recover upon the theory of liquidated compensation for a tort, because no such right of action had been assigned to him. For the reason that the decision in favor of the defendant was based upon this non-federal ground, a writ of error was dismissed by the federal Supreme Court.

Estoppel in pais.—Where a federal question and a question of estoppel in pais, which was nonfederal, were decided against the plaintiff in error, the Supreme Court dismissed a writ of error for the reason that, in the particular case, the estoppel was broad enough to sustain the judgment. Enterprise Irrigation District v. Farmers' Mut. Canal Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 157, 37 S. Ct. 318, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 644.

"Res judicata, like other kinds of estoppel, ordinarily is a matter of state law, and as the decision of the state court in this case in effect rests upon that ground, this of itself would be sufficient to sustain the judgment against reversal in this court except for two queries that must first be answered: (a) Is the question of state law in this case, independent of the federal questions? and (b) Is the decision reached upon that point sufficiently well founded to furnish adequate support for the judgment?" Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Newport, (1918) 247 U. S. 464, 38 S. Ct. 566, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, holding that the decision of a state court that a judgment against a corporation, rendered in a suit begun two years after it had conveyed all its property in the state to another corporation through which a third corporation afterward acquired title, concluded the latter corporation as being in privity of estate with the first-named corporation, was too clearly ill-founded to sustain its judgment against reversal in the federal Supreme Court.

Testamentary incapacity.—Where probate of a will was denied on the sole ground of mental incapacity, no reviewable federal question was presented, although the proponents set up a claim that the testator was a full-blood Creek Indian and that therefore "the execution of said will and the legal effect thereof and the necessity or nonnecessity of the probate of said will is thereby involved in this cause and presents federal questions." Bilby v. Stewart, (1918) 246 U. S. 255, 38 S. Ct. 264, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Damages not excessive.—Refusal to reverse a judgment for the plaintiff in an action on the federal Employers' Liability Act "on the ground that the damages are excessive" did not present a reviewable federal question. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Holloway, (1918) 246 U. S. 525, 38 S. Ct. 379, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Matter of local law—Champerous deed.—Where a contention that a deed of land by the heir of an Indian allottee in Oklahoma was champertous within the meaning of the state statute, was considered and decided by the Supreme Court of that state in the light of its own and other decisions, the holding of that court did not involve denial of a federal right, such as would make the ruling reviewable on a writ of error. Gannon v. Johnston, (1917) 243 U. S. 108, 37 S. Ct. 330, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 622.

Adverse possession.—The question whether a plaintiff in a suit to quiet title to land which had been conveyed by the government to a state in aid of railroad construction had acquired title to the land by adverse possession was essentially a local question, involving an appreciation of the evidence as to the conduct of the parties, and not reviewable by the Supreme Court on writ of error. Donohue v. Vosper, (1917) 243 U. S. 59, 37 S. Ct. 350, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 592.

XI. JUDGMENT ON ERROR (p. 490)

Reinstatement of first of two judgments.—See Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, (1916) 241 U. S. 261, 36 S. Ct. 586, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 989.

Vol. IV, p. 494, sec. 711, par. Fifth.

In general.—Where there was no averment in plaintiff's bill that either they or the defendants were the owners of a patent or that any patent had been issued to anybody, but only that application for a patent had been filed by parties who had assigned their rights to the plaintiffs and a defendant, and the suit was brought to prevent the unlawful use of information, which might relate to an invention about the patentability of which there was contention, which had been obtained under such confidential circumstances that it ought not to be used to plaintiffs' harm, the suit did not arise under the patent laws and a state court had jurisdiction. Aronson v. Orlov, (1917) 228 Mass. 1, 116 N. E. 951.

A suit for damages to business caused by a threat to sue under the patent law is not itself a suit under the patent law. And the same is true when the damage is caused by a statement of fact—that the defendant has a patent which is infringed. American Well Works Co. v. Layne, etc., Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 257, 36 S. Ct. 585, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 987.

Suit for royalties.—It has been held that where definite royalties, instead of profits, are made the ultimate object of recovery, the suit is one arising under the patent laws, and one of which the District Court has jurisdiction although the sum involved is less than $3,000. Swindell v. Youngstown Sheet, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 438, 144 C. C. A. 580.

Vol. IV, p. 498, sec. 716.

Extent of jurisdiction.—This section does not give authority to a federal District Court to issue processes to run beyond the limits of the territory in which it is established, but is a designation of the form or character of writs which such court may issue within the territory where it is established. Mitchell v. Dexter, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 926, 157 C. C. A. 276, holding that a federal District Court in Wisconsin had no power to issue a writ directed to the marshal for the district of Massachusetts for the arrest of a person in that state and his removal to the district of Wisconsin.

A District Court may issue a writ of venire facias against a defendant in a criminal prosecution. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., Ry. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 237 Fed. 292.

Scire facias.—A District Court has jurisdiction to enforce a forfeited bail bond by writ of scire facias. Ewing v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 241, 153 C. C. A. 167.

Mandamus—In general.—This section is construed as a process provision and not as one conferring jurisdiction of the subject matter in mandamus proceedings. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 237 Fed. 292.

Under this Act the court may, however, in issuing a writ adopt the form of process prescribed by the state court where no specific form has been prescribed by Congress. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 237 Fed. 292.

The usual rule is that a petition for a writ of mandamus cannot be allowed to take the place of an appeal or writ of error to review the judicial action of an inferior court to correct an erroneous judgment or decree. In re Garrosi, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 363, 143 C. C. A. 483.

Removability to federal court of proceeding for mandamus, see notes to vol. 4, p. 265, § 1, supra, p. 1251.

To compel judicial action.—Error of a federal District Court sitting in New York in ordering transferred to the equity side of the court, a count in an action at law which claimed damages for breach of a contract to bequeath a specified sum, was corrected by the federal Supreme Court by granting mandamus to require the District Court to proceed and to give plaintiff the right to a trial at common law. Matter of Simons, (1918) 247 U. S. 231, 38 S. Ct. 497, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

To clerk of court.—The refusal of a federal Circuit Court of Appeals to direct the clerk of that court to file the record in an appeal by seamen from a decree dismissing their libels for wages, without making a deposit to secure the costs, may be reviewed by the federal Supreme Court by mandamus. Ex p. Abdu, (1918) 247 U. S. 27, 38 S. Ct. —, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, holding that on submission of the rule to show cause the Supreme Court will consider the authority of the court below to make the order, although the writ prayed for is not directed to the court, but to its clerk, and hence, in form seeks to direct the clerk to disobey the order of the court, leaving the order unreviewed and unreversed.

Mandamus a substitute for execution.—Where, after judgment against a county, the court, without objection, on petition, order to show cause, and answer, issued an execution, and the proceeding had every essential attribute of a proceeding in mandamus, and there was no issue of fact, the appellate court, upon reversing the order for an execution as being prohibited by the state law, remanded the cause with directions to issue a mandamus against the county officers to pay the judgment, as the court would have had power to do and should have done instead of issuing an execution. Clearwater County v. Pfeffer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 183, 149 C. C. A. 373.

Vol. IV, p. 509, sec. 720.

Construction in general.—The purpose of the section "being to prevent unseemly conflict between state and federal courts, the statute should be given such an interpretation as will effectuate its obvious purpose." Hyattsville Bldg. Assoc. v. Bonic, (1916) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 408.

"Generally speaking, the term 'proceeding' means a prescribed course of action for enforcing a legal right, and hence it necessarily embraces the requisite steps by which judicial action is invoked. It is a very comprehensive term." Hyattsville Bldg. Assoc. v. Bonic, (1916) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 408.

Courts included.—"The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia is a court of the United States, and hence within the purview of this section." Hyattsville Bldg. Assoc. v. Bonic, (1916) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 408.

Jurisdiction first attaching.—"In a case in which a federal court first obtains jurisdiction of the subject-matter in controversy, and where it acts in aid of its own jurisdiction to render its orders or decrees, or the title or disposition under them of the property within that jurisdiction, effectual, it may notwithstanding section 720, Revised Statutes, now section 265 of the Judicial Code, enjoin or restrain all proceedings in the state court which would have the effect of defeating or impairing its jurisdiction, or the orders, decrees or titles it has made or is making in the exercise thereof." Swift v. Black Panther Oil, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 20, 156 C. C. A. 448.

Protection of federal jurisdiction.—Where the injunctive process of a federal court is invoked to protect its own jurisdiction, this section has no application. Sherman Nat. Bank v. Shubert Theatrical Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 238 Fed. 225.

Where the federal court acts in aid of its own jurisdiction and to render its decree effectual, it may, notwithstanding this section, restrain all proceedings in a state court which have the effect of defeating or impairing its jurisdiction. Jackson v. Parkersburg, etc., Electric R. Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1916) 233 Fed. 784.

Suits against a corporation in a state court may be enjoined by a federal court which has appointed a receiver for the corporation. Jackson v. Parkersburg, etc., Electric Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1916) 233 Fed. 784.

Proceedings in probate court.—In Smith v. Jennings, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 238 Fed. 48, 151 C. C. A. 124, holding that a federal District Court had no power to set aside the appointment of temporary administrators of a decedent's estate, alleged to have been obtained by fraud of the parties, and to enjoin said administrators from interfering with the receivers, the court said: "The federal courts have no authority to stay proceedings of state courts, while they are in progress and before they are concluded by final judgment or decree, except in aid of bankruptcy proceedings or of their own previously acquired jurisdiction."

Proceedings in foreclosure.—In Hyatts-ville Bldg. Assoc. v. Bonie, (1916) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 408, after the alleged default of appellee mortgagee of Maryland real estate, the appellant mortgagor instituted in the state Circuit Court a statutory proceeding for foreclosure and advertised the property for sale in accordance with the state statutes. Before the sale took place appellee filed his bill in the District of Columbia Supreme Court and obtained a temporary restraining order, which, upon a later hearing, was continued and an appeal granted. The decree was reversed with instructions to dismiss the bill, as being one to enjoin "proceedings," etc., and in violation of the federal statute, now Judicial Code, § 265, 1912 Supp., p. 242.

Proceedings under unconstitutional act.—Equity has jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the enforcement of a state or local law, on the ground that such enforcement will deprive the complainant of rights secured to him by the Constitution and laws of the United States. Phoenix R. Co. v. Geary, (1915) 239 U. S. 277, 36 S. Ct. 45, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 287; Halsey v. Merrick, (E. D. Mich. 1915) 228 Fed. 805; Central Consumers' Co. v. Austin, (N. D. Ala. 1916) 238 Fed. 616.

"Where a state has provided, as is its right, a complete legislative scheme for the fixing of rates, those rights should not be interfered with, nor the proceedings of the state arrested, until the last legislative step has been taken, and it may definitely be seen whether the act of the state as a finality ignores or infringes upon the rights of the complaining party; until such time it cannot be said that the state authorities have violated those rights, or refused to observe them, and until that state is reached it is not within the province of the federal courts to interfere." Palermo Land, etc., Co. v. California R. Commission, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 227 Fed. 708, so declaring where the statute permitted an application for a rehearing.

Where the right of a street railway company to increase rates was claimed to be based on the fact that certain ordinances constituted contracts beyond the power either of the state or the municipality to impair, it was held to be improper for a federal court to grant an injunction preventing action by a state board, clothed by the state with legislative power over rates and whose jurisdiction had been invoked, before the board had adjudicated the question or had an opportunity to do so. Trenton, etc.,

Traction Corp. v. Trenton, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 502.

Where a state legislature has clothed a local board with power to adjudicate questions as to rates which a street railway company may charge, and the jurisdiction of that board has been invoked, it would be improper for a federal court to interfere by injunction to restrain proceedings before it on the supposition that the board's decision may impair contractual rights which cannot be impaired by the state. Trenton, etc., Traction Corp. v. Trenton, (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 502.

Criminal cases.—But while it is "settled that while a court of equity, generally speaking, has 'no jurisdiction over the prosecution, the punishment or the pardon of crimes or misdemeanors' (In re Sawyer, [1888] 124 U. S. 200, 210 [8 S. Ct. 482, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 402]) a distinction obtains, and equitable jurisdiction exists to restrain criminal prosecutions under unconstitutional enactments, when the prevention of such prosecutions is essential to the safeguarding of rights of property." Truax v. Raich, (1915) 239 U. S. 33, 36 S. Ct. 7, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 131, Ann. Cas. 1917B 283, L. R. A. 1916D 545. See to same effect Central Consumers' Co. v. Austin, (N. D. Ala. 1916) 238 Fed. 616.

Proceedings under constitutional act.—A federal court will not interfere to restrain the enforcement of a state statute, admitted to be valid, on the ground that the law officer of the state in seeking to enforce it is wrongfully construing it. Central Consumers' Co. v. Austin, (N. D. Ala. 1916) 238 Fed. 616.

Collection of taxes.—But "the general rule is that courts will not interfere by injunction with the collection of the public revenue, on the ground that a tax is illegal, unless it clearly appears that the complainant has no adequate legal remedy, and that a statutory provision for the payment of taxes under protest and a legal action to recover them back affords an adequate legal remedy." Augusta v. Timmerman, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 216, 147 C. C. A. 222.

There exists no cloud upon a title which justifies the interference of the court of equity, when the alleged fatal defect in the tax levy or other proceeding appears on the face of the record, requiring no evidence aliunde to make it plain. Augusta v. Timmerman, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 216, 147 C. C. A. 222.

Bankruptcy cases.—This provision distinctly excepts cases where an injunction is authorized by the bankruptcy law, and insolvency proceedings commenced in a state court may be enjoined by a federal court within four months after they are commenced. Ohio Motor Car Co. v. Eisman Magneto Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 370, 144 C. C. A. 512.

Vol. IV, p. 517, sec. 721.

Decisions of state courts in general.—It has been said that while the decisions of a state court upon a general legal proposition not covered by statute are not binding upon the federal courts they are naturally given considerable weight by the latter. Paterlini v. Memorial Hospital Ass'n, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 229 Fed. 838.

And although a question does not depend upon the construction of a state statute, yet if it involves the application of principles of law to local conditions, it has been held that the ruling of the state court should be controlling in a federal court. Old Colony Trust Co. v. Tacoma, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 389, 144 C. C. A. 531.

Question of general jurisprudence or commercial law.—The doctrine declared in the Swift v. Tyson Case, (1842) 16 Pet. 1, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 865, has steadily advanced beyond the actual question involved in that case, and it may be said that at the present time it is the settled general doctrine of the federal courts that they will themselves determine, without regard to the decisions of the highest courts of the state, as binding authority, all general questions of the common law involving matters of mercantile or commercial law or of general jurisprudence. Town of Newbern v. Barnesville Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 209, 148 C. C. A. 111.

As to doctrines of commercial law and general jurisprudence the federal courts exercise their own judgment, but even in such cases they lean toward an agreement of views with the state courts, if the question seems to them balanced with doubt. And especially should the doctrine of the highest court of the state on such a question be followed where it is well supported both by reason and upon authority. Sim v. Edenborn, (1916) 242 U. S. 131, 37 S. Ct. 36, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 199.

State constitutions and statutes in general.—Some cases, taken by themselves, lend color to the view that the general rule is for the federal courts to decide for themselves questions arising under state constitutions and statutes, and the exception is to follow the decisions of the state courts when the state decisions have become rules of property. In spite, however, of the constant tendency of the federal courts to deny the conclusive effect of state decisions under various circumstances, it may be said that, even at the present time, to follow the state decisions is the general rule, and to refuse to follow them the exception, so far as questions under state constitutions and statutes are concerned. Iowa Portland Cement Co. v. Lamandola, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 823, 142 C. C. A. 347; Quinette v. Pullman Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916)

229 Fed. 333, 143 C. C. A. 453; Lauderdale County v. Kittel, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 593, 143 C. C. A. 615; Old Colony Trust Co. v. Tacoma, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 389, 144 C. C. A. 531; Memphis v. St. Francis Levee Dist., (E. D. Ark. 1916) 231 Fed. 217; Gardner v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 405, 145 C. C. A. 399; Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Hagen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 24, 147 C. C. A. 94; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pedrick, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 781.

On writ of error to a state court, the decision of the latter that a municipal ordinance is not repugnant to the state constitution settles the question for the federal Supreme Court. Thomas Cusack Co. v. Chicago, (1917) 242 U. S. 526, 37 S. Ct. 190, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 472, Ann. Cas. 1917C 594, L. R. A. 1918A 136.

So in a recent case it is said to be elementary that the federal courts ordinarily are bound by the decisions of the Supreme Court of a state as to the interpretation and construction of a state statute. Quinette v. Pullman Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 333, 143 C. C. A. 453.

But a federal court must decide a point for itself arising under a state statute when it has not been passed on by the courts of the state. Hamilton v. Loeb, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 728. See to same effect Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pedrick, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 781.

Rights accrued before construction or under prior construction.—Where the verifications to certain declaratory statements of mining claims were defective and all right to the premises involved had become fixed and vested by patents prior to a decision by the state court that such locations were void because of such verification, it was held that it was the right of the parties to have and the duty of the federal court to exercise its independent judgment upon the validity and effect of such statements and locations, and though for comity and to avoid confusion the court would lean to agreement with the state tribunal, it would refuse to follow it if, in its opinion, the rule of decision was unsound. Clark-Montana Realty Co. v. Butte, etc., Copper Co., (D. C. Mont. 1916) 233 Fed. 547.

Corporate existence.—Whether a corporation is a corporation de jure is a question which must be answered by the statutes and decisions of the state in which it is incorporated. American Ball Bearing Co. v. Adams, (N. D. Ohio 1915) 222 Fed. 967.

Decedents' estates.—Decisions of the state court have been followed as to claims against the estate and the enforcement thereof. Williams v. Benedict, (1850) 8 How. 107, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 1007; Dodd v. Ghiselin, (E. D. Mo. 1886) 27 Fed. 405.

See to same effect Security Trust Co. v. Black River Nat. Bank, (1902) 187 U. S. 211, 23 S. Ct. 52, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 147; Hale v. Coffin, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 470, 57 C. C. A. 528; Gasquet v. Fenner, (E. D. La. 1916) 235 Fed. 997.

Competency of witnesses.—In Fowler v. Hecker, (1860) 4 Blatchf. 425, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,001, it was held that a state statute making the defendant a competent witness was binding on the federal court, and therefore a defendant made liable by such a statute to examination as a witness for the plaintiff was liable to be attached for contempt in not obeying a subpoena commanding him to attend and be examined on the trial of an action at common law in a federal court.

But in the trial in a federal court of an offense against the United States it has been held that though a witness by reason of his conviction in a state court for an infamous crime is incompetent to testify in a court within that state, the federal court will not regard the conviction as binding upon it so as to require the exclusion of his testimony. Brown v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 353, 147 C. C. A. 289, L. R. A. 1917A 1133.

Limitation of actions.—In the absence of provisions in the federal statutes expressly regulating the matter, the statutes of the several states with regard to the limitation of actions both real and personal are considered as controlling on the federal courts in actions at law instituted in such courts, and the federal courts will as a general rule follow the construction given by the highest court of the state to such a statute, such statutes being regarded as "laws of the several states" which, except when the Federal Constitution, treaties or statutes of the United States otherwise require, must be regarded as rules of decision in trials at law within the meaning of the section of the Judiciary Act under annotation. Quinette v. Pullman Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 229 Fed. 333, 143 C. C. A. 453; Merko v. Sturm, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 68, 147 C. C. A. 138.

"That the limitation of action is governed by the lex fori, and is controlled by the legislation of the state in which the action is brought, as construed by the highest court of that state, even if the legislative act or the judicial construction differs from that prevailing in other jurisdictions, is as well settled in the national courts as any proposition of law." Memphis v. St. Francis Levee Dist., (E. D. Ark. 1916) 231 Fed. 217.

In South Georgia R. Co. v. South Georgia Grocery Co., (1915) 17 Ga. App. 349, 86 S. E. 939, it was so held in a case of an action based on the Interstate Commerce Act.

And while a federal court sitting as a court of equity is not bound by the state statute of limitations, it is proper for it to follow that statute unless facts are shown which render its application inequitable. Smith v. Smith, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 1, 139 C. C. A. 465; Kentucky Coal, etc., Development Co. v. Kentucky Union Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 945, 110 C. C. A. 93.

Negligence and contributory negligence.

—The federal courts exercise their independent judgment on common-law questions of negligence and adopt the view, irrespective of the decisions of the state courts, that the burden of proving contributory negligence is upon the defendant. Clark v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 341, 64 C. C. A. 19; Bowker v. Donnell, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 359.

Undoubtedly where the question of burden of proof is a matter of substantive right and involves a question of general law, which the federal courts will determine independently of the decisions of the state courts, they will not follow the state decisions on the question of the burden of proof. Thus the federal courts will not follow, in the absence of a controlling state statute, the decisions of the state court as to the burden of proving contributory negligence. Clark v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 341, 64 C. C. A. 19; Bowker v. Donnell, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 359.

Questions of contributory negligence, in the absence of a local statute regulating the matter, are considered by the federal courts questions of general law as to which the federal courts are not required to follow state decisions. Thus the doctrine of the federal courts that contributory negligence is an affirmative defense which must be established by a preponderance of the evidence is not affected by a different common-law rule in the state where the action arises. Bowker v. Donnell, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 359.

Master and servant—Defense of assumption of risk as affected by statute.—It has been expressly held that federal courts are bound by the decision of the highest state court on this subject. Inland Steel Co. v. Kachwinski, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 219, 80 C. C. A. 571; Welsh v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 465, 93 C. C. A. 101. And in E. S. Higgins Carpet Co. v. O'Keefe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1897) 79 Fed. 900, 51 U. S. App. 74, 25 C. C. A. 220, and Chicago-Coulterville Coal Co. v. Fidelity, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1904) 130 Fed. 957, the courts, without expressly declaring that the federal courts were bound by the construction placed upon the statute by the highest court of the state, allude to such construction as though it were conclusive. Columbia Box Co. v. Saucier, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 310, 129 C. C. A. 656; Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Hagen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 24, 147 C. C. A. 94.

Effect of state statute generally.—On the other hand, when the question involved as to the liability of a master for injuries received by his servant is regulated by a local state statute, the federal courts must ordinarily determine the question in the light of such statute as construed by the highest court of the state. Iowa Portland Cement Co. v. Lamandola, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 823, 142 C. C. A. 347.

Safeguarding machinery.—The construction and effect of a state statute requiring owners of mills and factories to safeguard their machinery is not a matter of general, but of local, law, and the decisions of the highest court of the state thereon are binding on the federal courts. Welsh v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 465, 93 C. C. A. 101; See to same effect Iowa Portland Cement Co. v. Lamandola, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 823, 142 C. C. A. 347; Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Hagen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 24, 147 C. C. A. 94.

Recording and filing acts.—Federal courts are bound to follow the decisions of the state courts in the construction of their local recording acts, if there has been a uniform course of decision respecting them. And this has been done notwithstanding a contrary view has been taken in a decision prior to that in the state court. Ward v. American Agricultural Chemical Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 119, 146 C. C. A. 311.

Decisions have been followed where the questions have been as to the necessity of recording an assignment of choses in action. Ward v. American Agricultural Chemical Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 119, 146 C. C. A. 311.

Presentation of claims for damages.—A construction by the state Supreme Court of a constitutional provision that "Any provision of any contract or agreement, expressed or implied, stipulating for notice or demand other than such as may be provided by law, as a condition precedent to establish any claim, demand or liability, shall be null and void" has been held to be binding on a federal court. It was, however, held that the provision was not applicable in the case of an interstate telegraph company so as to invalidate a clause as to presenting claims for damages or penalties in connection with the transmission of an interstate message. Gardner v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 405, 145 C. C. A. 399.

Vol. IV, p. 530, sec. 723.

Section declaratory.—"The provision of the United States statutes forbidding equity suits in federal courts where there is an adequate remedy at law is declaratory of what was always the law and was intended to emphasize the rule." Willis v. O'Connell, (S. D. Ala. 1916) 231 Fed. 1004.

Nature of remedy at law required.—It is not enough that there is a remedy at law. It must be plain and adequate, or, in other words, as practical and efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity. Goldschmidt Thermit Co. v. Primos Chemical Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 769; Thompson v. Emmett Irrigation Dist., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 560, 142 C. C. A. 192; New York Destructor Co. v. Atlanta, (N. D. Ga. 1916) 232 Fed. 746.

The complainant on coming into a court of equity for equitable relief must show by facts pleaded that the interposition of a court of equity is necessary or proper, that he has no full and adequate remedy at law. Thompson v. Emmett Irrigation Dist., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 560, 142 C. C. A. 192; Willis v. O'Connell, (S. D. Ala. 1916) 231 Fed. 1004; New York Destructor Co. v. Atlanta, (N. D. Ga. 1916) 232 Fed. 746.

Remedy by action for damages or by mandamus.—In Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Van Dusen Harrington Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 454, 157 C. C. A. 616, L. R. A. 1918C 883, it was held that there was no jurisdiction in equity of a bill by the owner of a carload of wheat to compel an interstate railroad company to issue to the plaintiff a bill of lading for transportation of the car to a place on a connecting line in another state, as an action at law for damages would afford a complete and adequate remedy, and besides, according to plaintiff's theory, he could obtain a writ of mandamus to compel issuance of such bill of lading under section 23 of the Interstate Commerce Act, and if so, this would be an adequate remedy at law.

In a suit by several patrons of an interstate telephone company, suing in behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, praying that the company be required to repair its plants, lines, etc., and to observe its duties and obligations as an interstate carrier and as a public utility under the several acts of Congress and its contracts, alleging that the company had suffered its facilities to become so greatly out of repair that it was impossible for complainants to obtain and have the service for which they pay, it was contended that each of the complainants might find relief through appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission, or through appeal to the state Utilities Board, or in an action for damages, or by an action in mandamus, but the court, upon consideration of each of the suggested remedies, in view of the facts of the case, held that the futility of a resort to either remedy was so plain as to warrant the interposition of a court of equity.

Stephens v. Ohio State Telephone Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 240 Fed. 759.

Effect of state rules.—The jurisdiction of a federal court sitting in equity cannot be enlarged or limited by state constitutional provisions. McLaughlin v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 579, 146 C. C. A. 537.

The jurisdiction of a federal court of equity is not subject to limitations or restraint by state legislation. Waterman v. Canal-Louisiana Bank, etc., Co., (1909) 215 U. S. 33, 30 S. Ct. 10, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 80; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Flynn, (W. D. Mo. 1910) 180 Fed. 565; McLaughlin v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 579, 146 C. C. A. 537.

Right to jury trial.—If a plain and adequate remedy exists at law, a defendant cannot be called upon to submit his rights to the decision of the court of equity, he having a constitutional right to a trial by jury. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Eastern Steamship Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 228 Fed. 726.

And it has also been held that the common law being competent to give to a party a sufficient remedy for damages caused by a negligent collision of vessels, an order giving leave to bring actions at law in such a case against a receiver will not be modified so as to limit the actions to suits in equity on the admiralty side of the court, there being no power to deprive the plaintiffs of their right to trial by a jury. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Eastern Steamship Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 228 Fed. 726.

Enforcement of rule.—In the federal courts relief will be denied in cases in equity where the remedy at law is plain, adequate, and complete, though the question was not raised by defendants in their pleading nor suggested by the counsel in their argument, because it is a question of jurisdiction, and no admission of the parties can change the law or give jurisdiction to a court in a case of which it has no jurisdiction. Goldschmidt Thermit Co. v. Primos Chemical Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 769; Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Eastern Steamship Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 228 Fed. 726.

Cloud on title.—Where a corporation has neglected to pay interest on bonds issued by it and it is asserted that some of the bonds were issued without consideration, a court of equity, for the purpose of removing a cloud on title, has jurisdiction of a suit to determine whether illegal bonds have been issued by the corporation, and, if so, by a proper decree to remove the cloud cast upon such issue and upon the title of the holders of the legal bonds of the corporation, and especially must this be so where the bonds are to mature serially, and no bond will mature or become due and payable, for several years, and until that date no judgment at law can be obtained on any of the bonds determining their validity." Thompson v. Emmett Irrigation Dist., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 560, 142 C. C. A. 192.

Accounting.—A prayer for an accounting in a bill in equity will not give the court jurisdiction where the plaintiff's asserted claims are legal rights, and it does not appear that the plaintiff has not a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law. National Surety Co. v. Washington Iron Works, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 243 Fed. 260.

Collection of judgments.—The mere fact that the defendant cannot be compelled to pay a judgment at law cannot make the plaintiff's remedy there inadequate, nor can such fact render the plaintiff's injury irreparable in such sort as to authorize a court of equity to take equitable cognizance of plaintiff's grievance. Willis v. O'Connell, (S. D. Ala. 1916) 231 Fed. 1004.

Vol. IV, p. 534, sec. 725.

Statute one of limitation.—"It is settled that the statute is a limitation, through definition, upon the powers of inferior federal courts to punish contempts by summary process." U. S. v. Toledo Newspaper Co., (N. D. Ohio 1915) 220 Fed. 458, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 986, 150 C. C. A. 636, (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

"Interference with the proceedings of a grand jury in the performance of its functions is as truly a contempt of court as is interference with the proceedings of a petit jury, either in the course of a trial or during its deliberation." U. S. v. Providence Tribune Co., (R. I. 1917) 241 Fed. 524, where the court denied a motion to dismiss an information for alleged contempt of court in the publication of a newspaper article with the evident intention, said the court, "to disclose as near as seems advisable the identity of the persons to whom the scarehead relates, and the names of witnesses and nature of evidence to be produced against them before the grand jury." The headings and subheadings of the article were as follows: "Prominent Physicians Involved in Federal War on Cocaine Dealers. Man and Woman Arrested on Conspiracy Charge May Become Witnesses for the Government. Before Grand Jury."

Newspaper criticisms.—"The language of this measure does not exclude its application to newspapers." U. S. v. Toledo Newspaper Co., (N. D. Ohio 1915) 220 Fed. 458, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 986, 150 C. C. A. 636, (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

"That the publication by a newspaper of the city in which a court is sitting of an article tending to obstruct the administration of justice in proceedings pending in that court is within section 268 of the Judicial Code is so well settled as to require no discussion." U. S. v. Providence Tribune Co., (R. I. 1917) 241 Fed. 524.

"The power is curtailed, not wholly destroyed, so that criticisms which tend to reflect generally upon the court, either by libeling the occupant of the bench or by criticising proceedings and processes, but which have no tendency to affect a cause under consideration, are not reached by the statute, although they may, in a general way, obstruct the administration of justice, particularly through fostering a disrespect for the tribunal." U. S. v. Toledo Newspaper Co., (N. D. Ohio 1915) 220 Fed. 458, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 986, 150 C. C. A. 636, (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The right freely to comment on judicial conduct is unquestioned; just as plain as the corollary that the courts have a right—the people have a right—to expect newspapers to criticise the courts fairly, to argue their criticism from truthful, not false, premises. U. S. v. Toledo Newspaper Co., (N. D. Ohio, 1915) 220 Fed. 458, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 986, 150 C. C. A. 636, (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

But "any newspaper comment which tends to make the position of a litigant difficult before the court hampers the efforts of the court to adjudicate the issue fairly and dispassionately." U. S. v. Toledo Newspaper Co., (N. D. Ohio 1915) 220 Fed. 458, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 986, 150 C. C. A. 636, (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

"A proceeding for newspaper contempt partakes of the incidents of any other action for defamation, and other publications on the same subject before and after the date of that declared on may be offered for interpretation, at least, on the matter of quo animo, as in libel." U. S. v. Toledo Newspaper Co., (N. D. Ohio 1915) 220 Fed. 458, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 986, 150 C. C. A. 636, (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Judicial authority summarily to punish as for a criminal contempt the publication in a newspaper of articles and cartoons having reference to pending judicial action which tended and were intended to provoke public resistance to an injunction order, should one be made, and amounted to an attempt unduly to influence the judge with reference to his decision in the matter pending before him, was recognized and sanctioned, not negated, by the provisions of this section. Toledo Newspaper Co. v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Comment and cartoons having reference to pending judicial action, published at the place where the proceedings were pending, in a daily newspaper with a large circulation, may fairly be said to "obstruct the administration of justice," within the meaning of this section, where such is the reasonable tendency of such publications, although it is not shown that the newspapers containing them were seen by the judge, or were circulated in the court room, and although there is no proof that the mind of the judge in the particular case was influenced, or his purpose to do his duty obstructed or restrained, by the publications. Toledo Newspaper Co. v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 402, 38 S. Ct. 560, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In In re Independent Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 849, 153 C. C. A. 535, Ann. Cas. 1917C 1084, L. R. C. A. 1917E 703, while a criminal case was on trial before a jury in Helena, Mont., a daily newspaper in the city printed an article for which an information for contempt was brought against it and its editor and manager. The information charged that this article was not based upon the facts introduced in evidence on the trial of the case, but was written and published for the purpose of giving to the public generally, and to all persons who should read said newspaper and the said article, certain facts relating to the past life of the defendant, and to inform the jury, and the members thereof who might read the newspaper and the article, of certain facts concerning the defendant which were highly prejudicial to his character and reputation, and would, when read by the jury, or any members thereof, tend to bias and prejudice them against the defendant and prevent the jury, and the members thereof who had read the article, from giving the defendant a fair and impartial trial, for the reason that it brought to their attention certain facts concerning the life of the defendant which were not material to the issues of the cause and could not be proven on the trial of the cause against the defendant unless on the trial of the cause he had taken the witness stand in his own behalf, or placed his good character in issue. It was not denied that the publication obstructed the progress of the cause on trial, and compelled the court to discharge the jury, resulting, as the court found as a fact, in the infliction of pecuniary damages to the government, in costs uselessly incurred, amounting to $617. It was held that the publication constituted a punishable contempt.

Place of publication not controlling.—

Where the failure of a trial was caused by a publication in a newspaper the question was declared to be "not where the press runs but where the publication circulates." The court said: "So long as jury and judge are engaged in a trial, it is of no moment that the improper influence extended over them was miles away from the courtroom rather than adjoining it. The effect is the same, the consequences the same, the evil as great, and it is the effect, consequences, evil, the law guards against." In re Independent Pub. Co., (D. C. Mont. 1915) 228 Fed. 787.

The words "so near thereto."—"So near" in the statute means not so far off, not so distant but what it may obstruct the administration of justice. It is not a question of linear measurement, but of probable effect." In re Independent Pub. Co., (D. C. Mont. 1915) 228 Fed. 787.

This section was not intended to limit the power of the court to punish for contempt to be exercised only for the purpose of insuring order and decorum in its presence. "Like the law of constructive presence in criminal cases, the misbehavior is committed where it takes effect," and publication of a newspaper article calculated to influence jurors in a pending trial may constitute a contempt. In re Independent Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 849, 153 C. C. A. 535, Ann. Cas. 1917C 1084, L. R. A. 1917E 703.

Nature of contempt proceedings.—Upon examination and consideration of the proceeding for violation of an injunctive order involved in Mitchell v. Dexter, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 926, 157 C. C. A. 276, it was there held that the proceeding was civil in nature and not distinguishable in that behalf from Gompers v. Buck Stove, etc., Co., (1911) 221 U. S. 418, 31 S. Ct. 492, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 797, 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 874.

Facts stated on information and belief.

—An information charging a constructive contempt particularly and specifically charging in detail the facts constituting the alleged contempt has been held sufficient when filed by the United States attorney for the district, though verified by him to the effect that the facts stated are true and correct upon information and belief. Creekmore v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 743, 150 C. C. A. 497.

Defenses.—For publication of an article in a newspaper constituting a contempt of court, it is within the power of the court to punish the managing editor, though he was ignorant of the contents of the article, where he failed to perform his duty in supervising the publication, and was negligent in permitting the article to be published. In re Independent Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240

Fed. 849, 153 C. C. A. 535, Ann. Cas. 1917C 1084, L. R. A. 1917E 703.

Purging by oath.—Where defendants in contempt proceedings put in a plea of not guilty and went to trial on that it was held that they did not bring themselves within the rule permitting them to purge themselves by putting in answers denying the contempt charges. Oates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 201, 147 C. C. A. 207.

The rule as to parties charged with contempt purging themselves of the charge by denial under oath has been held to be inapplicable where the charge is one of personal and overt acts. Oates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 201, 147 C. C. A. 207.

Punishment.—Under this statute it has been held the court has almost unlimited discretion as to the character and extent of punishment, and that the prosecutor need not specially pray for a given punishment or attempt to limit the degree of punishment. Creekmore v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 743, 150 C. C. A. 497.

"In respect to criminal contempts the penalty is usually punitive, fine or imprisonment." In re Independent Pub. Co., (D. C. Mont. 1915) 228 Fed. 787.

"In respect to civil contempts, the penalty is usually remedial, a fine which may be measured in some degree by the injured party's pecuniary damage and for his use." In re Independent Pub. Co., (D. C. Mont. 1915) 228 Fed. 787.

It is not in accordance with law to impose a general sentence for the separate acts of contempt alleged and found against the defendants. The punishment for distinctly different offenses should be so separated that the court on review can analyze the evidence and determine which, if any, of the charges are sustained. Oates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 1013, 139 C. C. A. 389.

Where there were both criminal and civil aspects in a proceeding for contempt, criminal in that it interfered with the discharge of the court's duty and obstructed justice, civil in that it proximately caused the failure of a criminal trial prosecuted by the United States and inflicted pecuniary damage on the plaintiff, it was held proper to impose a fine in amount measured by the pecuniary loss suffered by the United States from the act. In re Independent Pub. Co., (D. C. Mont. 1915) 228 Fed. 787.

The judge may, in imposing a sentence of imprisonment, also require the payment of costs. Oates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 201, 147 C. C. A. 207.

Where a newspaper article constituting a criminal contempt caused a mistrial and continuance of a criminal case, the costs to which the government was subjected by reason thereof were properly used as an element in measuring the fine imposed by the court. In re Independent Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 849, 153 C. C. A. 849, Ann. Cas. 1917C 1084, L. R. A. 1917E 703.

Place of imprisonment.—There is said to be nothing in this section which limits where the imprisonment shall take place except the discretion of the court. Creekmore v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 743, 150 C. C. A. 497.

Review by writ of error or appeal.—The decision of the trial court on the facts is conclusive, and only matters of law are to be considered. In re Independent Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 849, 153 C. C. A. 849, Ann. Cas. 1917C 1084, L. R. A. 1917E 703.

An assignment of error that the court refused to suspend sentence and admit the defendants to bail pending the application for a writ of error has been held to be without substance where the writ of error was granted and the defendants admitted to bail on the same day the sentence was pronounced. Oates v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 201, 147 C. C. A. 207.

Vol. IV, p. 552, sec. 737.

Omission of parties.—The doctrine is well established that where persons who otherwise might be deemed necessary or proper parties cannot be made parties because of absence from the jurisdiction or from other cause as because their joinder would oust the jurisdiction of the court as to the parties before the court, the court may in its discretion proceed with the cause without making such persons parties if the rights of the complainants and defendants can be equitably determined without them. Lion Tractor Co. v. Bull Tractor Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 156, 145 C. C. A. 344; Lowenthal v. Georgia Coast, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Ga. 1916) 233 Fed. 1010.

"It is a principle of law that where the court can do justice to the parties before it without injuring absent persons, it will do so, and shape its relief in such a manner as to preserve the right of persons not before the court. If necessary, the court may require that the bill be dismissed as to such absent parties and may generally shape its decree so as to do justice to those made parties without prejudice to such absent persons. Payne v. Hook, (1868) 7 Wall. 425, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 260." Grigsby v. Miller, (D. C. Ore. 1916) 231 Fed. 521.

The statute and the rule merely authorized the omission of proper but not indispensable parties, including formal and nominal parties and parties with separable interests known in the federal courts as "necessary" parties. Lowenthal v. Georgia Coast, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Ga. 1916) 233 Fed. 1010.

In an action by a bondholder to foreclose a mortgage given by a railroad corporation of another state to secure the payment of bonds, a trustee corporation of a different state from that of the defendant was held not to be an indispensable, although a proper, party, and a contention that the bill must be dismissed because the trustee was not a party defendant was held to be unfounded, it appearing that the trustee was not to be found in the district and had not voluntarily appeared, while the property to which the lien and mortgage securing plaintiff's bonds inhered was located within the district and the defendant corporation was a corporation of the state included therein. Lowenthal v. Georgia Coast, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Ga. 1916) 233 Fed. 1010.

One or more joint makers of a contract may be sued in the district of their residence when other joint makers cannot be brought into the action because of their residence in another district. Camp v. Gress, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 373, citing Clearwater v. Meredith, (1858) 21 How. 489, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 201, and Barney v. Baltimore, (1867) 6 Wall. 280, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 825.

The words "found within the district" do not confer jurisdiction, unless in a patent case, as provided for in Judicial Code, § 48, 1912 Supp., p. 153, or some special case provided by other statutes. Harasimowicz v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 295.

The words "found within the district" must have significance, inasmuch as they are retained in this section while omitted from Judicial Code, § 51; and the two sections, construed together, "must mean that for the purposes of jurisdiction a single defendant must reside in the district in which the suit is brought, but when there are several defendants the court has jurisdiction of all if one or more are residents of the district and the others are found there." Camp v. Gress, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 121, 156 C. C. A. 373.

Vol. IV, p. 554, sec. 740.

A joint suit for negligence and misconduct of the directors of a national bank may be brought in a district in which either defendant resides. Dudley v. Hawkins, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 239 Fed. 386.

Actions to recover for personal injuries are not "local" in their nature in the sense in which that word is used in sections 52-55 of the Judicial Code, 1912 Supp., pp. 153-155, and the action must be brought in the district of the residence of the defendant, unless the question be waived. Kuzma v. Witherbee, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 232 Fed. 286.

Vol. IV, p. 560, sec. 911.

Construction with R. S. sec. 914.—In any original suit in a federal court which must be commenced by a summons or other process of the court itself, such process must be signed by the clerk and issued under the seal of the court, to be valid, regardless of any different provision as to the form of a summons in the state courts, the general conformity statute not operating to waive this specific requirement as to the process in the federal courts embodied in this section. In re Condemnation Suits, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 234 Fed. 443.

Process subject to requirements of section—In general.—The provisions of this section apply only to writs and processes issuing from the courts themselves. In re Condemnation Suits, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 234 Fed. 443.

Notices.—Notices given by the parties are not processes of the court and are not embraced within the terms of this section. Hence in any proceeding which may be properly instituted and proceeded with upon mere notice to the parties in interest, without process from the court itself, as in condemnation proceedings, the requirements of section 911 have no application. In re Condemnation Suits, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 234 Fed. 443.

Vol. IV, p. 563, sec. 914.

Construction in general.—This section is the successor of the Act of Congress of May 19, 1828, ch. 68, § 1, 4 Stat. 278, which declared that "the forms of mesne process . . . and the forms and modes of proceedings in suits in [certain] courts of the United States . . . shall be the same . . . as are now used in the highest court of original and general jurisdiction of the" states in which the federal courts are situated. In respect of this statute it was held in Bath County v. Amy, (1872) 13 Wall. 244, at page 250, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 539, that: "It was a process act, designed only to regulate proceedings in the federal courts after they had obtained jurisdiction; not to enlarge their jurisdiction, . . . It is quite too much to infer from this [statute] an enlargement of jurisdiction, or an adoption of all the powers of the state courts." Section 914 must be construed in the same manner. Sewchulis v. Lehigh Val. Coal Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 422, 147 C. C. A. 358.

Questions of jurisdiction.—Notwithstanding this provision neither the statutes of a state nor the decisions of its courts are conclusive upon the federal courts in respect to questions of jurisdiction. Southern Photo Material Co. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (N. D. Ga. 1915) 224 Fed. 523.

And this Act applies only in the absence of direct legislation upon a subject by Congress. Berry v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1915) 228 Fed. 395.

"The jurisdiction of the courts of the United States has been defined and limited by the Acts of Congress, and can be neither restricted nor enlarged by the statutes of a state." Southern Pac. Co. v. Denton, (1892) 146 U. S. 202, 13 S. Ct. 44, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 942. See also Webb v. Southern R. Co., (S. D. Ala. 1916) 235 Fed. 578.

Writs and process—On foreign corporations.—"A service in an action at law on a foreign corporation in conformity to a state statute is good in the federal courts, unless the notice thus provided is not adequate according to the rules of due process of law." Beach v. Kerr Turbine Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 243 Fed. 706.

Service of process.—When the fact of the presence of the defendant is not in dispute, and only the mode or manner of the service is in question, a service in accordance with the requirements of the state statutes is a good service. Nickerson v. Warren City Tank, etc., Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 843.

But there is a wide difference between the method of serving a summons and the effect of such service when made. The first relates to the "form, manner, and order of conducting and carrying on suits." The effect of the formal act called "service" is not a question of practice at all, but one of jurisdiction, and jurisdiction in turn must be tested by substantive law. Sewchulis v. Lehigh Val. Coal Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 422, 147 C. C. A. 358.

Courts of the United States determine for themselves the fact of the presence of the defendant within the jurisdiction, and in determining it they may or may not follow the rulings of the state courts. The statutes of the states creating a constructive presence within the jurisdiction for process service, such as acts providing for service upon the registered agents of foreign corporations, are held to include service of process by the courts of the United States. Nickerson v. Warren City Tank, etc., Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 843.

If actions are started in a state court and removed into a federal court, the sufficiency of the service under the state law is still tested by the necessities required to give jurisdiction in an action instituted at the outset in the federal court. Goldrey v. Morning News, (1895) 156 U. S. 518, 15 S. Ct. 559, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 517. But when an action is started in the United States court, the statutes creating jurisdiction and relating to the service of papers now embodied in Judicial Code, §§ 24 to 27 and 40 to 68, can in no way be superseded by the laws of the state. The provisions of R. S. sec. 914 do not enlarge the specific enactments of the sections mentioned. On the contrary, they are merely applicable, so far as they may be used, to carry out those sections. Vitkus v. Clyde Steamship Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 288.

A motion to quash a summons served upon a foreign corporation not doing business in the state was a proper mode of challenging jurisdiction, notwithstanding the objection could have been taken under the local law only by demurrer. Meisukas v. Greenough Red Ash Coal Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 54, 37 S. Ct. 593, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 987.

Equity courts.—Equity causes are expressly excepted from the operation of the conformity statute (the text R. S. sec. 914); with the result that the practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of procedure in such causes are uniform in the United States courts, and are not governed by state laws, statutory or customary. U. S. v. Calcasieu Timber Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 196, 149 C. C. A. 386.

So the jurisdiction of a federal court sitting in equity cannot be enlarged or extended by state statutes or procedure. Crown Orchard Co. v. Dennis, (D. C. S. C. 1915) 220 Fed. 516. See also, to same effect Brown v. Fletcher, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 239 Fed. 360.

Criminal cases.—That the federal courts, in criminal cases, are not governed by state statutes, is well settled. U. S. v. Bopp, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 232 Fed. 177.

Real party in interest.—If the assignment to the plaintiff of a contract sued on was valid the plaintiff is the real party in interest, and as such entitled, under the practice in some states, to maintain the action in its own name. Arkansas Val. Smelting Co. v. Belden Min. Co., (1888) 127 U. S. 379, 8 S. Ct. 1308, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 246. See also to same effect Gibson v. Victor Talking Machine Co., (D. C. N. J. 1916) 232 Fed. 225.

Pleading.—The statute requires the federal courts to conform to the mode of pleading of the state in which the court sits, and when the state adheres to the system of pleading which recognizes the lines that separate the forms of action at common law it will be followed by such courts. Kalloch v. Hoagland, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 252.

A federal court will follow a state rule as to whether a cause of action is entire. Beckwith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 223 Fed. 858.

And where, according to the practice in a state, actions ex delicto and ex contractu cannot be joined, the same rule will be followed in the federal court. Tiana v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 824.

The practice in a state court as to bills of particulars will be followed in a federal court in that state, where such practice will save time, labor and expense in the trial of the real controversy. Wetmore v. Goodwin Film, etc., Co., (D. C. N. J. 1915) 226 Fed. 352.

Amendments.—A writ of scire facias to enforce a forfeited bail bond may be amended so as to show the jurisdictional fact (assuming it to be jurisdictional), which did not appear of record, that the offender was bailed by one qualified to admit to bail, where such amendment would be allowable under the state statute. Ewing v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 241, 153 C. C. A. 167.

Burden of proof.—In Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Welshman, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 82, 143 C. C. A. 358, L. R. A. 1916E 816, the court applied and approved Erie R. Co. v. Schmidt, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 513, 140 C. C. A. 655, as to the effect to be given to the New Jersey statute relating to the care of persons crossing a railroad crossing at which there is a guard or warning safety device.

In the assessment of damages, whether in actions in contract or tort, a federal court should apply the rules existing and applicable in the state court; such assessment being a matter of practice. Loewe v. Union Sav. Bank, (D. C. Conn. 1915) 226 Fed. 294.

Submission of case to jury.—The statutes, rules and practice of the state and state courts of the state in which the case is tried have no application in the submission of a case to the jury. U. S. v. Oppenheim, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 228 Fed. 220.

Notice before entry of judgments.—Provisions in a state statute as to notice before entry of judgment need not by reason of this section be followed where the parties have by stipulation agreed otherwise. Nelson v. McMillan, (Ia. 1916) 156 N. W. 323.

Vacating or modifying judgments.—In Forty Fort Coal Co. v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1915) 233 Fed. 704, the court said: "However, it will not be denied that many of the state law courts have and exercise this power. In some states it is expressly conferred by statute; in others it is considered one of the 'inherent powers' of the law courts."

Summary judgment against sureties on appeal bond.—The practice of rendering a summary judgment against sureties on an appeal bond, upon affirmance of the decree appealed from, has been introduced by statute in many states; and this practice is followed by the federal courts in actions at law. Although the adoption of state procedure is not obligatory upon the federal courts when sitting in equity, they have frequently rendered summary judgment against sureties on appeal bonds. Pease v. Rathbun-Jones Engineering Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 273, 37 S. Ct. 283, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 715, Ann. Cas. 1918C 1147.

Appellate procedure.—"The Acts of Congress give to defeated litigants in the national courts the right to a review of final judgments at law against them by writs of error, and a right to a review of final decrees in equity by appeal. These Acts grant the power and fix the jurisdiction of the federal appellate courts. They are not matters of form or practice, but matters of power and jurisdiction. They are not affected by the act of conformity (R. S. sec. 914), nor by the legislation or practice of the states." Hooven, etc., Co. v. Featherstone, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 81, 49 C. C. A. 229, quoted and followed in Smith v. Currie, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 803, 145 C. C. A. 113.

Appellate procedure in federal courts is "regulated exclusively by federal statutes and decisions, unaffected by statutes of the states," U. S. v. Jack, (1917) 244 U. S. 397, 37 S. Ct. 605, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1222.

Vol. IV, p. 577, sec. 915.

In using the term "common-law causes" in this section it must be assumed that Congress had in mind the distinction between a right of action given by the common law from one dependent upon a statute and intended that such distinction should be observed. It is not allowable to disregard it or by interpretation to explain it away. Brown v. Fletcher, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 239 Fed. 360.

Adoption of state laws.—The effect of this section is to make the state attachment statutes laws of the United States. Loewe v. Union Sav. Bank, (D. C. Conn. 1915) 226 Fed. 294.

Personal service or appearance.—This section, it "has been authoritatively decided, permits the issue and levy of an attachment in an action begun here only in aid of an action in which personal service has been or can be made on the defendant." Cleveland, etc., Coal Co. v. J. H. Hillman, etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio, 1917) 245 Fed. 200.

Suit removed from state court.—Where in a removed case the jurisdiction of the state court and of the federal court depends exclusively upon attachment proceedings, defendant being a nonresident and not personally served with process, and the federal court discharges the attachment upon a ground that made the attachment utterly void, so that if such discharge had been made in the state court each act and step required by law to begin an action would have to be commenced over again, the federal court cannot reacquire jurisdiction by issuing a new order of attachment upon the filing of a new affidavit. Cleveland, etc., Coal Co. v. J. H. Hillman, etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio, 1917) 245 Fed. 200, discharging the new attachment and striking plaintiff's petition from the files.

Vol. IV, p. 580, sec. 916.

Where a state statute prohibited issuance of an execution on a judgment against a county except as therein provided, the issuance and levy of an execution contrary to the statute was ineffective. Clearwater County v. Pfeffer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 183, 149 C. C. A. 373.

Vol. IV, p. 587, sec. 921.

Power of court.—An order of a federal court consolidating actions for trial is within the discretionary power of the court. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, (1892) 145 U. S. 285, 292, 12 S. Ct. 909, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 707. See also The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 203; Hanover F. Ins. Co. v. Kinneard, (1889) 129 U. S. 176, 9 S. Ct. 269, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 653.

The consolidation of two or more actions in admiralty is based upon the fact that such actions are ordinarily in rem against the common res, a proceeding which necessitates a seizure of the libeled vessel to bring her within the custody and control of the court. The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 203.

Vol. IV, p. 596, sec. 954.

Of the corresponding section of the Judiciary Act of 1789 (1 Stat. 91) it has been said that it "was designed to free the administration of justice in the federal courts from all subtle, artificial and technical rules and modes of proceeding in any way calculated to hinder and delay the determination of cause in those courts upon their very merits." In re Griggs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 243, 147 C. C. A. 249.

Under the authority thus given amendments have been allowed by a long line of decisions of the Supreme Court covering every step in a case from the summons to the verdict and judgment. In re Griggs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 243, 147 C. C. A. 249.

Discretion of court.—The exercise of the power granted under this section, when not restrained by positive rules, rests wholly in the discretion of the court. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Nelson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 708, 141 C. C. A. 464; Fleitman v. McKinnon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 98, 151 C. C. A. 174.

Effect of state statutes.—The right to allow amendments is conferred by this section and exists independently of state statutes, and is not controlled thereby. Erie R. Co. v. Schmidt, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. (1915) 225 Fed. 513, 140 C. C. A. 655; In re Griggs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 243, 147 C. C. A. 249.

Where the complaint in an action on a note payable to one as agent declared that the note was delivered to the plaintiff, it was held proper to amend it so as to read that the note was given to the plaintiff as agent. Fleitman v. McKinnon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 99, 151 C. C. A. 174.

A complaint alleging a cause of action under the laws of one state may be amended by alleging it was given by the laws of another state. Williams v. William B. Scaipe, etc., Co., (D. C. N. J. 1915) 227 Fed. 922.

Erroneous writ of execution.—Where, after judgment against a county, the court, without objection, on petition, order to show cause, and answer, issued an execution, and the proceeding had every essential attribute of a proceeding in mandamus, and there was no issue of fact, the appellate court upon reversing the order for an execution as being prohibited by the state law, remanded the cause with directions to issue a mandamus against the county officers to pay the judgment, as the court would have had power to do and should have done instead of issuing an execution. Clearwater County v. Pfeffer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 183, 149 C. C. A. 373.

Jurisdictional averments.—It has been said by the Circuit Court of Appeals that the authority conferred by this section cannot be employed to supply a lack of jurisdiction. In re Griggs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 243, 147 C. C. A. 249.

A writ of scire facias to enforce a forfeited bail bond may be amended so as to show the jurisdictional fact (assuming it be jurisdictional), which did not appear of record, that the offender was bailed by one qualified to admit to bail. Ewing v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 241, 153 C. C. A. 167.

Vol. IV, p. 601, sec. 955.

Foreign executor.—In C. F. Stromeyer Co. v. Aldrich, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 960, a motion by the plaintiff to revive against the executors of the defendant was denied. It appeared that the defendant, a citizen of Rhode Island, died after service of the summons and complaint upon him, and letters testamentary upon his estate were granted by the Probate Court in Rhode Island. The plaintiff sought to revive the action against his executors, who were citizens and residents of Rhode Island, had no assets of the estate within the state of New York and had never been served with notice of the application. The court said: "If the executors had received letters from a surrogate of New York they could be brought in as parties, irrespective of any question of their citizenship. If the court, however, has no jurisdiction of the executors because they are not qualified to sue or be sued here, there can be no revivor. It is not shown that they are so qualified under the laws of Rhode Island and they would not be at common law."

Vol. IV, p. 604, sec. 961.

Ascertaining amount due.—Where a bond was given for the care of a feeble-minded alien and it was claimed that the recovery thereon should be for the full amount of the obligation, the court said, after referring to R. S. sec. 961: "The rule is that, where the parties to a contract have agreed that a sum shall become payable on a single event, such sum may be regarded as liquidated damages, but where the sum is made payable to secure the performance of several stipulations of varying degrees of importance, it is clear the stipulated sum must be regarded as a penalty, and not as liquidated damages for a part default. Had the breach averred been in the performance of the only condition to be performed, the argument addressed to us would have force." U. S. v. Rubin, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 227 Fed. 938.

Vol. IV, p. 605, sec. 997.

Parties—Waiver of irregularity.—In McCluskey v. Marysville, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 36, 37 S. Ct. 374, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 578, affirming a judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals which affirmed a judgment dismissing an action by the plaintiff Nordgard, the court said: "In view of the stipulation of the parties the court below, agreeing to the substitution as plaintiff in error of the administrator of Nordgard, who died while the cause was there pending, the motion to dismiss on the ground that the writ of error was wrongfully allowed, and that the administrator is not a proper party, is based upon a mere irregularity which was waived."

Time of filing transcript.—"The Supreme Court has in numerous cases announced that it has no jurisdiction to hear and determine a case where the transcript has not been filed during the term next succeeding that in which the writ of error was sued out or the appeal was taken." Freeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 732, 142 C. C. A. 256, wherein several cases are cited to same point.

"It is undoubtedly within the power of a court during the judgment term to enter an order extending the term, and thus take the case out of the operation of the general rule that the power to reduce exceptions to form and have them signed and filed is, under ordinary circumstances, confined to the term at which the judgment is rendered." Freeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 732, 142 C. C. A. 256.

Vol. IV, p. 612, sec. 1000.

Criminal as well as civil cases are affected by this section where the judgment against the defendant awards costs, provided, however, that it is not applicable to a writ of error on a conviction of a crime punishable by death. American Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 680, 152 C. C. A. 514.

Rule 13 of the Fifth Circuit does not so affect this section as to prevent a bond standing as security for a superseded decree for the payment of money, at least in so far as that decree is not otherwise secured. Pease v. Rathbun-Jones Engineering Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 273, 142 C. C. A. 565.

Vol. IV, p. 618, sec. 1007.

Liability on bond.—It has long been settled that a supersedeas bond in common form, conditioned that the appellant shall "prosecute its appeal to effect and answer all damages and costs, if it fails to make its plea good," binds the surety, upon affirmation of a judgment or decree for the mere payment of money, to pay the amount of the judgment or decree. Pease v. Rathbun-Jones Engineering Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 273, 37 S. Ct. 283, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 715, Ann. Cas. 1918C 1147, citing Catlett v. Brodie, 9 Wheat. 553, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 158, and holding that the federal District Court had power to render summary judgment against the sureties on such a bond on affirmation of the decree.

Vol. IV, p. 624, sec. 1011.

The action of a trial court in not sustaining a plea in abatement interposed by the defendants to an indictment, based on the ground that it was procured by the wrongful use before the grand jury of testimony and evidence which was obtained by an illegal search and seizure of their private papers and documents, is not a ground for reversal, the plea having been heard by the trial court upon plea, answer, replication and evidence introduced by both parties, the question involved being wholly a question of fact. Mounday v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 965, 140 C. C. A. 93.

The jury's finding of facts on conflicting evidence is conclusive. Holk v. Kizer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 681, 150 C. C. A. 13.

"When an action at law is tried without a jury by a federal court, and it makes a general finding, or a special finding of facts, the Act of Congress forbids a reversal by the appellate court of that finding, or the judgment thereon, 'for any error of fact' (R. S. sec. 1011), and a finding of fact contrary to the weight of the evidence is an error of fact." Wear v. Imperial Window Glass Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 60, 139 C. C. A. 622.

Vol. IV, p. 678, sec. 601.

See notes to 1912 Supp., p. 137, Judicial Code, § 20, infra, p. 1313.

1909 Supp., p. 291. [Act of April 14, 1906.]

See Judicial Code, § 129, 1912 Supp., p. 195.

Orders embraced.—An interlocutory order or decree refusing, dissolving or refusing to dissolve an injunction is expressly made appealable by this section. Ward Baking Co. v. Weber, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 142, 144 C. C. A. 440.

Review by appeal, not by certiorari.—This section provides for a review on appeal, and certiorari to review will not lie. In re Cogan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 192, 142 C. C. A. 548.

Stay of "proceedings in other respects."

—After an appeal from an interlocutory decree ordering assignment of certain patents, and an accounting of profits and damages, and enjoining use of the inventions, the trial judge denied an application to stay the accounting unless the defendant give bond to pay the amount found due. Upon subsequent renewal of the motion for stay before a circuit judge with a motion that, pending appeal, the plaintiff be enjoined from bringing any action for infringement of the assigned patents, either against defendants or their customers, and finally that the injunction be stayed, the judge refused to reconsider the decision of the trial judge, and denied the other motions, as the hardships the defendants complained of were the result of defeat. Chadeloid Chemical Co. v. H. B. Chalmers Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 71, 155 C. C. A. 15.

A judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals may grant a stay on appeal from an order granting an injunction pendente lite. Masses Pub. Co. v. Patten, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 102, 157 C. C. A. 398.

Propriety of granting stay.—Where, in a suit against a postmaster to have certain second class matter forwarded to destination through the United States mail, but, on the day before the decision of the court in favor of the plaintiff the latter requested the defendant to withhold the matter, as other arrangements for distribution had been made, the judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals on appeal from the interlocutory order granted a stay, because the situation was such that any wrong suffered by the plaintiff could be wholly redressed by damages, apparently measured by the expense of the different transportation arrangement which had been perfected. Masses Pub. Co. v. Patten, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 102, 157 C. C. A. 398.

Review of case on the merits.—On appeal from an order granting an interlocutory injunction, the Circuit Court of Appeals cannot properly dismiss the bill unless it is in possession of the materials necessary to enable it to do full and complete justice between the parties. Where by consent of parties the cause has been submitted for a final determination of the merits, or upon the face of the bill there is no ground for equitable relief, the Appellate Court may finally dispose of the merits upon an appeal from an interlocutory order.' But where the application for a temporary injunction was submitted upon affidavits taken ex parte, without opportunity for cross-examination, and without any consent that the court proceed to final determination of the merits, there was no basis for such determination on appeal unless it appeared upon the face of the bill that there was no ground for equitable relief. Eagle Glass, etc., Co. v. Rowe, (1917) 245 U. S. 275, 38 S. Ct. 80, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

On appeal from an interlocutory decree, the court may reverse the decree for want of jurisdiction of the court below, and direct a dismissal of the bill on that ground. Supreme Council, etc. v. Hobart, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 385, 157 C. C. A. 11, where the court said: "In such appeals the Court of Appeals is authorized to review the whole of the interlocutory decree, not merely the part granting the injunction, and also to determine whether there was any insuperable objection, in point of jurisdiction or merits, to the maintenance of the suit, and if there was, to direct a final decree dismissing the bill." See U. S. Fidelity Co. v. Bray, 225 U. S. 205, 214, 32 Sup. Ct. 620, 56 L. Ed. 1055, and the prior decisions of the Supreme Court there cited. See, also, Seattle, etc., Co. v. Seattle, etc., Co., 185 Fed. 365, 368, 107 C. C. A. 421. It is true that these decisions were before the Judicial Code became effective, and deal, not with section 129 in its present form, but with section 7 of the Court of Appeals Act as amended in 1906. We find no difference, however, material for the present purpose, between the legislation therein considered and section 129 which incorporates it in the Code, whatever the changes thereby effected in respects not here material."

Scope of review—In patent cases.—See Racine Engine, etc., Co. v. Confectioners' Machinery, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 876, 148 C. C. A. 474, which was a patent case and related to an injunction and accounting, the court having under consideration section 7 of the Act of March 3, 1891, from which section 129 of the Code was taken.

In Lederer v. Garage Equipment Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 527, 149 C. C. A. 73, which was an appeal from an interlocutory decree finding that certain claims of patent granted to appellee were valid and infringed, enjoining appellant from further infringement thereof, and referring the case to a master for an accounting of profits and damages, the court said: "On the grounds stated by Judge Geiger at the trial, we concur in the findings of fact that the claims in suit are valid and infringed. Appellant, assigning error on the court's action in striking out a portion of its answer, which denies appellee's right to an accounting of damages in addition to profits, has argued at great length that the statute which authorizes an assessment of damages in an equity suit upon a patent is violative of the Seventh Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It suffices to say that his appeal is under section 7 of the Court of Appeals Act, section 129 of the Judicial Code (Act March 3, 1911, ch. 231, 36 Stat. 1134) . . . giving us appellate jurisdiction over interlocutory decrees of injunction, and that at this time no question can be considered concerning the rightfulness of any final accounting decree which may hereafter be rendered."

In Ward Baking Co. v. Weber, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 142, 144 C. C. A. 440, it was held that an appeal from a part of an interlocutory decree, which part dismissed a bill for infringement as to certain claims, gave the Circuit Court of Appeals no power to consider the rest of the decree.

In a suit to compel the transfer of patents pursuant to contract, and praying for injunction against further use of the patents and for an accounting of profits, a decree for injunction and accounting was entered and on appeal therefrom the court affirmed the decree. Chadeloid Chemical Co. v. H. B. Chalmers Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 606, 156 C. C. A. 304.

A so-called motion to quash, setting up a previous adjudication upon a former indictment for the same offense that it was barred by the statute of limitations was in substance a plea in bar, and a judgment granting the motion and discharging the defendant without day is reviewable on writ of error under this Act. U. S. v. Oppenheimer, (1916) 242 U. S. 85, 37 S. Ct. 68, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 161.

Special plea in bar—Invalidity or construction of the statute need not be a ground of the special plea in bar. U. S. v. Oppenheimer, (1916) 242 U. S. 85, 37 S. Ct. 68, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 161, holding that where the defendant set up a former adjudication on a prior indictment for the same offense that it was barred by the statute of limitations, a judgment quashing the present indictment on that ground was reviewable under this Act.

Judge concerned in interest.—In In re Honolulu Consol. Oil Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 348, 156 C. C. A. 128, on petition to the Circuit Court of Appeals by the said Oil Company, it appears that the company was a defendant in seventeen certain suits brought by the United States in one federal District Court as part of a unitary scheme or plan of litigation against various oil companies in California to recover possession of certain oil and gas lands and damages for minerals extracted therefrom, that an important question to be determined in each of such suits would be the rule of damages to be applied, that in so far as the decision of such question was concerned each of said causes was practically identical; that the judge of the District Court had owned stock in one of the defendant oil companies and was subject on that account to a stockholders' liability under the state law; that the foregoing facts were suggested by the petitioner to the judge as a disqualification under Judicial Code, § 20, and that he had denied the application for his disqualification. The Circuit Court of Appeals held that the judge was concerned in interest in the result of the suits, by reason of his stockholders' liability, and granted a mandamus directing him to enter an order that an authenticated copy of his disqualification be certified to the senior judge of the circuit.

The phrase "has been of counsel" has reference to the suit under consideration. Duncan v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (S. D. Ga. 1915) 223 Fed. 446.

The statute was not intended to paralyze the action of a judge who has heard the case, or a question in it, by the interposition of a motion to disqualify him between a hearing and a determination of the matter heard. Ex p. American Steel Barrel Co., (1913) 230 U. S. 35, 33 S. Ct. 1007, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1379. This construction of the statute was followed in In re Equitable Trust Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 836, 147 C. C. A. 30, where the complainant in a foreclosure suit filed an affidavit, under the statute, when, on complainant's motion, the judge was proceeding to fix an upset price for the foreclosure sale, and it was held that "the action of the trial judge thus set in motion and continuously prosecuted before him by the petitioner [complainant] cannot, we think, be thus paralyzed."

Action by railway carrier against consignee to recover certain charges.—Jurisdiction under this paragraph extends to a suit by a railway carrier against a commission merchant, the consignee of interstate shipments of live stock, to recover the charges for disinfecting the cars, claimed to be due under a tariff duly filed, published, and approved as required by the Interstate Commerce Act, although such consignee, admitting the legality of the charges, defends upon the ground that the carrier, having led him to believe that the amount demanded of and paid by him before he remitted to his principals the entire net proceeds of the sales of such live stock constituted full settlement, is estopped to demand more. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Rice, (1918) 247 U. S. 201, 38 S. Ct. 429, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, where the court said: "The Interstate Commerce Act requires carrier to collect and consignee to pay all lawful charges duly prescribed by the tariff in respect of every shipment. Their duty and obligation grow out of and depend upon that act."

1912 Supp., p. 140, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. Sixteenth.

Suit by receiver in winding up.—Where there is no diversity of citizenship, and the ground of action is for a breach of duties as directors, at common law and in equity, federal jurisdiction depends upon the fact that the proceeding is brought by a receiver of a national bank in the course of winding up its affairs and is sanctioned by this paragraph. Bates v. Dresser, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 772.

1912 Supp., p. 140, Jud. Code, sec. 24, par. Twentieth.

Process — Limitation.—This section prescribes no system of process to be followed by the District Courts and those courts may follow their established practice, or adopt that established for the guidance of the Court of Claims. Following the practice of the District Court, an action against the United States may be instituted by service of a writ of summons upon the district attorney, and the impetration of the writ, not the filing of a statement of claim, tolls the statutory period of limitation, and for all the purposes of procedure the United States is to be regarded the same as any other defendant. Mill Creek, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (E. D. Pa. 1917) 246 Fed. 1013.

United States not real defendants.—Where a contractor agreed with the United States to furnish certain machinery, etc., for a public work and made an agreement with a subcontractor whereby the latter agreed with the contractor to furnish said machinery, and the government, on completion of the work, withheld from the final payment to the contractor a certain sum on account of asserted dereliction of the subcontractor, and the contractor in like manner withheld said sum from the subcontractor, and the contractor and a surety company for the use and benefit of all persons furnishing labor, etc., joined in a suit against the United States and the subcontractor alleging that the latter refused to recognize the right of the government to withhold said sum and was threatening to sue the contractor, and that said subcontractor had a valid claim against the contractor the latter had by equity the same lawful claim against the United States, and that in order to do justice to all parties an accounting should be had between the plaintiff contractor, the defendant subcontractor and the United States, praying that the court adjudicate between the respective parties as the right should appear, but without praying for judgment against the United States directly in the proceeding—it was held that the suit was primarily between the contractor and the subcontractor, and as they were citizens and residents of the state in which the suit was brought, the federal court had no jurisdiction. National Surety Co. v. Washington Iron Works, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 243 Fed. 260.

Removal of cases arising under Employers' Liability Act—Diversity of citizenship.—In respect of the last proviso in Judicial Code, § 28, which proviso is a re-enactment of a provision in the Act of April 5, 1910, ch. 143, § 1, in title RAILROADS, 1912 Supp., p. 335, the Supreme Court said: "The language of both amendment and Judicial Code, we think, clearly inhibits removal of a cause arising under the act from a state court upon the sole ground of diversity of citizenship." Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Leslie, (1915) 238 U. S. 599, 35 S. Ct. 844, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1478, affirming (1914) 112 Ark. 305, 167 S. W. 83, Ann. Cas. 1915B 834. To the same point see Southern R. Co. v. Pickett, (1917) 244 U. S. 571, 37 S. Ct. 703, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1321, Ann. Cas. 1918B 69; Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. Where the plaintiff's complaint shows a case arising under the federal Employers' Liability Act, the action cannot be removed, either on the ground of diverse citizenship of the parties, or as a case arising under a law of the United States. Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Defendant a federal corporation.—A defendant cannot remove the case on the ground that it is a federal corporation. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rasmussen, (Tex. Civ. App. 1915) 181 S. W. 212; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Sherer, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 183 S. W. 404, following Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Leslie, (1915) 238 U. S. 599, 35 S. Ct. 844, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1478; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Hanson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 189 S. W. 289. And see now Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, § 5, 1916 Supp. at p. 137.

Alleged fraudulent joinder of a local defendant does not give a nonresident defendant sued under the federal Employers' Liability Act a right of removal. Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, affirming (1914) 166 N. C. 24, 81 S. E. 1003.

Traversal in petition for removal.—Where a nonresident defendant is sued under the federal Employers' Liability Act a right to have the cause removed does not arise from an allegation in said defendant's petition for removal that the injury did not happen in interstate commerce. Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, affirming (1914) 166 N. C. 24, 81 S. E. 1003.

False and fraudulent averments.—An action based upon the federal Employers' Liability Act is not removable upon an allegation in a petition for removal that the plaintiff's averments as to the interstate nature of his employment were false, and known by him to be false, and made for the sole purpose of fraudulently preventing a removal. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Shaw, (1916) 168 Ky. 537, 182 S. W. 653. But see the reservation in the opinion of the court in Great Northern R. Co. v. Alexander, (1918) 246 U. S. 276, 38 S. Ct. 237, 62 U. S. (L. ed.)

Nonremovable united with removable cause of action.—Where a plaintiff elected to state alternative causes of action, one based upon an injury said to be covered by the federal Employers' Liability Act, and therefore not removable, and another not based thereon and which was removable, the defendant may remove the entire case. Bedell v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 245 Fed. 788.

Evidence in federal court.—Where the servant of a railroad company brought an action against it in a South Carolina court to recover damages for personal injuries, neither the complaint nor the answer tending to show that the action fell under the federal employers' liability statute, and the case was removed to the federal court on the ground of diverse citizenship, it was reversible error for the federal court to reject evidence offered by the defendant that the plaintiff was engaged in interstate commerce, and that therefore the defendant's liability was to be determined under the federal statute. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Woods, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 917, 151 C. C. A. 651.

An action solely against the Pullman Company for death of plaintiff's decedent in its employment would be removable, if there was the necessary diversity of citizenship, and so would an action brought against a nonresident railroad company and the Pullman Company where the plaintiff alleged employment solely by the Pullman Company. But where plaintiff alleged employment of his decedent by the railroad company and death caused by the concurrent negligence of both defendants, and the latter removed the cause upon a petition alleging that the employment was solely by the Pullman Company, and the plaintiff moved to remand, the court made an order requiring both plaintiff and defendants to file affidavits and counter affidavits as to the fact of employment, with the privilege of cross examination by the plaintiff, in open court, upon notice, of the persons making affidavits for defendants. Martin v. New York, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 696.

"Duly verified."—"Previous to the enactment of the Judicial Code on March 3, 1911, there was no requirement that petitions for removal should be verified." Berry v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1915) 228 Fed. 395.

Sufficiency.—In Berry v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1915) 228 Fed. 395, the action was brought against the railroad company and Estes, and each of the defendants filed a separate petition for removal on the ground of diverse citizenship. Each petition was verified by the attorney for the petitioner, who happened to be the same person in each instance. Judge Evans said: "Previous to the enactment of the Judicial Code on March 3, 1911, there was no requirement that petitions for removal should be verified, but Congress evidently thought, and so legislated, that such petition should be supported by oath. It, however, did not fix any standard by which we could determine what should be 'due' verification."

Bond.—In State Improvement-Development Co. v. Leininger, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 226 Fed. 884, the court, denying a motion to remand, said: "The formal defect in the condition of the bond providing that defendant enter a copy of the record in this court 'on or before the first day of the next regular session,' the old form, instead of 'within thirty days from the date of the filing of said petition,' as now required, did not render the bond void. It was a technical defect merely which could have been cured upon objection. No such objection having been made, and the record now being here, the bond has subserved its purpose and is functionless, and the defect is wholly immaterial."

"A notice of intention to file a petition and bond for removal of a cause is sufficient though it does not specify the time and place when it is to be presented. Potter v. General Baking Co., 213 Fed. 697." Hinman v. Barrett, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 621.

Delay in filing transcript.—In Nelson v. Black Diamond Min. Co., (N. D. Ky. 1916) 237 Fed. 264, a case against two defendants had been ipso facto removed by the nonresident defendant by the filing of a sufficient petition and bond, on the alleged ground of a fraudulent joinder of defendants. The state court refused to order a removal, and proceeded to trial and judgment in favor of both defendants, which was reversed by the state appellate court as to the removing defendant and affirmed as to the other. When the case came back to the trial court, a transcript of the record was for the first time filed in the federal court.

The plaintiff's motion to remand was denied by the federal court.

In Waverly Stone, etc., Co. v. Waterloo, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1917) 239 Fed. 561, Reed, J., said: "Under the Removal Act the Cedar Valley Company [petitioner for removal] was required to file a copy of the record in the federal court within 30 days after filing a sufficient petition and bond in the state court for the removal of the cause. If such petition was filed on January 17th, and the cause was a removable one, then defendant was required to file a copy of the record in this court by February 18th, unless for excusable delay; but it was not filed until May 25, 1916, more than three months after it was required by the act of Congress to be filed, and is therefore too late, no excuse for the delay being shown. If the cause is a removable one, the filing of a sufficient petition and bond for its removal in the state court operates to remove the cause at once to the proper federal court, and there is no occasion to wait until the state court has acted on the petition. Kern v. Huidekoper, (1881) 103 U. S. 485, 490, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 354; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Koontz, (1881) 104 U. S. 5, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 643. The plaintiff has not moved to remand the cause upon the ground above considered; but the court may and should remand the cause upon its own motion, if the case, though a removable one, is not properly removed."

Proceeding for disapproval of appointment.—In In re Brown, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 452, 155 C. C. A. 228, an original proceeding was addressed to a circuit judge for the First Circuit, asking under Judicial Code, § 56, that he disapprove of an order of the District Court of Massachusetts appointing a temporary receiver of the Boston & Maine railroad, upon the ground that the District Court was induced to make the appointment by alleged misrepresentations in respect to the financial condition of the railroad, as well as by omissions of material statements in respect to its financial condition. After certain preliminary proceedings it was ordered by the judge that the application be filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, that a hearing thereon be had by such court. The petition for disapproval was dismissed, the court, per Aldrich, J., saying: "We think section 56 was intended merely to confer upon a circuit judge, or upon Circuit Courts of Appeals, authority to disapprove of the automatic phase, so to speak, of section 56, which makes the order operate outside the district, and that if it should be found the receiver appointed in one district, where the property lies in different states in the same judicial circuit, should not control the property in districts or states outside of the district in which he was appointed, a circuit judge or the Circuit Court of Appeals might declare against it. Section 129 of the Judicial Code provides for an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals from any decree appointing a receiver. Thus it is open, in that way, to any proper party who is aggrieved by the appointment of a receiver to raise the question as to the propriety or legality of the appointment. . . . It is plain that Congress intended that the substantive question whether there should be a receivership should be reviewed upon appeal, if reviewed at all, by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and not by a single circuit judge. . . . There might be business relations which would justify disapproval of outside jurisdiction and control by the original receiver, or personal, prudential, and perhaps other reasons, not going to the merits of the question whether there should be a receivership, why the same receiver should not act in all the outside districts, and reasons which might become the ground, not for inquiring into the legality of the original receivership decree, but grounds for disapproval of its outside operativeness." Brown, J., concurred for the further reason that the 30 days within which an order of disapproval might have been made had elapsed; and for the same reason Bingham, J., concurred in the result.

Purpose of section.—The provision of section 76 which requires the District Court to be open at all times for the purpose of hearing and deciding admiralty causes traces its origin to the Act of Feb. 23, 1847, ch. 20, 9 Stat. L. 131, which established the southern district of Florida, evidently for the especial purpose of disposing of admiralty business. It covers the hearing and deciding of admiralty causes, while the provision now found in section 9 of the Judicial Code, 1912 Supp., p. 134, relates to interlocutory proceedings "preparatory to the hearing." The provisions referred to are designed to render the District Courts readily accessible to applicants for justice in all branches of the jurisdiction; and while they required those courts to be always open only as courts of admiralty and as courts of equity, they permit "special terms" to be held at any time for the transaction of any kind of business. The provisions indicate a policy of avoiding the hardships consequent upon a closing of the court during vacations. Abbott v. Brown, (1916) 241 U. S. 606, 36 S. Ct. 689, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1199.

A claim for damages for injuries to mules, which were let to the government under an unauthorized agreement by government agents to exercise extra care of the animals, and injured by the negligence of government employees, was not recoverable under this section. Occidental Constr. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 817, 158 C. C. A. 157.

Only the claims of owners can be adjudged under this section, as the language, "claims of those whose property was taken" can have no other meaning. Hence where the owner of cotton sold it to the confederate states and received in payment bonds of the confederate states government, but remained in possession of the cotton until it was seized by United States treasury agents, his administrator had no valid claim for the proceeds. Thompson v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 547, 38 S. Ct. 349, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Property not "taken."—Where the owner of certain cotton in the state of Louisiana, on June 6, 1865, at which time it was taken into possession of the purchasing agents of the United States, who refused to release it until the owners paid one-fourth of the market value thereof, paid said amount under protest, and the same was covered into the treasury, the money became the absolute property of the United States and was not recoverable, as it was not "taken" within the meaning of the statute. O'Pry v. U. S., (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 111.

Suits should not be in the names of heirs of the original owner, but when not in his name, should be in the name of his executor, administrator or other legal representative. Basch v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 134.

Averment and proof of loyalty is not required as to claimants coming within the intent and purpose of the general amnesty, issued Dec. 25, 1886. Basch v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 134.

1912 Supp., p. 218, Jud. Code, sec. 207.

The District Court was without jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission refusing, on the ground of real or possible competition, to grant an extension of time for compliance with the provision of the Panama Canal Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 390, § 11, in RIVERS, HARBORS, AND CANALS, 1914 Supp., p. 378, which prohibited, after July 1, 1914, any ownership by a railroad in any common carrier by water when the railroad might compete for traffic with the water carrier, and empowered the commission to determine questions of fact as to such competition, and to extend the time if the extension would not exclude or reduce competition on the water route, since the order of the Commission was negative in substance as well as form, and the risk to which the railway company was left subject did not come from the order, but from the statute. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 243 U. S. 412, 37 S. Ct. 397, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 819.

An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission fixing a hearing of certain complaints made by certain coal companies for damages for alleged failure to furnish cars upon demand, had no characteristic of an "order" within the meaning of the statute, affirmative or negative; and the federal District Court, as successor to the Commerce Court, had no jurisdiction to cancel such order and enjoin the Commission from further proceeding with the hearing of the complaint. U. S. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 82, 37 S. Ct. 584, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1007.

Jurisdiction of state court.—"A state court would obviously have no jurisdiction" of a suit to enjoin, etc., an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in whole or in part, said the court in American Express Co. v. South Dakota, (1917) 244 U. S. 617, 37 S. Ct. 656, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1352. But it was there held that the state Supreme Court had jurisdiction to enjoin express companies from advancing intrastate rates in non-competitive territory which the companies attempted to justify by an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission directing them to remove an existing discrimination against interstate commerce by ceasing to charge higher rates between Sioux City, Iowa, and South Dakota points than for substantially equal distances between such South Dakota points and five named South Dakota cities; and the decree of the state court was modified by dissolving the injunction so far as it extended to rates in the competitive territory.

Considering the provisions of the Commerce Court Act in their entirety, the court in M'Lean Lumber Co. v. U. S., (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 237 Fed. 460, was of the opinion that it was intended that any person who had acquired a standing as a party in interest in proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission, should have the right to appear as a party in any suit brought in the court involving the validity of an order therein made by the Commission, as distinguished from the mere right of intervention given to other persons who were not parties in interest before the Commission, but merely "interested in the controversy or question," and that the right thus given to a party in interest before the Commission is not limited to his appearance as an intervener in such proceedings as may be instituted by other parties in interest before the Commission but includes the right to appear in the court as a party plaintiff in proceedings which he himself may bring to test the validity of the order of the Commission. And it was accordingly held that where a petition was filed against the United States to set aside certain orders made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the petitioners, having duly appeared before the Commission as complainants against the rates proposed to be established under a new schedule filed by the railway company, not only became parties in interest before the Commission in the proceedings had upon such complaint, but that as parties in interest in such proceedings they are now entitled as of right to appear as parties plaintiff under their petition in the District Court in proceedings to set aside the order of the Commission.

1912 Supp., p. 221, Jud. Code, sec. 208.

A state court has jurisdiction of an action by the state to compel corporations chartered by it to obey the orders, classifications, and regulations of the state railroad commission, none of which have been declared void by any court, and to restrain the defendants from charging other than said commission rates or applying other than the said commission's classification, as such suit is not to set aside, enjoin, suspend, or annul any order made by the Interstate Commerce Commission. *Abilene, etc., R. This section enlarged the power of a Circuit Court of Appeals by conferring authority to certify questions in "any case within its appellate jurisdiction," section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, vol. 4, p. 409, having been confined by construction to cases in which the judgments or decrees of the Circuit Courts of Appeals were final. Mode of review.—Appeal, not writ of error, is the proper method of reviewing a decree of the Philippine Supreme Court in a suit in which the complaint set forth a cause of action at law upon a contract, and the answer was in effect a bill in equity for reformation and incidentally to enjoin the action at law, since the proceeding thus became an equitable one. Philippine Sugar Estates Development Co. v. Philippine Islands, (1918) 247 U. S. 385, 38 S. Ct. 513, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

See Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, §§ 5 and 6, ante, this volume, p. 422.

Final judgment on reversal.—The federal Supreme Court, having determined, on appeal from the Philippine Supreme Court, that the court erred in refusing to consider evidence of mutual mistake offered under appropriate pleadings with a view to reforming the instrument in suit, will finally dispose of the case, where all the proffered evidence was admitted by the trial court and is in the record, and due exception was saved to the refusal of the trial court to grant a new trial on the ground that the evidence did not justify the findings. Philippine Sugar Estates Development Co. v. Philippine Islands, (1918) 247 U. S. 385, 38 S. Ct. 513, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

1912 Supp., p. 235, Jud. Code, sec. 250.

Final judgment or decree subject to review.—Under this section a judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, quashing a writ of certiorari directed to the judge of the district police court to bring up for review the record and proceedings before trial in a criminal prosecution, and remanding the record to the Police Court, was not final for the purpose of review by the federal Supreme Court. Hartranft v. Mullett, (1918) 247 U. S. 295, 37 S. Ct. 518, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing a writ of error for want of jurisdiction.

First clause.—Jurisdiction of trial court in issue.—Dodge v. Osborn, (1916) 240 U. S. 118, 36 S. Ct. 275, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 557, affirming a decree of the Supreme Court of the district, dismissing for want of jurisdiction a bill in a suit against the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to enjoin the assessment and collection of income taxes.

Sixth clause.—The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review a judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia in an action on the federal Employers' Liability Act where the defendant contended that it was not a "common carrier by railroad" within the meaning of that Act. Washington Ry., etc., Co. v. Scala, (1917) 244 U. S. 630, 37 S. Ct. 654, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1360.

Any law of the United States.—In a proceeding for mandamus to restore the relator to office, where the defendant's return, referring to the Act of Congress governing the Civil Service (Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 389, § 6, 37 Stat. L. 555), especially challenged the assertion that the relator was within the provisions of that law inhibiting removal without charges and hearing and asserted that the right to appoint and remove from the office in question was excepted out of such provisions. A demurrer to the return as stating no defense was overruled and from the judgment dismissing the proceeding the case was taken to the Court of Appeals of the District. It was held to be a case where the judgment of the Court of Appeals would not be final. U. S. v. Lane, (1917) 245 U. S. 166, 38 S. Ct. 94, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Criminal cases.—Certiorari issued out of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to the judge of the Police Court of the District, to bring for review the record and proceedings before trial in a criminal prosecution, is not a new or independent cause, but is a mere step in the pending criminal case, and a judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District which affirmed a judgment of the district Supreme Court, quashing the writ, was held to have been rendered in a case arising under the criminal laws and therefore excluded from the appellate jurisdiction of the federal Supreme Court, even though a jurisdictional question or a question concerning the construction of a federal statute was involved. Hartman v. Mulloony, (1918) 247 U. S. 295, 37 S. Ct. 518, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

The phrase "unconstitutionality of such statute" refers to the Federal Constitution and does not include unconstitutionality as regards the state constitution. Cook v. Burnquist, (D. C. Minn. 1917) 242 Fed. 321.

The court thus convened for the purpose of determining the right to a temporary injunction has no concern with and will not attempt to determine whether a state enactment is violative of the state constitution. Jackson v. Cravens, (S. D. Fla. 1916) 235 Fed. 212.

Jurisdiction of the District Court was sustained under this section in an action against state officers to enjoin enforcement of a statute violating the Federal Constitution in the imposition of permit and franchise taxes on a foreign corporation. Looney v. Crane Co., (1917) 245 U. S. 178, 38 S. Ct. 85, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

"If the threatened acts of the defendants are in excess of the authority vested in them by law, an action to enjoin them is within the jurisdiction of a federal court, both diverse citizenship and the necessary jurisdictional amount being present." Hebe Co. v. Calvert, (S. D. Ohio 1917) 246 Fed. 711.

Three judges necessary.—In Crescent Mfg. Co. v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 462, 155 C. C. A. 238, dismissing an appeal from an order denying an interlocutory injunction, the court said: "The question presented to the court below was whether the commissioner of agriculture of the state of New York should be restrained from carrying out and enforcing a threatened course of action having for its object the prevention of sales within the state of mapleine after its importation into New York from the state of Washington; mapleine being a food product manufactured and sold in the latter state and extensively transported in interstate commerce. Stated in another way, the question was whether the New York Agricultural Law (ch. 494, Laws of 1914), entitled 'An act to amend the Agricultural Law, in relation to adulterated or misbranded food,' is unconstitutional, as being in conflict with the provisions of section 8 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, as constituting an undue interference with interstate commerce. The district judge held the New York law constitutional, as not being in conflict with federal law. From this decision an appeal has been taken. The case has been argued in this court, and we shall have to dispose of it upon a point not raised in argument. It appears that the district judge was without jurisdiction to hear and determine the application for the interlocutory injunction. A court of the United States composed of one judge only is without power to hear and determine such an application. . . . It was not within the power of a single justice or judge to pass on the question whether the New York law violated the Constitution of the United States. When application for the injunction was presented to the district judge it was incumbent upon him to call to his assistance two other judges, one of whom should be a justice of the Supreme Court or a circuit judge, to hear and determine the application. And it was also his duty to give notice of the hearing to the governor and attorney-general, as well as to such other persons as may be defendants in the suit. This course was not pursued, but the district judge proceeded to hear and determine the question sitting alone."

The presence of three judges is necessary at a hearing on a bill to enjoin enforcement by state officers of provisions in a state statute on the ground of their conflict with the Federal Constitution. Hebe Co. v. Calvert, (S. D. Ohio 1917) 246 Fed. 711.

Appeal, in general.—A temporary injunction against a state officer which a federal District Court, having first acquired jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter of a suit, granted for the purpose of protecting and preserving that jurisdiction until the object of the suit should be accomplished and complete justice be done between the parties, is not an order from which an appeal may be taken to the federal Supreme Court under this section. Looney v. Eastern Texas R. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 214, 38 S. Ct. 460, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Appeal from an order of a single judge denying an interlocutory injunction in a case within this section is not authorized, and such appeal should be dismissed. Crescent Mfg. Co. v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 462, 155 C. C. A. 238.

Appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals in a case covered by this section and heard by three judges is excluded. The only appeal allowed is to the Supreme Court, and Judicial Code, § 129, does not apply. Jackson v. Cravens, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 117, 151 C. C. A. 193.

Although this section provides for an appeal direct to the Supreme Court, an appeal may be taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals where the jurisdiction of the District Court rests not alone upon the allegation that a law violates the Federal Constitution, but also upon the ground of diverse citizenship of the parties. Crescent Mfg. Co. v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 462, 155 C. C. A. 238.

Jurisdiction to review the whole case was acquired by the Supreme Court on appeal from an order which, while enjoining the enforcement of fines and penalties prescribed by a state statute for failure to obey an order of a corporation commission regulating water rates, refused to interfere with the enforcement of such order. Van Dyke v. Geary, (1917) 244 U. S. 39, 37 S. Ct. 483, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 973.

Repeal of obnoxious state statute pending appeal.—In Berry v. Davis, (1917) 242 U. S. 468, 37 S. Ct. 208, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 441, the Supreme Court reversed a decree and directed the bill to be dismissed without costs to either party, the court saying: "This is a bill to enjoin the state board of parole and the warden and physician of the state penitentiary at Fort Madison from performing vasectomy upon the plaintiff, the defendant in error, in pursuance of an Iowa statute approved April 19, 1913, 35 G. A. ch. 187, § 1. Supplement to Code 1913, ch. 19-B, § 2600-p. This act, among other things, directed the operation to be performed upon convicts in the penitentiary who had been twice convicted of felony, and on Feb. 14, 1914, the board had ordered it, upon the ground that the plaintiff had been twice so convicted. The bill was filed on March 11, 1914. On April 15, 1914, following an opinion of the attorney-general that both felonies must have been committed after the passage of the Act, the order was laid on the table, and the warden and physician made affidavits, filed on April 22, that the operation would not be performed by them. Nevertheless, three judges, disregarding the foregoing opinion and action, proceeded to issue a preliminary injunction as prayed in the bill. 216 Fed. 413. An appeal was taken to this court in 1914. In 1915 the Act of 1913 was repealed, and the substituted act does not apply to the plaintiff. Supplemental Supplement to the Code of Iowa, 1915, ch. 19-B, § 2600-sl. All possibility or threat of the operation had disappeared now, if not before, by the act of the state. Therefore, upon the precedents we are not called upon to consider the propriety of the action of the District Court, but the proper course is to reverse the decree and remand the cause, with directions that the bill be dismissed without costs to either party."

Constitutionality.—Overruling a contention that a defendant was not lawfully convicted because the jurors were not drawn from the entire district but only from one division thereof, and therefore that he was not tried by a jury of the state and district in which the crime was committed in violation of the Sixth Amendment; the court said: "The proposition disregards the plain text of the 6th Amendment, the contemporary construction placed upon it by the Judiciary Act of 1789 (chap. 20, 1 Stat. at L. 73, 88, § 29), expressly authorizing the drawing of a jury from a part of the district, and the continuous legislative and judicial practice from the beginning. § 802, Rev. Section 275, relating to qualifications and exemptions of jurors, is limited by the expression "subject to the provisions hereinafter contained." Section 286, therefore, must be read in connection with section 275, and as it deals specifically with the question of prior service, is exclusive of the provisions of the state statute on the same subject. *Papernow v. This section and the following Judicial Code, § 295, were quoted and applied in U. S. v. Cress, (1917) 243 U. S. 316, 37 S. Ct. 380, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 746, holding that in a suit against the United States under Judicial Code, § 24, par. Twentieth, 1912 Supp., p. 138, where judgment is rendered in favor of the plaintiff costs may be awarded against the United States.

Judicial Code, § 129, should not receive a different construction from that which it had when originally enacted in the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891. Jackson v. Cravens, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 117, 151 C. C. A. 193.

Venue of suits.—A suit by carriers against state authorities of Illinois to prevent complete obedience by the carriers to an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission fixing interstate rates was not a suit to enforce an order of the commission, within the meaning of the statutory provision, and the venue of the suit was governed by Judicial Code, § 207, 1912 Supp., p. 218, which preserves and continues the general jurisdiction of the District Courts over cases and proceedings not therein enumerated. The suit was therefore properly brought in the federal District Court for the northern district of Illinois. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Public Utilities Commission, (1918) 245 U. S. 493, 38 S. Ct. 170, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Cross-bill.—But cross-bills in the suit described in the last preceding paragraph assailing the validity of the Interstate Commerce Commission's order on various grounds and concluding with a prayer that it be set aside and annulled and that the United States and the commission be enjoined from enforcing it and the carriers from complying with it, were not maintainable, as in subject matter and purpose they were suits to set aside the order and could be brought only in the eastern district of Missouri, the order having been made upon the petition of a resident of that district. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Public Utilities Commission, (1918) 245 U. S. 493, 38 S. Ct. 170, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Procedure.—The inherent authority of a court of equity, in the exercise of a sound discretion, to accompany a decree changing the status quo, with an appropriate provision, nevertheless preserving the status quo pending an appeal, is not impaired or lessened by the Act abolishing the Commerce Court and transferring its jurisdiction to the District Courts of the United States. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (M. D. Tenn. 1915) 227 Fed. 273.

Hearing by three judges — Determination of merits.—In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (D. C. Tenn. 1915) 227 Fed. 258, the three judges denied a motion for an interlocutory injunction, and at the same time sustained the motions of the United States and of the commission to dismiss the petition; the latter "being a matter within the authority of the three judges now composing the court, under the provision of the Act of 1913, relating to the final hearing before three judges of any suit brought to suspend or set aside an order of the commission; the hearing of a motion to dismiss a petition for want of equity being, in our opinion, a final hearing within the meaning of such provision."

But in Brown Drug Co. v. U. S., (D. C. Ia. 1916) 235 Fed. 603, it was decided by a majority of the three judges convened to hear the application for a temporary injunction that they had no power to hear and determine a motion to dismiss the petition upon its merits, and that such motion must be submitted to the district judge alone and be determined by him. Smith, J., said: "If the motion had been filed before the application had been made, there would be no pretense that these three judges should sit to hear that question."

Discretion of court.—The court will not grant a temporary injunction unless there is irreparable injury to the complainants, and unless it can be granted without imposing irreparable injury upon some one else. Brown Drug Co. v. U. S., (D. C. Ia. 1916) 235 Fed. 603.

1916 Supp., p. 135, sec. 2. [Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, amending Judicial Code, §§ 128, 238.]

Time of taking appeal, etc., from Porto Rico.—The statute attaching Porto Rico to the first circuit contained no provision in terms fixing the time for taking appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals or suing out writs of error from that court for the cases from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico which might reach it. It was in fact a casus omisus which was supplied by a rule of court adopted by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the first circuit, Oct. 19, 1916, as "additional rule 37." It read as follows: "Appeals and writs of error from and to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico, and from the Supreme Court of the District of Porto Rico whenever by law they can be taken, shall be taken within six calendar months from the time when the right to such an appeal or writ of error accrues, and not afterwards, by filing a claim for the appeal in the registry of the court appealed from, or by suing out a writ of error from the Court of Appeals, or from the court or judge in Porto Rico, as the case may be." Graham v. O'Ferral, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 717, 150 C. C. A. 49.

An appeal, and not a writ of error was the proper appellate proceeding to review in the Circuit Court of Appeals a judgment of the Porto Rico Supreme Court reversing a judgment of dismissal by the District Court and rendering judgment in accordance with the prayers of the complaint enjoining the defendant railroad company from further operation of its railroad upon plaintiff's lands and ordering removal of the tracks therefrom. Plazuela Sugar Co. v. Pastoriza, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 115, 157 C. C. A. 411.

Further review by Supreme Court.—As to the effect of this section upon the appellate jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court to review final decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals in cases taken to the latter court under this section, see Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co. v. Ward, (1916) 242 U. S. 1, 37 S. Ct. 1, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 113.

1916 Supp., p. 136, sec. 2. [Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, amending Judicial Code, § 246.]

Review by federal Supreme Court.—In view of changes made by this amendment of Judicial Code, § 246, the federal Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to review on writ of error a judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the ninth circuit affirming a judgment of the Supreme Court of Hawaii, rendered in a case where there was no federal question and no diversity of citizenship. Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co. v. Ward, (1916) 242 U. S. 1, 37 S. Ct. 1, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 113.

Where the instructions of the court are not in the record to a writ of error to the Supreme Court of Hawaii, and the appellate tribunal is, therefore, not informed as to their character, it must assume that the instructions were given with proper and sufficient statement of the law applicable thereto. Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co. v. Ward, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 809, 147 C. C. A. 3.

1916 Supp., p. 137, sec. 5. [Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22.]

A defendant is not entitled to remove a case from a state court to a federal court on the ground that it was incorporated under an Act of Congress. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Hanson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 189 S. W. 289.

1916 Supp., p. 137. [Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 90, Jud. Code, § 274a.]

Construction generally.—This section relates only to the power of the court in a case where a suit has been improperly brought, either on the equity or the law side of the court, and provides that the same be amended so as to have the pleadings conform to the proper practice. Waldo v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 654, 145 C. C. A. 540.

"The paramount idea carried in the act is that courts are established and maintained for the administration of justice, and not to furnish a forum chiefly for the exhibition of the skill of intellectual gladiators—sometimes forgetful of the rights of the parties litigant to have justice administered. So this act, just referred to, provides that if a party has brought his suit at law, whereas it should have been in equity, or vice versa, the cause may, upon application, be transferred to the proper side of the docket, law or equity, as the case may be, the pleadings properly reformed, and the cause proceeded with. Thus the delay or injustice which the courts were compelled to cause in numerous instances, . . . and many other cases, can be avoided." Webb v. Southern R. Co., (S. D. Ala. 1916) 235 Fed. 578.

Pre-existing actions begun before the passage of this section were affected by it. National Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 577, 143 C. C. A. 99, L. R. A. 1917A 336.

In the case of a suit instituted prior to the enactment of this section it was held that even if it authorized the transference of a cause from the law to the equity side of the court it could not be construed as relating back so as to defeat the jurisdiction of the state court if it had already been acquired. Waldo v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 654, 145 C. C. A. 540.

When transfer may be refused.—Where the question whether a suit should be on the law or equity side of the court is not important for the purpose of the decision, because the same result must be reached in either event, the cause will not be transferred from the side in which it is brought to the other side of the court. Palmer v. Doull Miller Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 309.

So where a case has been tried at law and a judgment rendered, although a court of equity had full jurisdiction in the matter, and the only effect of holding that the true jurisdiction was in equity would be to send the case back to be transferred to the equity side and heard over again by the same judge upon probably the same proofs, the jurisdiction of the court below, on the law side, will be sustained. National Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 577, 143 C. C. A. 99, L. R. A. 1917A 336.

And this section cannot be applied so as to permit a bill filed later and based upon a comparatively trifling incident of the situation to oust the jurisdiction of the law court and prevent a trial by jury. The main controversy being legal in its nature, orderly administration requires that it should be tried out in a court of law, which has first taken hold of it. Ingersoll Engineering, etc., Co. v. Crocker, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 844, 143 C. C. A. 242.

Under Equity Rule 22 a suit brought on the equity side of the court, on the alleged ground of inadequate remedy at law, where the plaintiff's bill shows, however, that the suit is merely to recover a money judgment for breach of a simple contract, should be transferred to the law docket on motion of the defendant; and a decree for the plaintiff was reversed with instructions so to transfer the case. Edward Hines Lumber Co. v. Bowers, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 782, 151 C. C. A. 632.

Where a case came up as an appeal in equity and it was contended that review should have been sought by writ of error it was held that this objection might be disregarded as merely formal and without substance. Sola v. Cintron, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 61, 150 C. C. A. 263. Section 4 of the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, mentioned in the foregoing case, is given ante, this volume, title JUDICIARY, p. 421.

Defense of fraudulent representations.—In an action of assumpsit to recover upon written memoranda by which the defendant ordered certain goods it is proper, under this section, for the defendant to rely, in his answer, upon fraudulent representations on the part of the plaintiff. Burroughs Adding Mach Co. v. Scandinavian-American Bank, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 239 Fed. 179.

A plaintiff in an action at law may have equitable relief on a replication to a defense set up in the defendant's answer; for example, where in an action for damages for personal injuries, the defendant pleads a release, the plaintiff may by replication set up fraud in obtaining the release and ask to have the release set aside. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Syas, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 561, 158 C. C. A. 531.

Equitable issues to be tried separately.—In an action at law for damages for personal injuries, where the defendant pleaded a release, and the plaintiff filed a replication praying that the release be rescinded for fraud, it was reversible error for the court to submit to the jury with the issue at law the issue of fraud in obtaining the release for an advisory verdict on the latter issue, the verdict on the legal issue being made contingent on the result of the advisory verdict. The equitable issue should have been first tried by the court and not submitted to the same jury. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Syas, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 561, 158 C. C. A. 531.

Review of judgment or decree.—In the case set forth in the last preceding paragraph, viz., Union Pac. R. Co. v. Syas, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 561, 158 C. C. A. 531, where the court, pursuant to the advisory verdict of the jury, set aside the release for fraud and rendered judgment on the verdict of the jury for damages, and the defendant brought up the case by writ of error and by appeal the court said that it had not adopted any rule as to how cases under Judicial Code, § 274b shall be reviewed, but in view of Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, § 4, 39 Stat. L. 727, ante, this volume, p. 421, "it would seem to be immaterial whether the case was brought here by appeal or writ of error."

In the absence of a rule of court regulating the method of procedure, where there was a verdict and judgment for the defendant in an action at law the Circuit Court of Appeals refused to dismiss plaintiff's appeal on the ground urged that he had mistaken his remedy, and held it to be unimportant whether the matters set up in an affirmative defense constituted an equitable defense or were properly tried and disposed of at law. Maine Northwestern Development Co. v. Northwestern Commercial Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 583, 153 C. C. A. 387.

Amendment of complaint.—Where it appeared that the alleged ground of jurisdiction in the court below was diversity of citizenship, and the plaintiff properly alleged the citizenship of the defendant in the complaint but neglected to allege his own citizenship, the court ruled that under this section the plaintiff would be permitted in the appellate court to file, within ten days, an amendment so as to show properly on the record diverse citizenship and jurisdiction Swayne v. Barsch, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 581, 141 C. C. A. 337.

This section does not prevent the granting of an injunction against the officers and members of a labor union restraining them from unlawfully causing, inducing, or in any way forwarding acts of violence violating the rights of a complainant as an interstate commerce and United States mail carrier, where such injunction in no way abridges any of the rights secured by this provision. Alaska Steamship Co. v. International Longshoremen's Ass'n, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 964.

JURIES

Vol. IV, p. 737, sec. 800.

Where under a state statute a juror must be a qualified elector of good moral character, every elector will be presumed to be of good moral character, unless the want of it is manifested by conviction of a disqualifying crime or is made to appear by evidence dehors the record. Christopoulou v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 788, 145 C. C. A. 98.

Where a grand juror was duly qualified when summoned, a subsequent loss of the property qualification as a voter, from which class jurors are selected under state statute, would not disqualify him from completing the duties of a grand juror. Such property qualification as a voter must be regarded as affecting a person's eligibility for selection as a juror, and not as prescribing a measure of his continuing capacity to serve. U. S. v. Gradwell, (D. C. R. I. 1915) 227 Fed. 243.

A grand juror is not disqualified from acting because of his conviction of a statutory misdemeanor which is not enumerated as a disqualifying crime under the laws of the state. Christopoulou v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 788, 145 C. C. A. 98.

Service as a petit juror in the state court does not work as a disqualification to serve as a petit juror in the federal court. Papernow v. Standard Oil Co., (C. C. R. I. 1915) 228 Fed. 399.

Vol. IV, p. 741, sec. 802.

Act constitutional.—Because the jurors were not drawn from the entire district but only from one division thereof did not invalidate a conviction. Ruthenberg v. U. S., (1918) 245 U. S. 480, 38 S. Ct. 168, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 414.

Vol. IV, p. 744, sec. 811.

Until discharged by the court, a grand jury continues to exist until the end of the term, even though it does not continue in session. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 227 Fed. 206.

And as long as the grand jury is in existence, it is unnecessary to order a new venire to issue to summon a new grand jury, under Judicial Code, § 284, 1912 Supp., p. 247. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 227 Fed. 206.

Vol. IV, p. 744, sec. 812.

Judicial Code, § 275, in 1912 Supp., p. 245, relating to qualifications and exemptions of jurors, is limited by the expression "subject to the provisions hereinafter contained." Section 286, 1912 Supp., p. 247, therefore must be read in connection with section 275, and as it deals specifically with the question of prior service, is exclusive of the provisions of the state statute on the same subject. Papernow v. New York Standard Oil Co., (D. C. R. I. 1915) 228 Fed. 399.

Vol. IV, p. 745, sec. 819.

Persons jointly indicted.—In Schwartzberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 348, 154 C. C. A. 228, fourteen defendants, who were jointly indicted and arraigned for a felony not treason or a capital offense, appeared by numerous counsel, who refused to unite or act jointly (presumably with the assent of their clients) in respect of choosing a jury. The trial judge announced that he would entertain one peremptory challenge for each defendant, or fourteen in all, with the result that every defendant had one challenge (if their apparent differences were pressed to their limit), but the "parties" defendant had collectively more challenges than the statute required. Thereupon some defendants peremptorily challenged more than once, and such efforts (not joined in by all) were disallowed. It was held that this proceeding gave no ground for complaint, as such defendants have always been regarded as one party, and especially has such been the practice in the second circuit for many years.

Vol. IV, p. 749, sec. 2.

Purpose of section.—The section makes it plain that Congress sought to eliminate political considerations, or at least minimize that consideration, for the commissioner is to be of the principal political party opposed to that to which the clerk belongs and "a well-known member" of that party. However, when it comes to the selection of names to place in the jury box, such names are to be placed therein by such officers alternately and "without reference to party affiliations"; that is, without reference to the political affiliations of the persons so selected for jury duty, if called upon to serve. U. S. v. Murphy, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 554.

Selection of names.—The selection of names to go in the jury box is to be made by the commissioner of jurors and by the clerk of the court, and no other person or official has the right to participate in such selection. Others may, of course, answer proper inquiries properly made to them, or either of them, and give information to these officials as to the character and fitness of men, but may not select, and no person interested should be permitted to suggest names. U. S. v. Murphy, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 554.

"It was not contemplated that the clerk and commissioner of jurors should visit and abide in the several counties from which jurors are to be selected for a sufficient length of time to familiarize themselves or become acquainted with the citizens subject to jury duty and competent to act as jurors, but that it was anticipated these officers, in performing their duties, would obtain information from various legitimate sources, including, undoubtedly, personal inquiry." U. S. v. Murphy, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 554.

"The restriction on the number of challenges allowed the defendants [Jud. Code, § 287, 1912 Supp., p. 248], especially where more than one defendant is on trial, emphasizes the idea that the names of jurors selected to be put in the box from which the panels of grand and petit jurors are to be drawn later for service at a term of court, and which panels are limited in number, should represent and call for men well qualified to serve who are fair and impartial, and who were fairly and impartially selected by the officers charged with the performance of that duty. Mere irregularities, which cannot be prejudicial to either party, have been quite generally held not to sustain a challenge to the array." U. S. v. Murphy, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 554.

The clerk and jury commissioner each has the right of selection of his names absolutely independent of the other. U. S. v. Murphy, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 554.

Apportionment.—It is not required by law or by any rule of court, in selecting lists of names of jurors for service in the United States courts, that the names selected and placed in the box be apportioned to the several towns of a county or to the several wards of a city in proportion to the persons residing in such towns and wards, respectively, subject to jury duty. U. S. v. Murphy, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 554.

Number of names.—The maximum number of names to go in the box is not limited by law or any rule of the court. U. S. v. Murphy, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 554.

KIDNAPPING

Vol. IV., p. 774, sec. 5526.

Peonage defined.—"In the case of Clyatt v. U. S., [197 U. S. 207, 25 S. Ct. 429, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 726] the supreme court affords us a clear definition of the term." Taylor v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 321, 156 C. C. A. 607, holding that under the circumstances of the case, the defendant was not guilty of violating this section, and that a person cannot be deemed guilty of peonage where he has held another in involuntary servitude for the purpose of having him comply with an agreement to work for a certain term.

"Returns . . . to a condition of peonage."—A defendant cannot be convicted of returning another to a condition of peonage where the latter had never been in that condition. Taylor v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 321, 156 C. C. A. 607.

Obtaining subsistence and transportation for enlistment.—In U. S. v. Buchanan, (N. D. Cal. 1917) 238 Fed. 877, the defendant was charged in the indictment with the offense of applying to his own use certain subsistence and supplies furnished and to be used for military service, the facts alleged being that he had declared upon an application blank furnished him by a recruiting officer that he had never applied for enlistment before, and thereby obtained board and lodging, and transportation for the purpose of enlistment, but was rejected because he had been dishonorably discharged from the army, and well knew that he was not eligible for re-enlistment. A demurrer to the indictment was sustained.

Vol. IV, p. 790, sec. 1.

Whether stealing postage stamps is a stealing of "property" and indictable under this section, or, on the other hand, is indictable only under section 109, PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 456, was expressly left undecided in Morgan v. Sylvester, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 886, 146 C. C. A. 82.

Cumulative sentences.—Where there was a conviction on both counts of an indictment charging in one count the burglarizing of a post office in violation of section 192, title PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., page 457, and in the other count the stealing certain property of the United States from and out of that post office, at the time, in violation of the text section, the two counts charged separate offenses, which were punishable separately by a cumulative sentence on each count. Morgan v. Sylvester, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 886, 146 C. C. A. 82, quoting from Morgan v. Devine, (1915) 237 U. S. 632, 35 S. Ct. 712, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1153 and citing "to the same effect," Ebeling v. Morgan, (1915) 237 U. S. 625, 35 S. Ct. 710, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1151, where the court said: "The better doctrine recognizes that, although the transactions may be in a sense continuous, the offenses are separate, and each complete in itself."

LIGHTS AND BUOYS

Vol. IV, p. 835, sec. 4676.

Marking wreck at request of owner.—Where the owner of a wrecked vessel in the Hudson river requested the lighthouse department to buoy the wreck and paid the usual charge for so doing, he was held to have complied with the provisions of section 15 of the Act of March 3, 1899, ch. 425, 30 Stat. L. 1112 (title RIVERS, HARBORS AND CANALS), requiring the owner of wrecked or sunken craft to immediately mark it with a buoy. And in so marking the wreck the lighthouse department acted not as the private agent of the owner, but in its sovereign capacity under this section, as agent for the whole public. The Plymouth, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 483, 140 C. C. A. 1.

LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNER'S LIABILITY

Vol. IV, p. 837, sec. 4281.

Passenger's baggage.—The provisions of this section respecting the liability of vessels "as carriers" do not apply to articles carried by a passenger as baggage. The Cretic, (D. C. Mass. 1914) 224 Fed. 216.

Vol. IV, p. 839, sec. 4283.

In general.—The provision for limiting the liability of the shipowner to the value of the vessel and the freight then earned was intended to encourage the investment of capital in such ventures. The American rule is that this value is to be determined at the end of the voyage on which the collision occurred and damage was done; that the methods pointed out in the statute and rules are not exclusive, but that, the libel having been filed, the admiralty court has jurisdiction to proceed to ascertain this value by procedure proper under the circumstances of the particular case, preferably, if possible, by appraisal or sale under order of the court. The principal object of the statute is to change the common-law liability, and restrict the liability of the shipowner to the value of the vessel at the termination of the voyage and the earned freight. The Ethelstan, (S. D. Fla. 1917) 246 Fed. 187.

Cases of personal injury and death.—This section applies to cases of personal injury and death, as well as to cases of loss or injury to property. The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 519; State v. Daggett, (1915) 87 Wash. 253, 151 Pac. 648, L. R. A. 1916A 446.

Negligence of agent.—A shipowner, who has provided a suitable person as his agent to inspect or provide for the proper equipment of the vessel, is not deprived of the benefit of the statute limiting liability by proof of negligence of such agent in failing to provide such equipment or to maintain it in good condition of which the owner had no knowledge or notice. The Alola, (E. D. Va. 1915) 228 Fed. 1006.

Negligence of superintendent.—Where the superintendent of the owner of a floating derrick or hoist failed to exercise a proper degree of care in directing the manner in which work was to be performed and in inspecting the equipment and appliances for doing such work, it was held that liability for the injury of an employee arose with the knowledge and privity of the owner. The Teddy, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 498.

A surrender upon a petition to limit liability at a date long after the liability was incurred, can only be allowed where the boat has not depreciated beyond ordinary wear and tear. In other words, if the owner surrenders the boat, or desires to substitute a bond for the same, the amount of the surrender must equal the fair value for the boat at the time when the liability was incurred. The owner of the boat has no right to limit his responsibility by surrendering the property, and at the same time use up that property to his own profit. The T. W. Wellington, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 235 Fed. 728. See The Capt. Jack, (D. C. Conn. 1909) 169 Fed. 455, wherein it was held that a petition to limit liability will be dismissed if the entire vessel is not surrendered.

Waiver.—The right secured to the shipowner by this section is not waived by a failure to assert it before a decree is entered against him. The Ethelstan, (S. D. Fla. 1917) 246 Fed. 187.

Vol. IV, p. 850, sec. 4285.

The effect of the proceedings to limit liability as provided for in this section is to halt all claimants against the vessel or its owner in every other tribunal except the one in which such proceedings are pending. But this is true only when the petitioner shall have transferred the vessel as she was at the end of the voyage on which the liability occurred, or in lieu of such transfer shall have furnished a stipulation for the amount of her value at the end of such voyage to be ascertained by a due appraisal caused to be made by the court. The American, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 853.

Time of transfer.—It has been held that a surrender upon a petition to limit liability, at a date long after the liability was incurred, could only be allowed where the boat had not depreciated beyond ordinary wear and tear. In other words, if the owner surrendered the boat, or desired to substitute a bond for the same the amount of the surrender must equal the fair value for the boat at the time when the liability was incurred. The Passaic, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 190 Fed. 644; The T. W. Wellington, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 235 Fed. 728.

The vessel must be transferred as the was at the end of the voyage on which the liability accrued. The Americana, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 853.

Vol. IV, p. 852, sec. 18.

Direct personal contracts.—A part owner of a vessel, who signs his firm's name to a charter party containing an express warranty of seaworthiness, is personally bound thereby, and, where sued for the loss of the cargo, occasioned by the unseaworthiness of the vessel, cannot, however blameless he may have been, claim the benefit of this section. Pendleton v. Benner Line, (1918) 246 U. S. 353, 38 S. Ct. 330, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 770, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 217 Fed. 497, 133 C. C. A. 349.

Death claims.—Following Richardson v. Harmon, (1911) 222 U. S. 96, 32 S. Ct. 27, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 110, the court held in The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 519, that the owner of the steamship may limit its liability for death claims and that such claims are embraced by the words "any and all debts and liabilities" of this section.

Vol. IV, p. 854, sec. 1.

Negligence in storage.—It is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section merely to give proper care, custody, and caution to the loading and stowage of cargo before sailing, but that duty continues throughout the voyage. The Skipton Castle, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 523, 156 C. C. A. 221, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1915) 223 Fed. 839.

Negligence of owner or servants.—Bills of lading cannot consistently, either with this section or with public policy or general principles of maritime law, stipulate for exemption from liability for losses resulting from the negligence of the owner or its servants. Gilchrist Transp. Co. v. Boston Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 716, 139 C. C. A. 246.

Vol. IV, p. 856, sec. 2.

Bill of lading as affecting statutory requirements.—The stipulation of a bill of lading will not be permitted to cut down the statutory requirements of this section. The Benjamin Noble, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 95, 156 C. C. A. 523.

Vol. IV, p. 857, sec. 3.

IN GENERAL (p. 857)
Exemption applicable only after voyage has commenced.—This section applies to a vessel only after the voyage has commenced, and cannot be invoked by an owner to relieve him from liability for loss of cargo through the careening and sinking of a vessel at the pier before she was fully loaded, due to the negligence of a watchman in failing to adjust her lines to permit her to drop with the tide. Ralli v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 286, 83 C. C. A. 290; Gilchrist Transp. Co. v. Boston Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 716, 739, 139 C. C. A. 246.

SEAWORTHY VESSEL (p. 860)

Affirmative evidence of seaworthiness.

—The Harter Act has no application to a case showing damage to cargo by seawater where there is no affirmative evidence showing that the vessel was seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, or even at a time approximately near its beginning. Such proof cannot be supplied by inference or presumption. Herman v. Compagnie Generale, etc., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 859, 155 C. C. A. 447.

Bad stowage.—The Harter Act will not relieve a vessel for bad stowage. Gulden v. Hiljos De Jose Taya, etc., (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 243 Fed. 780.

BURDEN OF PROOF (p. 863)

Seaworthy vessel.—The relief afforded by this section to shipowners is purely statutory, and in order for a shipowner to avail himself of the exemption from liability for errors in management, the burden is on him to prove affirmatively that the vessel was seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, or that due diligence had been used to make her so. The Governor Powers, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 243 Fed. 961.

Damage by sea water.—A carrier by water is charged with the burden of proving that damage to a cargo from sea water was occasioned by the perils of the sea within an exception in the bill of lading against dangers and accidents of the seas. Jamison v. New York, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 389.

MINERAL LANDS, MINES AND MINING

Vol. V, p. 4, sec. 2318.

Coal lands.—This section includes coal lands. Milner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 431, 143 C. C. A. 13, citing Mullan v. U. S., (1886) 118 U. S. 271, 6 S. Ct. 1041, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 170.

As to the effect of this statute qualifying a grant of lands to a state by enabling Act, see Milner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 431, 143 C. C. A. 13, distinguishing Sweet v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 421, 143 C. C. A. 3, wherein it was held that the grant of lands to Utah for school purposes was not a sale, and this section reserving mineral lands from sale was not applicable thereto.

Vol. V, p. 19, sec. 2324.

Record distinguished from location.—A location and its record are different things. The federal and some state statutes distinguish between them, the former even in authorizing local rules "governing the location" and "manner of recording." The statutory object is to protect and reward discoverers of mines. Discovery with intent to claim is the principal thing and vests an estate. The record is incidental machinery to secure to the discoverer his reward and to give notice to others. Clark-Montana Realty Co. v. Butte, etc., Copper Co., (D. C. Mont. 1916) 233 Fed. 547.

Injunction.—A temporary injunction lies to suspend forfeiture proceedings against delinquent co-owners of mining claims until the questions involved can be determined upon their merits. Pack v. Thompson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 635, 641, 642, 643, 645, 139 C. C. A. 181, 187, 188, 189, 191; Pack v. Carter, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 638, 139 C. C. A. 184.

Mining claims, how acquired.—Congress has provided how a mining claim can be acquired. In general, it may be acquired by a discovery of mineral, particularly of gold, silver, or copper, and the like, upon the public lands, and by staking the same off or marking it upon the ground, so that the boundaries may be plainly designated and readily ascertained. The right of continuous occupation may be maintained by keeping up the assessment work prescribed by law, and this without incurring the obligation toward the government of buying and paying for the land. When an individual entitled to the benefit of the statute has made location in accordance therewith, and gone into possession, he is said to be the owner and in possession of the mining claim thus located. Such a claim, when perfected, is declared to be "property in the highest sense of that term, which may be bought, sold, and conveyed, and will pass by descent." Trinity Gold Dredging etc., Co. v. Beaudry, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 739, 139 C. C. A. 269.

Vol. V, p. 47. [Act of Feb. 11, 1897.]

Purpose of Act.—By this Act Congress intentionally limited the right of entry upon, and location of, oil lands to such lands as were “chiefly valuable therefor,” i. e., lands chiefly valuable for oil. Obviously, the government, as sovereign proprietor, could say what lands, if any, might be entered and located as for petroleum. It could if it saw fit deny the right to enter upon any such lands, and for the same reason could limit the lands upon which entry might lawfully be made. In this view of the situation, as to any lands not within the category specified in the statute, there is no invitation or authorization given to enter them, and in consequence no right can be obtained, as against the government, by so doing. U. S. v. McCutcheon, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 238 Fed. 575.

Contrasted with R. S. sec. 2319.—The Act of 1897 gives the right to enter on “lands” which are “chiefly valuable” for oil. R. S. sec. 2319, vol. V, p. 4, which has to do with the general right of the citizen to exploit the public mineral lands, recites that “all valuable mineral deposits” are declared open to exploration and purchase, and the lands in which they are found to occupation and purchase, etc. In other words, as to lodes and placers the right is given to explore and purchase “valuable mineral deposits” and “the lands in which they are found;” but with respect to petroleum the right is given only to enter and obtain patent to lands which not only contain petroleum but which are “chiefly valuable therefor.” In one case the value of the “deposits” is the criterion, and in the other, it is the value of the land.

U. S. v. McCutchen, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 238 Fed. 575.

“What discovery will suffice to meet the requirements under the Act of 1897? Though under that Act entry and patent were to be obtained pursuant to the placer mineral laws, yet it must be remembered that upon location and ‘discovery’ followed or accompanied by the expenditure of $500, and upon application, patent from the government was to follow. R. S. sec. 2325 [vol. V, p. 31]. In this behalf I can see no escape from the conclusion that as against the government, if the defendant had made such a location of, and ‘discovery’ upon, the land in question, as to invest them with a right of property therein, they had made such location and ‘discovery’ as to entitle them, as a matter of law and of right to a patent. Conversely if they had made no such ‘discovery’ as to entitle them to a patent as against the government, they had made no such ‘discovery’ as to vest them with rights in and to the property.” U. S. v. McCutchen, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 238 Fed. 575, citing McLemore v. Express Oil Co., (1910) 158 Cal. 559, 112 Pac. 59, 139 A. S. R. 147.

Vol. V, p. 54, sec. 2345.

Reservation of mineral lands.—While it has been the general practice of the United States to reserve mineral lands from homesteads, pre-emptions, sales and grants to railroad companies, an examination of the grants of lands to states for school purposes demonstrates the fact that it has been the practice of Congress to determine and declare by legislative act, in each case, and not by any settled public policy, whether or not mineral lands shall be reserved from the grant. Sweet v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 421, 143 C. C. A. 3.

MONEY PAID INTO COURT

Vol. V, p. 70, sec. 995.

Default of recognizance.—Where pending a judgment of default of recognizance in a criminal case and scire facias proceedings the sureties pay money to the clerk it should be deposited in accordance with the terms of this section. U. S. v. Smart, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 978, 150 C. C. A. 628.

Vol. V, p. 71, sec. 5504.

Moneys paid into court by government in condemnation proceedings.—In U. S.

Conway Lumber Co., (D. C. N. H. 1916) 234 Fed. 961, the facts showed that large sums of money having been paid into court by the government as compensation for lands taken, and controversies having arisen as to what parties were entitled to the damages awarded, it was ordered that certain sums should be held in abeyance to await the disposition of questions arising from conflicting claims; and, the parties interested having expressly stipulated to the end that such sums might be withdrawn from the registry of the court and deposited in certain other national banks in order that interest should accrue while the funds were held in abeyance, the clerk, under such stipulations and orders thereon, withdrew the funds and deposited the same in certain specially designated national banks, other than the generally designated depository of the United States. It was held that the act of the clerk was not in violation of this section.

NATIONAL BANKS

Vol. V, p. 82, sec. 5136.

The cashier may transfer the paper of the bank without a resolution of the board of directors. Memphis Cotton Oil Co. v. Gist, (Tex. Civ. App. 1915) 179 S. W. 1090.

Vol. V, p. 91, sec. 5.

Waiver of withdrawal.—Where a shareholder gave notice, within the thirty days specified in the statute, of his desire to withdraw from the association, but in the meanwhile the bank declared a dividend from its profits, the greater part of which was earned prior to the expiration of its original charter, and subsequently to giving said notice the shareholder demanded and received said dividend, the previous withdrawal was thereby waived, and he ceased to have a right to the appraisal of his shares so that they should become a debt of the bank to him. Smith v. Phillips Nat. Bank, (1915) 114 Me. 297, 96 Atl. 217.

Vol. V, p. 93, sec. 5137.

The object of the restrictions was obviously threefold. It was to keep the capital of the bank flowing in daily channels of commerce; to deter it from engaging in hazardous real estate speculations; and to prevent the accumulations of large masses of such property in their hands, to be held, as it were, in mortmain. The intent, not the letter of the statute, constitutes the law. Nashville Fourth Nat. Bank v. Stahlman, (1915) 132 Tenn. 367, 178 S. W. 942, L. R. A. 1916A 568.

Real estate for banking house.—A national bank may rent banking rooms in a building to be constructed under an agreement to purchase of the building corporation some of its stock. And an agreement with the promoter by which he and his wife have an option to purchase the stock is valid. Nashville Fourth Nat. Bank v. Stahlman, (1915) 132 Tenn. 367, 178 S. W. 942, L. R. A. 1916A 568.

Purchase of business.—Conceding that a national bank cannot buy or deal in real estate as a means of investing its funds, there is no question that it can take title to such property as a means of saving itself from apprehended loss caused by a mistaken or ill-advised loan.

Moreover it may purchase a business for the same reason. Kennewick First Nat. Bank v. Conway, (1915) 87 Wash. 506, 151 Pac. 1129.

Vol. V, p. 109, sec. 5153.

Liability of bank to government.—In National Bank of Commerce v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 679, 140 C. C. A. 219, affirming judgment for the plaintiff in an action by the United States against a national bank depository to recover payments by the bank on checks drawn by an examiner of surveys and special disbursing agent for the Interior Department and payable to fictitious payees with forged indorsements of said examiner and agent, the court said: "The very simple and obviously reasonable and common-sense views of the situation is that the bank was the depository of public moneys, to be drawn upon by the government or its authorized agent for public use, and it can make no sort of difference whether the bank is regarded as a debtor to the government to the amount of such moneys so deposited, or as holding the same in specie subject to the government's check or demand. The funds are nevertheless the funds of the government. Nor can it make any difference whether they are drawn out by the fraudulent practices of the government's agent, or paid out without lawful warrant by the bank; the liability of either to reimburse the government is just the same. While the bank may not be, and is not, liable criminally, it is liable civilly."

Vol. V, p. 133, sec. 5198.

II. PAYMENT OF USURY (p. 133)

Extension of renewal notes.—"There is a line of cases of actions, on renewal obligations for balance left due of an originally usurious debt after application of payments sufficient in amount to pay off and discharge all of the usury, which hold that in such situation the renewal obligation is purged of the usury and there may be recovery upon it in suits by the creditor against the debtor. . . . The rule of these authorities, as noted, is applied even in cases of suits by the creditor on the executory contract in question. But they were not controlled by such a statute as said section 5198 with its phraseology with respect to the forfeiture of 'the entire interest,' and hence we do not consider that such rule would be applicable to a suit by a national bank on the executory obligation. But we do think that this rule should apply to suits by the debtor to recover the penalty provided by the statute with respect to leaving undisturbed all payments of interest actually made and applied is in accordance with the principle underlying such rule." Baker v. Lynchburg Nat. Bank, (1917) 120 Va. 208, 91 S. E. 157.

Usurious discount.—Usury is not paid within the meaning of the section where, on the simple discount of a note or bill at a usurious rate, the bank pays over the proceeds less the discount to the transferrer or borrower or credits such proceeds on his account. In such case usury is not paid until the note is paid or a judgment is entered therefor, for up to such time there is a locus penitentiae for the party charging the excessive interest. Baker v. Lynchburg Nat. Bank, (1917) 120 Va. 208, 91 S. E. 157.

IV. PENALTY (p. 136)

Parties.—Where a note containing usurious interest is transferred and indorsed to a third party by the nominal payee, and the borrower pays the note in full to such third party, his right of action to recover double the amount of interest paid, as provided by section 5198, is against the party who took and received such interest, and the payee is not a necessary party defendant. Wellston First Nat. Bank v. Sensebaugh, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 455.

Limitation of action.—"There is no limitation of time within which the defense given by the statute may be made by the debtor when sued by the bank. If he pleads and proves that the debt agreed to be paid is usurious, all interest on such debt, legal as well as illegal, is forfeited, and there can be no judgment rendered except for the principal only sued for." Baker v. Lynchburg Nat. Bank, (1917) 120 Va. 208, 91 S. C. 157.

Pleading.—A petition against a national bank, filed for the recovery of alleged usurious interest, should contain an allegation that the taking and receiving of the same was knowingly done, or an allegation to an equivalent effect, and where such an averment is lacking it is error to overrule a general demurrer thereto. Temple Nat. Bank v. Johnson, (Okla. 1916) 161 Pac. 535.

In an action to recover twice the amount of interest paid on a usurious note, where a copy of the note is attached to the petition, and the date thereof, amount of interest charged, and consideration both on its face and in fact, are shown, and it is further alleged that the interest charged was in excess of the legal rate, and that the defendant well knew that said interest charged was in excess of the legal rate, and that defendant well knew that said interest so charged by defendant and paid by plaintiff was corrupt and unlawful, notwithstanding which defendant knowingly and unlawfully received the same of the plaintiff, a cause of action is sufficiently stated, as against a demurrer thereto. Wellston First Nat. Bank v. Sensebaugh, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 455.

It is not necessary to allege and prove a demand for the return of the usury claimed. Pauls Valley Nat. Bank v. Mitchell, (Okla. 1916) 154 Pac. 1188; Wellston First Nat. Bank v. Green, (Okla. 1916) 155 Pac. 502; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Phillips, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 920.

Scienter.—To entitle the plaintiff to recover for usurious interest paid, it must be shown by a preponderance of the evidence "that the taking, receiving, reserving, or charging" of interest greater than allowed by the preceding section, was knowingly done. Soper First Nat. Bank v. Beecher, (Okla. 1916) 161 Pac. 327.

Where the facts are undisputed and show a simple loan of money, upon which a sum is collected as interest in amount greatly in excess of that allowed by law, there being no other contracts or transactions involved, and the whole matter being carried on by one of the officers of the defendant bank, the trial court is justified in assuming that the collecting of such usurious interest was knowingly done, and in peremptorily charging the jury to return a verdict for the plaintiff. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Phillips, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 920.

Instruction.—In Wellston First Nat. Bank v. Sensebaugh, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 455, it was held that the trial court did not err in refusing to give an instruction that the action was controlled by the federal statute, and not by the laws of the state of Oklahoma, relating to usury, where the requirements of the federal statute, applicable to the issues, were fully and correctly given in the instructions.

An instruction of the court directing a verdict to be rendered for the plaintiff in an amount in excess of the amount shown by the evidence, that the plaintiff is entitled to recover, is prejudicial error. Soper First Nat. Bank v. Beecher, (Okla. 1916) 161 Pac. 327.

V. STATUTORY REMEDY EXCLUSIVE (p. 138)

State statutes relating to usury, and prescribing penalties for the charging, reserving, or taking of usury, have no application to negotiable instruments held by national banks. Reese v. Colquitt Nat. Bank, (1913) 12 Ga. App. 472, 77 S. E. 320; Pauls Valley Nat. Bank v. Mitchell, (Okla. 1916) 154 Pac. 1188; Wellston First Nat. Bank v. Green, (Okla. 1916) 155 Pac. 502.

Vol. V, p. 143, sec. 5205.

Stock purchased from an officer of the bank through fraudulent misrepresentation is nevertheless liable to assessment. Ryan v. Mt. Vernon Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 429, 140 C. C. A. 123.

Vol. V, p. 145, sec. 5209.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 146)

Construction of section.—This statute "creates and defines several distinct offenses, probably not less than nine;" and though the section terms them misdemeanors it has been held that they are all felonies, involving as they do imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of years. Sheridan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 305, 149 C. C. A. 437.

II. EMBEZZLEMENT (p. 147)

The receiver of a national bank is not an "agent" within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Weitzel, (1918) 246 U. S. 533, 38 S. Ct. 381, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 872.

III. ABSTRACTING FUNDS, ETC., (p. 147)

Elements of offense.—In Cummins v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 844, 147 C. C. A. 38, wherein it appeared that one Cummins was convicted in the court below of aiding and abetting a clerk of national bank to violate section 5209, by abstracting therefrom without payment certain drafts and attached bills of lading, etc., the court said: "This statute expressly makes the intent of the bank clerk to injure or defraud or deceive and the like intent of the person aiding or abetting him an essential element of the offense."

Sufficiency of indictment.—The indictment in Sheridan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 305, 149 C. C. A. 437, was held sufficient for abstraction of a general deposit.

IV. MISAPPLICATION OF FUNDS, ETC. (p. 148)

Indictment.—In Stout v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 799, 142 C. C. A. 323, the appellant urged that the fifth count of the indictment under which alone conviction was had did not charge a public offense. But the court said: "We think it does. In the proximity of words, there is plainly discernible the substance of a charge that the accused, whilst president of the bank and by use of the authority of his position, loaned its funds to the mill company, which was known by him to be hopelessly insolvent, not so known to the bank or its directors, and under circumstances naturally leading to the loss of the money loaned, and so resulting—all with intent to injure and defraud the bank. This, with the details set forth, sufficiently states an offense under the statute."

VI. FALSE ENTRIES (p. 150)

Who liable.—The receiver of a national bank is not an "agent" within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Weitzel, (1918) 246 U. S. 533, 38 S. Ct. 381, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 872.

Issuing certificate of deposit—Indictment.—In Simpson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 940, 144 C. C. A. 222, an indictment charged that, on the 27th day of March, 1913, at Caldwell, in the county of Canyon and state of Idaho, one S. D. Simpson, cashier of a national bank association known as the American National Bank of Caldwell, did wilfully, unlawfully, and feloniously, without authority from the directors of said association, and with intent to injure and defraud said association, issue and put forth a certain certificate of deposit drawn upon said association in the sum of $2,500, therein and thereby certifying that there had been deposited by one W. G. Simpson in and with said association the sum of $2,500, whereas in truth and in fact the said W. G. Simpson, to whom said certificate of deposit was so issued and put forth, did not have at the time said certificate of deposit was so issued and put forth, on deposit with said association an amount of money equal to the amount then and there specified in such certificate, or any amount or sum of money whatsoever, as he, the said W. G. Simpson, then and there well knew. It was then further charged that the said W. G. Simpson did, at the time and place aforesaid, unlawfully and feloniously and with the intent to injure and defraud the said association, and without authority from the directors, aid, abet, incite, counsel, and procure the said S. D. Simpson as such cashier to wilfully, unlawfully, and feloniously, and with the intent aforesaid issue and put forth the said certificate of deposit in manner and form aforesaid, he, the said W. G. Simpson, then and there well knowing that he did not have the said sum of $2,500 or any other sum on deposit with said association. This indictment was held good on demurrer. It was further held that a refusal of the court to admit testimony of a ratification by the directors of the issuance of the certificate of deposit was not error.

VII. AIDERS AND ABETTORS (p. 152)

Venue.—An aider and abettor may be prosecuted in any court having jurisdiction of the principal. Hoss v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 328, 146 C. C. A. 376.

Vol. V, p. 152, sec. 5211.

Contents of report.—While it is not expressly required that these reports should contain a true statement of the condition of the association yet by necessary implication, such is the character of the statement required to be made, and by the like implication the making and publishing of a false report is prohibited. Jones Nat. Bank v. Yates, (1916) 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788, reversing on another question (1913) 93 Neb. 121, 139 N. W. 844, 1135.

Liability for false reports.—Bank officers making such false reports are liable for losses resulting to persons who, in reliance upon such reports, are induced to deposit funds in the bank. Jones Nat. Bank v. Yates, (1916) 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788, reversing (1913) 93 Neb. 121, 139 N. W. 844, 1135.

Vol. V, p. 157, sec. 5219.I. LIMIT OF STATE TAXATION (p. 157)

Shares of stock in a federal reserve bank owned by a national bank are taxable under this section. Cincinnati First Nat. Bank v. Durr, (S. D. Ohio 1917) 246 Fed. 163.

Taxation of shares of state bank owned by a national bank is permitted. California Bank, etc. v. Roberts, (1916) 173 Cal. 398, 160 Pac. 225.

II. THE RULE AS TO DISCRIMINATION (p. 159)

Different systems or method of taxation.—The language of the statute clearly prohibits discrimination against shareholders in national banks and in favor of the shareholders of competing institutions, but it does not require that the scheme of taxation shall be so arranged that the burden shall fall upon each and every shareholder alike, without distinction arising from circumstances personal to the individual. And a state is not obliged to apply the same system to the taxation of national banks that it uses in the taxation of other property, provided no injustice, inequality or unfriendly discrimination is inflicted upon them. A. J. Tower Co. v. Com., (1916) 223 Mass. 371, 111 N. E. 966.

III. EXEMPTIONS AND DEDUCTIONS (p. 163)

State bonds.—The statutory rule that the rate of taxation upon the shares in a national bank should be the same or not greater than upon the moneyed capital of the individual citizen which is liable to taxation, was not intended to cut off the power of the legislature to exempt bonds of the state from taxation. And this exemption extends to shares of stock in a bank holding such bonds, and entitles the individual shareholders to deduct from the value of their shares that proportion of the value invested in the bonds. In re Chickasha First Nat. Bank, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 469, L. R. A. 1917B 294.

Vol. V, p. 166, sec. 5220.

Action by creditor against bank in liquidation—statute of limitations.—Since a national bank which has gone into voluntary liquidation has not terminated its existence or ceased to be a corporate entity, an action by a creditor against a national bank in liquidation is not controlled by a state statute of limitations limiting the right to sue a corporation to three years after its dissolution. Standard Trust Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 303, 153 C. C. A. 229, where the court said: "True, it may not longer engage in the banking business or otherwise exercise its customary functions, but it remains nevertheless a corporation capable of suing and being sued."

The duty of liquidating agent and the rights of creditors are analogous to those of a receiver appointed by the comptroller of the currency. By R. S. sec. 5236, the comptroller is required to make a ratable dividend of the money paid to him, after providing for the redemption of the notes of the bank, on all such claims as may have been proved to his satisfaction, or adjudicated in a court of competent jurisdiction, etc. So where a bank went into liquidation under the text R. S. sec. 5220, and in an action in a state court, against the bank by a creditor, with service of summons on the liquidator, the creditor recovered judgment, and docketed the same as a lien under the state statute, and on a subsequent creditor's bill in the federal court by another creditor a receiver was appointed to whom the liquidator, pursuant to an order of said federal court, turned over all the property of the bank in his hands, it was held that the judgment creditor in the first mentioned action had acquired no lien upon such property by the prior docketing of his judgment, and that "the only effect of the judgment was to fix the amount of the debt." Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Lillington Nat. Bank, (E. D. N. C. 1916) 231 Fed. 556.

Vol. V, p. 170, sec. 5234.ENFORCEMENT OF LIABILITY OF SHAREHOLDERS (p. 173)

Withdrawal of assessment.—An assessment made by the Comptroller of the Currency upon the shareholders in an insolvent national bank may be withdrawn by him before it is paid, or when it is partly paid, if he shall conclude that further payment is not necessary, and there is no prescribed form in which such action shall be taken. Karbly v. Springfield Sav. Inst., (1917) 245 U. S. 330, 38 S. Ct. 88, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 326.

Vol. V, p. 180, sec. 5239.

Common-law liability of director—In general.—In Chesbrough v. Woodworth, (1917) 244 U. S. 72, 37 S. Ct. 579, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1000, the court said: "This section was considered in Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 179, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002, 1014, 27 S. Ct. 638, and it was held that the rule expressed by it is exclusive and precludes a common-law liability for fraud and deceit."

But in Williams v. Brady, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 232 Fed. 740, replying to the contention that there is no common-law liability of a director of a national bank, the court said: "The proposition seems to be based upon counsel's misconception of what was held and said by the Supreme Court in Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, [1907] 206 U. S. 158, 27 S. Ct. 638, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002. I cannot gather anything from the opinion in that case which would warrant such a construction, but, on the other hand, it appears to me very clear that the court recognized that there is a liability on the part of national bank directors for failure to perform the duty which the general principles of the law cast upon them when they become directors, distinct from and in addition to the duties and liabilities imposed by the statute. . . . That case simply decided that the National Bank Act (Act June 3, 1864, ch. 106, 13 Stat. L. 99) imposes upon directors of national banks duties which did not rest upon them at common law, and that section 5239 affords the exclusive rule by which to measure the right to recover damages, based upon a loss resulting solely from the violation of such duties. The same question as is here presented was raised in Allen v. Luke, 163 Fed. 1018 (C. C. Mass. 1908), and was decided adversely to defendant's contention; Judge Lowell entertaining the same view of Yates v. Jones National Bank as is here expressed. That there exists a liability on the part of national bank directors for failure to perform the duty imposed upon them by the general principles of the law, irrespective of the statute, is, I think, also clear from Briggs v. Spaulding, [1891] 141 U. S. 132, 11 S. Ct. 924, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 662, where the measure of such duty is defined. See, also, Rankin v. Cooper, 149 Fed. 1010 (W. D. Ark. 1907)." And see also Jones Nat. Bank v. Yates, (1916) 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788; Freeman v. Jackson, (N. D. Ga. 1915) 227 Fed. 688; Bates v. Dresser, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 772.

"The statutory liability of directors of national banks, as provided in section 5239, is undoubtedly the exclusive rule by which to measure the right to recover damages from directors based upon a loss alleged to have resulted solely from violation by such directors of a duty expressly imposed upon them by a provision of the National Banking Act. This was directly decided in Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, (1907) 206 U. S. 158, 27 S. Ct. 638, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002, and is approvingly referred to in Thomas v. Taylor, (1912) 224 U. S. 73, 32 S. Ct. 403, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 673. But in the former case the Supreme Court was very careful not to announce any rule whereby the law will relieve directors who are the active officers of the bank, and who knowingly and deliberately and repeatedly commit acts of such negligent management that the result has forced the bank into liquidation." McCormick v. King, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 737, 154 C. C. A. 439.

Survival of action.—A common-law right of action against national bank directors to recover for losses resulting from the negligent discharge of their duties survives against the personal representatives of deceased directors. Williams v. Brady, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 232 Fed. 740. See also Bates v. Dresser, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 772.

Jurisdiction of suit.—Judicial Code, § 24, par. sixteenth (see 1912 Supp., p. 140), gives jurisdiction to United States District Courts, regardless of the sum or value of the matter in controversy, of all "cases for winding up the affairs" of any national banking association. In Bates v. Dresser, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 772, a suit in equity by a national bank receiver, the plaintiff's claim of a right to recover was based upon the ground that the defendants, as president and directors of the bank, were bound to use due care and diligence in the management and supervision of its affairs, and that, through their negligence in this respect, they failed to discover the defalcations of the bank's bookkeeper in season to prevent the whole or any part of the losses which the bank sustained during the three years and three months that his speculations were going on. The court said: "As there is no diversity of citizenship, and the ground of action is for a breach of their duties as directors at common law and in equity, federal jurisdiction depends upon the fact that the proceeding is brought by a receiver of a national bank in the course of winding up its affairs and is sanctioned by section 24, paragraph 16."

Pleading.—In Williams v. Brady, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 232 Fed. 740, it was held that the bill by a national bank receiver sufficiently charged liability, as against a motion to dismiss.

Statutory liability of directors—Care required in management.—In Bailey v. Babcock, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 241 Fed. 501, a bill in equity by a national bank receiver to enforce personal liability of the bank's directors for alleged misconduct and mismanagement, the court said: "The illegal acts charged against the defendants fall into two classes: First, those which are claimed to be violations of the National Bank Acts; and, second, those which are alleged to constitute a breach of duty by the directors as agents of the bank, under the common law. It is entirely clear under the authorities that a different measure of liability must be applied in the two cases. In the former the duty imposed is that enjoined by the statute; and, where a statute creates a duty and prescribes a penalty for nonperformance, the rule provided in the statute is the exclusive test of liability."

"Knowingly violate, etc."—In Bailey v. Babcock, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 241 Fed. 501, speaking of Thomas v. Taylor, (1912) 224 U. S. 73, 32 S. Ct. 403, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 673, the court said: "In that case the comptroller of the currency had given notice to the directors of a national bank to collect or charge off certain assets as doubtful. In disregard of this notice, a statement was made representing the assets to be good, and it was held that the directors had disregarded the direction of the officers appointed by the law to examine the affairs of the bank, whose directions must be observed, and that a violation is in effect intentional, when one deliberately refuses to examine that which it is his duty to examine. This case was again before the Supreme Court ([1916] 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788), and the court affirmed again that the test of liability was not negligence, but the fact that the act was violated knowingly. . . . It is clear, therefore, that the words of the statute 'knowingly violate, or knowingly permit to be violated,' still stand as the test of civil liability. These words are not obscure or of doubtful meaning, and must be given effect in applying the statute."

Ultra vires transaction.—In Bailey v. Babcock, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 241 Fed. 501, the plaintiffs sought to charge the defendant directors with liability for losses resulting from an alleged ultra vires investment. But after reviewing the evidence the bill was dismissed.

False reports to comptroller of currency.—Directors incurred personal liability to unpaid depositors for damages attributable to false representations of the bank's condition in official reports made to the comptroller of the currency and published pursuant to R. S. sec. 5211, where such directors knew that said representations were false when they attested said reports, or with such knowledge otherwise participated in or assented to the making and publication of said reports. Jones Nat. Bank v. Yates, (1916) 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788 (reversing (1913) 93 Neb. 121, 139 N. W. 844, 1135) holding that judgments for the plaintiff were supported by substantial evidence, the court also saying: "Whether this or that director attested a particular report is not controlling upon the question of assent. The official reports required by law are the reports of the bank, and not simply of those signing and attesting."

"In Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, [1907] 206 U. S. 179, 27 S. Ct. 638, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002, . . . the Supreme Court of Nebraska, affirming the decision of a state court, had held the directors of a national bank liable for making false statements to the comptroller of the currency. It had held that the means of information were accessible to them, and whether the attesting directors possessed knowledge of the falsity of the report was wholly immaterial. The judgment of the court below was reversed, on the sole ground that it did not appear that the violation in question was intentional." Bailey v. Babcock, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 241 Fed. 501.

Charging usurious interest.—In a suit to charge the directors with personal liability it was immaterial that they, on behalf of the bank, charged usurious interest on a loan where there was no evidence whatever that any damages were sustained thereby. Bailey v. Babcock, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 241 Fed. 501.

Form of remedy.—A receiver of a national bank may maintain a bill in equity against directors for an accounting and for recovery for losses sustained by creditors and shareholders as a result of the defendants' misconduct within this section. Dudley v. Hawkins, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 239 Fed. 386. See also for such bills Freeman v. Jackson, (N. D. Ga. 1915) 227 Fed. 688; Bates v. Dresses, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 772; Williams v. Brady, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 232 Fed. 740; Bailey v. Babcock, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 241 Fed. 501; McCormick v. King, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 737, 154 C. C. A. 439.

Venue.—A joint suit against directors for their joint negligence and misconduct where the defendants reside in different federal districts in the same state may be brought in either district as provided in Judicial Code, § 52, in title JUDICIARY, 1912 Supp., p. 153. Dudley v. Hawkins, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 239 Fed. 386.

State courts have jurisdiction of suits against directors to enforce their personal liability for damages as provided in this section. Jones Nat. Bank v. Yates, (1916) 240 U. S. 541, 36 S. Ct. 429, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 788.

Suit by receiver.—In Williams v. Brady, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 232 Fed. 740, the court sustained a bill in equity by a national bank receiver to enforce the liability of directors under this section. See also Freeman v. Jackson, (N. D. Ga. 1915) 227 Fed. 688, 697.

Pleading.—In Williams v. Brady, (D. C. N. J. 1916) 232 Fed. 740, it was held that a receiver's bill against certain directors sufficiently alleged a common-law liability for losses resulting from the defendants' wilful and continued failure to attend meetings of the board of directors.

In Dudley v. Hawkins, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 239 Fed. 386, a bill in equity by a national bank receiver against directors of the bank, for an accounting and for recovery of losses sustained by creditors and shareholders, a motion to dismiss, which was in substance a demurrer on several grounds, was denied.

Vol. V, p. 196, sec. 5198.

Suit to enforce personal liability of directors.—A federal question is involved, giving a federal District Court jurisdiction, without regard to citizenship, in an action to enforce the personal liability of directors in a national bank, under R. S. sec. 5239, for the damages suffered by one who has purchased capital stock in such bank in reliance upon false reports of the bank's financial condition to the comptroller of the currency, attested by them, and upon the declaration of dividends out of capital instead of out of net profits, assented to by them. Chesbrough v. Woodworth, (1917) 244 U. S. 72, 37 S. Ct. 579, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1000, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 195 Fed. 875, 116 C. C. A. 465, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 912, 137 C. C. A. 482.

Paragraph (k) is constitutional.—Bay City First Nat. Bank v. Fellows, (1917) 244 U. S. 416, 37 S. Ct. 734, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1233, L. R. A. 1918C 283, reversing (1916) 192 Mich. 640, 159 N. W. 335. See contra, People v. Brady, (1915) 271 Ill. 100, 110 N. E. 864, Ann. Cas. 1917C 1093.

Validity of state statute affecting administrators, etc.—A state statute providing that "no trust company, loan and trust company, loan and banking company, bank or banking company, or similar corporation, shall hereafter be appointed administrator of an estate, executor under a will, or guardian or conservator of the person or property of another," is valid and effective notwithstanding paragraph k and notwithstanding the fact that it was enacted subsequently to the Federal Reserve Act. Woodbury's Appeal, (N. H. 1915) 96 Atl. 299.

NATURALIZATION

Vol. V, p. 200.

Naturalization of aliens in navy or marine corps, see NAVY, post, p. 1347.

Vol. V, p. 207, sec. 2169.

History of section.—This section originally formed part of the Naturalization Act of 1870 as amended in 1875. In re Mallari, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 239 Fed. 416.

This section was not repealed by implication by Naturalization Act of June 29, 1906, 1909 Supp., p. 365. In re Mallari, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 239 Fed. 416.

"Aliens."—Until the passage of Act of June 29, 1906, § 30, 1909 Supp., p. 379, only persons described in this section could be naturalized. R. S. sec. 2169, extended the benefit of the naturalization laws only to aliens, but said section 30 of the Act of June 29, 1906, broadened the laws to include persons owing allegiance to the United States, it being aimed at persons from Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands who are not aliens.

In re Mallari, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 239 Fed. 416.

Filipino.—In the case of In re Lampitoe, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 382, the facts were stated as follows: The petitioner was the son of a Filipino mother and of a father whose mother was a Filipino and whose father was a full-blooded Spaniard, resident in Manila. He had served one full term of enlistment in the United States Navy and was at the time of the proceeding serving another. He was in every way qualified for citizenship, unless his race prevented. On these facts the court said: "The case falls exactly within In re Alverto, [E. D. Pa. 1912] 198 Fed. 688, and needs no other consideration. There may be doubt about such cases as In re Camille, [C. C. Ore. 1880] 6 Fed. 256, or In re Knight, [E. D. N. Y. 1909] 171 Fed. 299; but where the Malay blood predominates it would be a perversion of language to say that the descendant is a 'white person,' certainly any white ancestor, no matter how remote, does not make all his descendants white."

This section modified (by construction) so as to admit Filipinos to citizenship, see notes to section 30 of Act of June 29, 1906, ch. 3592, infra, p. 1346.

Half-breed Filipino.—One whose father was a Spaniard and his mother a Filipino is not a "white" person as the term is used in this section. In re Rallos, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 686.

Petition by alien enemy—"At the time of his application."—Where a subject of the Emperor of Germany filed his petition for naturalization Jan. 11, 1917, and the application came up for hearing on April 14, 1917, the Congressional resolution declaring a condition of war with Germany having been passed April 6, 1917, the "hearing on the application" was "deferred until the termination of the war, or until further order of the court." In re Duns, (W. D. Wash. 1917) 245 Fed. 813. Similarly in In re Haas, (N. D. Tex. (1917) 242 Fed. 739; In re Jonasson, (D. C. Md. (1917) 241 Fed. 723; and in Ex p. Borchardt, (E. D. S. C. 1917) 242 Fed. 1006, the petition of the applicant was "refused, but without prejudice to him to renew his application after the conclusion of peace between the United States and Germany." And petitions were also denied in In re Naturalization of Germany Subjects, (E. D. Wis. 1917) 242 Fed. 971. Contra, In re Nannanga, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 242 Fed. 737, and In re Kreuter, (S. D. A man born in 1882 in Schleswig was, after April 6, 1917, an alien enemy. In re Jonasson, (D. C. Md. 1917) 241 Fed. 723.

A "merchant vessel" does not of course include a private yacht. In re Cook, (D. C. N. J. 1917) 239 Fed. 782.

A petition under this section is sufficient though "unsupported by other evidence than 'the production of his certificate of discharge and good conduct' (during the term of his service in the merchant marine), 'together with the certificate of his declaration of intention to become a citizen,' and his own oath." In re Tancred, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 227 Fed. 329.

1909 Supp., p. 365, sec. 3.

Scope of Act.—This Act "was obviously intended to cover fully the subject of naturalization" and it repealed various sections in the Revised Statutes, but not all. In re Mallari, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 239 Fed. 416.

As an aid to the construction of this Act the court may consider the reports of committees, the introduction of amendments, and the opposition made to the passage of the Act in its various forms. In re Valhoff, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 238 Fed. 405.

1909 Supp., p. 366, sec. 4.

Any doubt as to whether an alien is entitled to naturalization should be resolved in favor of the government, in view of the fact that the laws of the United States offer very fair and reasonable terms of admission to citizenship. U. S. v. Grimmer, (N. D. Ohio 1916) 236 Fed. 285.

1909 Supp., p. 366, sec. 4, cl. First.

Sufficiency of declaration—Renunciation of allegiance.—It has been held that a declaration which does not comply with this section in that it fails to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity, particularly by name, to the prince, etc., to whom the applicant owed allegiance is insufficient. Ex p. Lange, (E. D. Mo. 1912) 197 Fed. 769; In re Stack, (W. D. Mo. 1912) 200 Fed. 330; In re Friedl, (E. D. Wis. 1913) 202 Fed. 300. But by what seems to be the better authority, a mistake made in a declaration of intention, in the name of the sovereign to whom the declarant renounced allegiance, is not so vital that it may not be amended by order of the court, or so material as to invalidate the certificate of naturalization procured thereon. U. S. v. Viaropoulos, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 221 Fed. 485; U. S. v. Orend, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 221 Fed. 777; In re Markowitz, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 715; In re Denny, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 240 Fed. 845.

Amendment.—Declarations of intention are part of the records of the court and may be amended but no record of the court should be changed unless the fact of error in the record as it stands clearly appears, and the state of the record as it should be has been shown with like clearness. In re Markowitz, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 715; In re Schwarz, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 236 Fed. 146, where leave to amend a declaration of intention so as to show the declarant's real name was refused, where the only evidence on which to make the change was the testimony of the applicant. And see cases cited supra, this note, under side-head Sufficiency of declaration.

Renewal of old declaration.—The language of the paragraph to the effect that an alien making a "declaration" under the old law shall not "be required to renew such declaration" means that he shall not be required to renew—i. e., make anew—any declaration for the purpose of petitioning for citizenship; in other words, that the declaration already made by him shall be sufficient in form whenever he chooses to petition. In re Valhoff, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 238 Fed. 405.

An alien soldier in the service of the army who, upon his examination, states that it is not his intention to reside permanently in the United States, but that it is his intention, upon his discharge from the service, to return to his native country, to remain there permanently, is not entitled to naturalization either under the general naturalization statutes or the Act of May 9, 1918, ch. —, § 1, ante, this volume, title NATURALIZATION, p. 488. In re Naturalization of Aliens, etc., (E. D. Mo. 1918) 250 Fed. 316.

1909 Supp., p. 366, sec. 4, cl. Second.

The provision as to the time for filing the petition—"Not more than seven years."—A declaration of intention made before the passage of this Act is not saved by the proviso of par. first of this section from the seven-year limitation in this section after the date of such declaration of intention. And an alien who has made a declaration of intention before the passage of this Act is required to file his petition for citizenship at a time not more than seven years after the date of such declaration of intention. U. S. v. Morena, (1918) 245 U. S. 392, 38 S. Ct. 151, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 359.

One who filed his declaration of intention July 19, 1904, and his application for naturalization Dec. 14, 1916, more than seven years after this Act took effect was cut off and barred by this Act. In re Bourke, (D. C. Kan. 1917) 243 Fed. 794.

An alien's petition filed in a federal court after the expiration of the seven years is too late, notwithstanding his having, within the seven years, twice filed a petition in the state, which were there properly dismissed as the petitioner was not a resident within the territorial jurisdiction of the court. U. S. v. Mueller, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 679, 158 C. C. A. 635.

While the authorities differ as to the proper construction of the quoted words in the catchline the better rule seems to be that aliens declaring their intention to become naturalized after the passage of the Act must file their final application within seven years after the filing of the declaration of intention, and as to those who filed the declaration of intention before the enactment of the statute they must make their final application within seven years from the enactment of the Act. Harmon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 425, 139 C. C. A. 19, following In re Yunghauss, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 210 Fed. 545, affirmed (C. C. A.

2d Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 168, 134 C. C. A. 67. See also In re Lee, (E. D. Mich. 1916) 236 Fed. 987, and Linger v. Balfour, (Tex. Civ. App. 1912) 149 S. W. 795, which supports the so-called "better rule," and U. S. v. Lengyel, (W. D. Pa. 1915) 220 Fed. 720, which opposes it and follows Eichhorst v. Lindsey, (W. D. Pa. 1913) 209 Fed. 708. See further in opposition In re Valhoff, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 238 Fed. 405.

Excluding date of application in computing time.—Where the declaration of intention was filed Oct. 16, 1912, a petition bearing date Oct. 15, 1914, was held not too early to satisfy the statutory provision that "no less than two years" should intervene between the filing of the declaration and the filing of the petition. In re Puglisi, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 230 Fed. 188.

Petition by minor.—"A petition for naturalization filed by a person under age of 21 years is void." In re Cordaro, (N. D. Ia. 1917) 246 Fed. 735, dismissing the petition.

Second proviso inserted by amendment, see notes to 1912 Supp., p. 277, § 3, infra, this title, p. 1346.

Filing certificate from Department of Commerce and Labor.—Filing the certificate of arrival as provided in this subdivision is an essential prerequisite to a valid order of naturalization; and "filing the certificate of arrival being a matter of substance, it is clear that no power is vested in the naturalization court to dispense with it." U. S. v. Ness, (1917) 245 U. S. 319, 38 S. Ct. 118, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 321, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 950, 145 C. C. A. 144, Ann. Cas. 1917C 41, which affirmed (N. D. Ia. 1914) 217 Fed. 169. In In re Titone, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 175, the court said: "Under the authority of U. S. v. Ness, [C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916] 230 Fed. 950, [145 C. C. A. 144], affirming (N. D. Ia. 1914) 217 Fed. 169] it would seem that the failure to file a certificate of landing may be cured as an irregularity and hence in this case the actual presentation and filing of a proper certificate before the original date of hearing would be sufficient." In re Liberman, (W. D. Wash. 1912) 193 Fed. 301, held that the certificate must be filed at the time the petition is filed, otherwise the petition will be denied.

"Resided continuously"—In general.—"The Naturalization Act of 1790 (Act March 26, 1790, ch. 3, 1 Stat. 103), and that of 1795 (Act Jan. 29, 1795, ch. 20, 1 Stat. 414), and that of 1802 (Act April 14, 1802, ch. 28, 2 Stat. 153), did not require aliens applying for citizenship to maintain a 'continuous' residence within, the country for the prescribed period. But Act March 3, 1813, ch. 42, § 12, Stat. 809, first provided that the alien must have resided in the United States 'for the continued term of five years next preceding his admission,' and added, 'without being at any time during the said five years, out of the territory of the United States.' The last-mentioned clause was repealed by Act June 26, 1848, ch. 72, 9 Stat. 240. But since the act of 1813 the law has required residence for the continuous term of five years, or, as the act now reads, 'for the continued term of five years.' The fact that in the earliest acts a 'continuous' residence was not required, while in the latter acts and in the existing law it must be for a 'continued term,' is significant. It is also significant that, while retaining 'the continuous term' of the act of 1813, there has been eliminated the clause 'without being at any time during the said five years, out of the territory of the United States.' U. S. v. Mulvey, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 513, 146 C. C. A. 471.

"The act of Congress conferred the judicial power and imposed the judicial duty upon the court which heard the application of this alien to consider all the evidence and arguments presented to it, and to decide and find whether or not he had resided in the United States continuously for five years immediately preceding his application." U. S. v. Deans, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 957, 145 C. C. A. 151, affirming (W. D. Ark. 1913) 208 Fed. 1018.

"Continuously" is not used in this paragraph literally as requiring the applicant to remain at all time physically within the jurisdiction, but applies to change of domicile only. U. S. v. Shanahan, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 169; In re Reichenburg, (M. D. Pa. 1917) 238 Fed. 859.

"The true construction of this requirement of five years' continuous residence within the United States is not that a temporary absence of a day, or a month, or of a few months, during the five years, is necessarily fatal to the continuity of the residence. It is that such an absence presents to the trial court the question of fact whether or not that absence and all the evidence before that court of the intention of the applicant, of the purpose and effect of his absence, and of all the facts and circumstances of the case, prove a breach in the continuity of his residence." U. S. v. Deans, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 957, 145 C. C. A. 151, affirming (W. D. Ark. 1913) 208 Fed. 1018.

Rules for applying this provision.—"The courts are agreed that, in applying the provision of the naturalization statute which requires continuous residence within the United States for a period of five years next preceding the filing of the petition for citizenship, two rules should be followed and observed: (1) When actual residence within the United States is once established, the continuity of such residence will not be interrupted by temporary absences from the United States for the purpose of either business or pleasure, provided there is no intention to change or abandon the domicile. And (2) the question whether an alien has resided continuously in the United States for the required five years is one of fact to be determined from all the facts and circumstances in each particular case." U. S. v. Jorgenson, (W. D. Mich. 1916) 241 Fed. 412.

The word "resided" has the meaning of "lived." The applicant must be seen to have been a "resident" in the sense of "inhabitant" of, and bodily present in the United States continuously for five years immediately preceding application for final papers. Such an interpretation affords opportunity for departures and limited absences from the country for social or business reasons, while at the same time leaving none for a substantial interruption of that continuity of inhabitancy necessary to secure the effect of the provision. U. S. v. Grimmer, (N. D. Ohio 1916) 236 Fed. 285. See to the same effect U. S. v. Cantini, (W. D. Pa. 1912) 199 Fed. 857.

Continuous residence as question of fact.—"The intention of an alien as to his residence or domicile once established is a most important, and usually a controlling factor in determining his right to citizenship. . . . The question of intention is always one of fact to be determined from both actions and declarations, and oftentimes conduct is more persuasive than words." U. S. v. Jorgenson, (W. D. Mich. 1916) 241 Fed. 412, holding that an applicant's petition was properly granted, though he had been absent in the Panama Canal Zone during part of the five-year period.

The question of continuous residence is one of fact into which intention enters as a controlling element. U. S. v. Shanahan, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 169.

Actual and substantial residence within the United States is required. U. S. v. Ginsberg, (W. D. Mo. 1914) 244 Fed. 209, holding that, on the evidence, the petitioner was and had been, throughout the required period, a resident of Brazil, the court saying: "While intention is one of the determining elements of residence; nevertheless intention alone is not sufficient but must be coincident with the physical act."

A traveling salesman may "reside continuously" within the United States, notwithstanding that he makes business trips abroad from time to time for his employer. In re Reichenburg, (M. D. Pa. 1917) 238 Fed. 859.

Absence at sea.—In the case of In re Cook, (D. C. N. J. 1917) 239 Fed. 782, denying the petition of a sailor and native of Scotland, the court said: "I am called upon to decide, therefore, whether, under the circumstances before detailed, the petitioner has, . . . immediately preceding the date of his application, resided continuously within the United States for five years and within the state of New Jersey one year. I entertained no doubt at the hearing that the petitioner's alleged 'residence' in either was not sufficient to entitle him to be admitted to citizenship, but at the urgent request of his attorney took the matter under advisement, for the purpose of examining certain cases which he desired to submit. I have since examined all of them, and my original opinion is in no respect shaken."

Other cases.—One who has, of his own choice, been continuously without the United States for nearly half of the five-year period cannot be said to have "resided continuously" within the United States during that period. U. S. v. Mulvey, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 513, 146 C. C. A. 471; U. S. v. Griminger, (N. D. Ohio 1916) 236 Fed. 285.

And it is very clear that one who while a resident of the United States for one year immediately preceding the filing of an application for admission to citizenship was out of the country for the twenty years prior to the one year is not entitled to admission. In re Brash, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 235 Fed. 1003.

In the case of In re Timourian, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 570, the court said: "I think the opinion of Judge Betts, In re An Alien, [1842] 1 Fed. Cas. No. 201a, that of Judge Ward in the recent case of In re Schneider, [S. D. N. Y. 1903] 164 Fed. 335, and the language of Judge McPherson in U. S. v. Cantini, [C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1914] 212 Fed. 925, 129 C. C. A. 445, indicate that a man is not to be deprived of citizenship for lack of continuous residence for five years when he has established and kept a legal domicile in the United States for that time and been out of the country less than one-third of the period and then only by reason of unforeseen business exigencies."

Good moral character.—In general.—One of the essential qualifications for admission to citizenship is that the applicant shall be a man of good moral character. This must not only be alleged, but proved, before a certificate of citizenship may be granted. U. S. v. Leles, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 236 Fed. 784.

Maintaining place of bad repute.—An applicant for admission to citizenship does not possess a good moral character where the evidence shows that for some time prior to his admission to citizenship the defendant had been conducting a place of bad repute in the community, a sort of combination saloon, restaurant, and lodging or rooming resort, some of the rooms being situated over the saloon and restaurant, and others in adjacent cottages in the rear; that the place was frequented by people of bad repute, both men and women, for evil and illicit purposes; and that the applicant himself was fully aware of the bad character of his resort and the class of people frequenting it. U. S. v. Leles, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 236 Fed. 784.

1909 Supp., p. 369, cl. Seventh, etc.

"Seven new subdivisions" were added to this section 4 by the Act of May 9, 1918, ch. —, § 1, ante, this volume, title NATURALIZATION, p. 488.

1909 Supp., p. 369, sec. 5.

Posting of names of substitute witnesses.—Whether where new witnesses are substituted their names must be posted, and for the length of time provided for the original witnesses as shown in section 6, there is a conflict of authority. The authorities are collected and considered in the case of In re Giaquinto, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 1004.

1909 Supp., p. 370, sec. 6.

"Final action."—The provision that in no case shall final action be had upon a petition until at least ninety days have elapsed after filing and posting the notice of such petition is mandatory but the remedy for a failure to comply with the provision is not a suit to cancel the certificate under section 15 but by objection in the proceedings themselves. U. S. v. Salomon, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 928, 146 C. C. A. 124, affirming (E. D. La. 1916) 231 Fed. 461.

1909 Supp., p. 370, sec. 9.

Hearing "in open court."—This section is specific and mandatory in requiring that the hearing be in open court, and that the applicant and witnesses be examined under oath "before the court and in the presence of the court" and, except as provided in section 10, the court is not authorized to receive or consider evidence taken by depositions out of the presence of the court. U. S. v. Leles, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 227 Fed. 189, following U. S. v. Nisbet, (W. D. Wash. 1909) 168 Fed. 1005. See to the same effect U. S. v. Kolodner, (M. D. Pa. 1912) 199 Fed. 809.

Hearing at chambers.—A final hearing is not had in open court, if, after the petition is first presented in open court, the hearing thereof is passed to and finally held in the chambers of the judge adjoining the court room, on a subsequent day and at an hour earlier than that to which the court has been regularly adjourned. U. S. v. Ginsberg, (1917) 243 U. S. 472, 38 S. Ct. 422, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 853, reversing in effect (W. D. Mo. 1914) 244 Fed. 209.

Res judicata.—The foundation of the doctrine of res judicata or estoppel by judgment is that both parties have had their day in court. A certificate of naturalization, procured ex parte in the ordinary way, has no conclusive effect as against the public. Such a certificate, including the judgment upon which it is based, is in its essence an instrument granting political privileges, and open like other public grants to be revoked if and when it shall be found to have been unlawfully or fraudulently procured. It is in this respect closely analogous to a public grant of land, or of the exclusive right to make, use and vend a new and useful invention. Johannessen v. U. S., (1912) 225 U. S. 227, 32 S. Ct. 613, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 1066. See also notes to 1909 Supp., p. 371, § 11, infra, this page.

But in the case of In re Hartman, (N. D. Ia. 1916) 232 Fed. 797, it was held that a proceeding under the statutes of the United States for the admission of an alien to citizenship was a case, suit, or cause of action, within the meaning of article 3, § 2, of the Constitution of the United States and that a determination of the question involved in such a proceeding, whether favorable to or adverse to the petitioner, was an adjudication which determined the rights of the parties in such a proceeding, and until set aside on appeal or some other method of review, or by direct action to annul the same upon the ground of illegality or fraud in procuring the same, was a bar to another action upon the same facts determined in the prior proceeding.

The right to appeal from an order admitting an alien to citizenship is affirmed by some authorities but denied by others.

"That a judgment or decree admitting an alien to citizenship may be reviewed upon appeal or writ of error from a District Court of the United States, at least, granting the same, is recognized by the Court of Appeals of this Circuit in the following cases: U. S. v. Ojala, [C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910] 182 Fed. 51, 104 C. C. A. 491; U. S. v. Ness, [C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916] 230 Fed. 950, [145 C. C. A. 144], affirming [N. D. Ia. 1914] 217 Fed. 169; U. S. v. Deans, [C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916] 230 Fed. 957, [145 C. C. A. 151] affirming In re Deans, [W. D. Ark. 1913] 208 Fed. 1018." In re Hartman, (N. D. Ia. 1916) 232 Fed. 797.

But referring to the question whether the government had the right to appeal from an order admitting an alien to citizenship, the court in U. S. v. Nopoulos, (S. D. Ia. 1915) 225 Fed. 656, said: "There are cases holding that the right of appeal does exist; but, if it were necessary to decide this question, I should have to hold that the right of appeal does not exist."

"The courts have decided that there is no right to review by writ of error the action of a district court in a naturalization proceeding, it not being a 'case' within the act of Congress conferring jurisdiction upon the Circuit Courts of Appeal 'in all cases,' etc. See U. S. v. Dolla, 177 Fed. 101, 100 C. C. A. 521 [C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910, 21 Ann. Cas. 665]; U. S. v. Neugebauer, [C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911] 221 Fed. 938, 137 C. C. A. 508. . . . This court has in several cases had before it upon appeal the action of District Courts in naturalization proceedings. We have never had the question raised in any of them by counsel whether the court had jurisdiction to proceed upon appeal in such cases. The court's jurisdiction was not challenged in any of them, and without benefit of argument we were not disposed to decide the question. And the question is not now before us, and we express no opinion one way or the other concerning it. We have simply called attention to the matter for the purpose of showing that a serious doubt existed in the minds of the profession as to whether the right to review upon either writ of error or upon appeal existed. We may also point out that in the cases in which this court reviewed upon appeal proceedings in naturalization the records disclose that the United States attorney had appeared on behalf of the government in opposition to the applicant's petition at the final hearing in the District Court, and a record had been made of the testimony and proceedings there had. U. S. v. Cohen, [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910] 179 Fed. 834, 103 C. C. A. 28, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 829; U. S. v. Poslusny, [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910] 179 Fed. 836, 103 C. C. A. 324; U. S. v. Balsara, [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910] 180 Fed. 694, 103 C. C. A. 660; Yunghaus v. U. S., [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914] 218 Fed. 168, 134 C. C. A. 67." U. S. v. Mulvey, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 513, 146 C. C. A. 471.

"It is not to be supposed that it was the intention of the said Act [of 1906] to make a reviewable case of every application for naturalization." State v. Superior Ct., (1913) 75 Wash. 239, 134 Pac. 916, Ann. Cas. 1915C 425.

1909 Supp., p. 371, sec. 11.

Appearance of representative of Naturalization Bureau as making proceeding an adversary one.—The mere appearance at the hearing of the agent of the Naturalization Bureau to interrogate the witnesses, without filing any pleading making specific objection to the granting of a certificate or putting in issue any of the averments of the petition, cannot have the effect of converting the proceeding from an ex parte to an adversary one, in a sense to make the doctrine of res judicata apply in proceedings to cancel the certificate under section 15. U. S. v. Leles, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 236 Fed. 784.

The fact that an application for citizenship was heard before a court of competent jurisdiction, in the presence of representatives of the government, who examined witnesses, and were heard by the court in opposition to the order made, does not estop the government from subsequently seeking to set aside an order admitting the applicant to citizenship. U. S. v. Nopoulos, (S. D. Ia. 1915) 225 Fed. 656.

In U. S. v. Mulvey, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 513, 146 C. C. A. 471, the court said: "In the case at bar a representative of the Bureau of Naturalization had appeared before the District Court when the application for the certificate of citizenship was pending and placed before it the facts as to the applicant's absence in Ireland. The court thought that these facts did not deprive the respondent of his right to be naturalized, inasmuch as he had not lost his residence. After this decision the chief naturalization examiner in New York City requested the United States district attorney to institute this proceeding. It does not affirmatively appear in this record that any law officer of the government was heard in opposition in the proceeding originally had before the District Court, or that he was present or took any part in the proceedings. All that is disclosed is that some one connected with the Bureau of Naturalization was present and was heard in opposition. The representative of the Bureau was not the attorney for the government in the district in which the proceeding took place, and he was not even an attorney. His appearance at such hearings is as amicus curiae, to present to the court such facts relative to the personal history of the several applicants as the Bureau's investigations may have disclosed. The order admitting the respondent to citizenship recites no appearance by the government on the hearing, no minutes of the testimony were taken, and no record preserved. Under such circumstances we do not think that the appearance of a representative of the Bureau in the proceedings is to be regarded as an appearance by the United States in the technical sense in which that word is used in judicial proceedings. The United States, therefore, is not so bound by the decree that it is not entitled to proceed by petition to cancel the certificate so issued."

1909 Supp., p. 371, sec. 12.

Fees for copies of original declarations of intention.—A clerk of courts is not by virtue of this section entitled to fees for making, on the direction of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, triplicate copies of original declarations of intention for naturalization and attaching the seal of the court to the same. Cross v. U. S., (1916) 242 U. S. 4, 37 S. Ct. 5, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 114, affirming (1915) 50 Ct. Cl. 413.

1909 Supp., p. 372, sec. 13.

The purpose of Congress under section 13 was to provide annual compensation to the clerk of the court for his services in naturalization at a maximum of $3,000 for each fiscal year and this is not affected by R. S. sec. 2687 in CUSTOMS DUTIES, vol. II, p. 597. Robb v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 525, 147 C. C. A. 411.

Fees for copies of original declarations of intention.—A clerk of courts is not by virtue of this section entitled to fees for making, on the direction of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, triplicate copies of original declarations of intention for naturalization and attaching the seal of the court to the same. Cross v. U. S., (1916) 242 U. S. 4, 37 S. Ct. 5, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 114, affirming (1915) 50 Ct. Cl. 413.

Construed with R. S. sec. 2687.—This section is in pari materia with R. S. sec. 2687 in CUSTOMS DUTIES, vol. II, p. 597, and, construing the two sections together, a clerk of a court is not entitled to the full maximum sum allowed for fees collected in the naturalization proceedings in any one fiscal year, but is only entitled to retain his pro rata of said maximum sum for the period during which said fees were collected. Darling v. U. S., (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 100.

Effect of state statutes regulating fees of state officers.—This section "was not intended to and did not control the ownership of the fees retainable by virtue of it by the clerks of the courts of record of this state. It leaves those fees to whatever disposition may be provided by the state law, even if it be true that under the act the clerks are agents of the national government. Mucrevy v. San Francisco, 231 U. S. 669, 34 S. Ct. 260, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 425. We must, therefore, heed the relevant laws of the state." Price v. Erie County, (1917) 221 N. Y. 260, 116 N. E. 988.

Controlled by the decision in Mucrevy v. San Francisco, (1914) 231 U. S. 669, 34 S. Ct. 260, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 425 (affirming (1910) 15 Cal. App. 11, 113 Pac. 339), it was held in Alameda County v. Cook, (1917) 32 Cal. App. 165, 162 Pac. 405, that the county clerk of Alameda county, ex officio clerk of the Superior Court, was not entitled to retain for his own use and benefit one-half of the fees collected by him in naturalization cases, but must pay the same into the treasury of Alameda county.

As stated in State v. Smith, (Neb. 1917)

165 N. W. 896, "the Nebraska statute in force when the naturalization fees in controversy were collected did not require the clerk of the District Court to account to the county for any part of them."

In New York the clerk of Erie county and of the courts of record therein was not entitled to retain, for his own use, one-half the fees collected by him in naturalization proceedings, but must pay them to the county treasurer. Price v. Erie County, (1917) 221 N. Y. 260, 116 N. E. 988.

1909 Supp., p. 373, sec. 15.

"This is an equitable proceeding (United States v. Ness, 230 Fed. 950, 145 C. C. A. 144; Luria v. United States, 231 U. S. 9, 27, 28, 34 Sup. Ct. 10, 58 L. Ed. 101; United States v. Salomon, [D. C.] 231 Fed. 461; and Id., 231 Fed. 928, 146 C. C. A. 124), and hence mere form, unless jurisdictional, must yield to substance. Citizenship granted by a court of competent jurisdiction after full hearing should not be taken away unless, from the facts presented, it clearly appears that such citizenship was illegally procured and that the applicant therefor was not entitled thereto at the time his petition was filed. A court decree which accords with truth and justice ought not to be annulled, either because of formal irregularities in the proceedings leading up to its rendition, or because it was based upon an incorrect theory of law, or erroneous reasoning as to facts." U. S. v. Jorgenson, (W. D. Mich. 1916) 241 Fed. 412.

Grounds for cancellation, in general.—Findings of fact by the court granting a certificate of naturalization will not be reviewed on a petition to cancel a naturalization certificate because illegally procured in that continuous residence for the statutory period was not shown, unless there was fraud or abuse of power by the court making the findings. U. S. v. Shanahan, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 169.

"Illegally procured."—Appearance of the United States, under section 11 of this Act, in opposition to the granting of a petition for naturalization, does not make the order res judicata so as to preclude a suit to cancel the order as having been "illegally procured;" because, for instance the petitioner failed to file with the clerk the certificate from the Department of Commerce and Labor as required in section 4, subdivision 2 of this Act. U. S. v. Ness, (1917) 245 U. S. 319, 38 S. Ct. 118, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 321 (reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 950, 145 C. C. A. 144, Ann. Cas. 1917C 41, which affirmed (N. D. Ia. 1914) 217 Fed. 169), holding that "§ 11 and § 15 were designed to afford cumulative protection against fraudulent or illegal naturalization."

False evidence as to character.—A certificate is illegally and fraudulently procured, within the meaning of this section, when the court is deceived by false evidence as to the good moral character of the applicant. U. S. v. Raverat, (D. C. Mont. 1915) 222 Fed. 1018.

Person naturalized under age.—It is not ground for canceling a certificate of citizenship that the person naturalized lacked two months of being of age at the time of the proceedings for naturalization, there being no fraud involved. The age of the applicant is a question of fact and the statute does not prescribe an age qualification for citizenship. U. S. v. Butikofer, (D. C. Idaho 1916) 228 Fed. 918.

Absence of jurisdictional facts.—The absence from the record of any of the jurisdictional facts would make the certificate of naturalization unlawful because issued without warrant of law. U. S. v. Shanahan, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 169.

Petitioner not qualified by residence.—A certificate of citizenship may be set aside and canceled where the uncontradicted evidence at the hearing of the petition showed indisputably that the petition was not qualified by residence and citizenship, and that the court or judge who heard the petition and ordered the certificate misapplied the law and the facts. U. S. v. Ginsberg, (1917) 243 U. S. 472, 37 S. Ct. 422, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 853, reversing, in effect, (W. D. Mo. 1914) 244 Fed. 209.

Evidence disproving residence continuously for five years in the United States was the ground upon which a certificate of citizenship was canceled in In re Giovine, (W. D. N. Y. 1917) 242 Fed. 741.

Witness verifying petition found not credible.—In view of the requirements in paragraph 3 of subdivision 2 of section 4 ("The petition shall also be verified," etc.), and in section 5 of this act, it was ground for cancellation of a certificate of naturalization that the court after the witness whose affidavit with that of one other was attached to and filed with the petition testified on the final hearing that he had not known the petitioner for five years, permitted the substitution of another witness who had made no affidavit to give the requisite testimony, and thereon granted the petition. U. S. v. Gulliksen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 727, 157 C. C. A. 175.

Testimony not taken in proper manner.—A certificate of citizenship is illegally procured if it is obtained upon the testimony of witnesses who were not examined under oath in open court, before the court, and in the presence of the court as required by section 9 nor their testimony taken by deposition in the manner prescribed in section 10. U. S. v. Leles, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 227 Fed. 189, following U. S. v. Nisbet, (W. D. Wash. 1909) 168 Fed. 1005.

Failure to attach certificate to petition.—A certificate of citizenship is not “illegally procured” because the applicant failed to attach to his petition for naturalization a certificate from the Department of Commerce and Labor stating the date, place, and manner of his arrival in the United States. U. S. v. Ness, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 950, 145 C. C. A. 144, Ann. Cas. 1917C 41, affirming (N. D. Ia. 1914) 217 Fed. 169.

Courts having jurisdiction to cancel.—The cancellation need not be by the court granting the certificate. A certificate granted by a state court may be canceled in a proceeding before a federal court, notwithstanding the two courts are of co-ordinate jurisdiction. U. S. v. Nisbet, (W. D. Wash. 1909) 168 Fed. 1005; U. S. v. Nopoulos, (S. D. Ia. 1915) 225 Fed. 656; U. S. v. Griminger, (N. D. Ohio 1916) 236 Fed. 285.

It is not necessary that a proceeding to cancel be commenced before the federal district judge who entered the order admitting the respondent to citizenship. U. S. v. Mulvey, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 513, 146 C. C. A. 471, wherein the court said: “The fact is quite immaterial that in the present case it was instituted before another district judge of the same district exercising co-ordinate jurisdiction.”

Affidavit—“The sole purpose apparently of the affidavit is to furnish an authentic source or means through which the United States attorney of the district may receive information upon which he may rely, of a violation of the statute.” U. S. v. Leles, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 227 Fed. 189.

Affidavit on information and belief.—An affidavit is sufficient though based upon information and belief rather than the personal knowledge of the affiant. U. S. v. Leles, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 227 Fed. 189.

Evidence—Presumption as to residence and character.—It is a familiar rule of law that residence and character once proved are presumed to continue in the absence of countervailing evidence, and the ordinary presumptions and rules of evidence are not reversed in suits to cancel certificates of citizenship. U. S. v. Deans, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 957, 145 C. C. A. 151, affirming (W. D. Ark. 1913) 208 Fed. 1018.

1909 Supp., p. 374, sec. 21.

Fees for copies of original declarations of intention.—A clerk of courts is not entitled to fees for making on the direction of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization triplicate copies of original declarations of intention for naturalization and attaching the seal of the court to the same notwithstanding R. S. sec. 828, in JUDICIAL OFFICERS, vol. IV, p. 95, which might otherwise give him a right to such fees. Cross v. U. S., (1916) 242 U. S. 4, 37 S. Ct. 5, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 114, affirming (1915) 50 Ct. Cl. 413.

History.—See In re Mallari, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 239 Fed. 416.

“It has been the policy of Congress to facilitate the admission to American citizenship of such of the inhabitants of our insular possessions as under our general policy are racially qualified therefor.” In re Giralde, (D. C. Md. 1915) 226 Fed. 826.

The racial restrictions of section 2169 in volume V, page 207, apply only to aliens and not to persons specified in this section. In re Mallari, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 239 Fed. 416.

In view of the debates in Congress and the legislative history of this section 30, R. S. sec. 2169, vol. V, p. 207, is to be regarded as so modified as to admit to citizenship a Filipino otherwise qualified for citizenship. In re Bantista, (N. D. Cal. 1917) 245 Fed. 765, holding, however, that only natural-born Filipinos are thus eligible, and that an alien not born in the Philippine Islands is not eligible unless under R. S. sec. 2169.

1912 Supp., p. 277, sec. 3.

The “five years” referred to in the latter part of this proviso has been held to mean five years before the hearing. In re Ross, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 366; In re Fleury, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 223 Fed. 803. But see contra In re Urdang, (E. D. Ky. 1913) 212 Fed. 557; In re Peters, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 213 Fed. 541; In re Horecsny, (D. C. Idaho 1916) 238 Fed. 446.

A certificate of citizenship cannot legally be granted if the petitioner has not continuously resided in the United States for a period of five years. In re Giovine, (W. D. N. Y. 1917) 242 Fed. 741.

“Misinformation” in U. S. v. Meyer, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 305, 154 C. C. A. 185, Ann. Cas. 1918C 704, was held to be such as to bring the applicant within the benefit of the second proviso in this paragraph.

An applicant under the second proviso must have received the “misinformation” from a source which in the ordinary course of events might be considered authentic. In re Mondelli, (E. D. Ky. 1915) 228 Fed. 920. See also U. S. v. Nopoulos, (S. D. Ia. 1915) 225 Fed. 656, where a certificate of citizenship was canceled.

Appointment.—The appointing power cannot attach conditions which have the effect of depriving an appointee as paymaster's clerk of what the law allows him to receive. Katzer v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 32.

Title of paymaster's clerk changed to pay clerk, see NAVY, 1916 Supp., p. 177, foot of page.

Vol. V, p. 285, sec. 1462.

Effect of section.—This section states the general rule of statutes as to duty and pay of naval officers. White v. U. S., (1916) 239 U. S. 608, 36 S. Ct. 224, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 464, affirming (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 702.

Scope of section.—Officers on the active list only are affected by this section. White v. U. S., (1916) 239 U. S. 608, 36 S. Ct. 224, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 464, affirming (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 702.

Jurisdiction on the court of claims is not conferred by this Act, nor has that court jurisdiction under the general grant of jurisdiction of claims "founded upon any law of Congress." Harllee v. U. S., (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 342.

Vol. V, p. 322, sec. 13.

Appointment from civil life in third proviso.—An enlisted man, having obtained his discharge, with the expectation and practical assurance of being appointed assistant paymaster as a promotion, for which he had taken an examination, was appointed assistant paymaster two days after his resignation, and was thus appointed from civil life, according to the letter of the law. But according to the doctrine of U. S. v. Alger, 151 U. S. 362, 14 S. Ct. 346, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 192, he was not entitled to be so regarded, and the Comptroller of the Treasury eventually so ruled. Meanwhile he had received the increased pay given by the terms of the statute to appointees from civil life, and his vouchers therefor were duly approved. It was held that the government was not entitled to be repaid the sum paid him in excess of that to which the Comptroller finally determined was his due. U. S. v. United States Fidelity, etc., Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 310.

Vol. V, p. 328. [Mileage or actual expenses, when allowed.]

This provision did not operate to repeal R. S. sec. 1566, in volume V, p. 327, as to the provision that no officer shall be paid mileage except for travel actually performed, at his own expense and under orders. Katzer v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 32.

"Officer of the navy" does not include a paymaster's clerk. Ashton v. U. S., (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 65.

Vol. V, p. 350, sec. 1621.

On detached service with the army.—A private serving in the marine corps, while his brigade was detached for service with the army by order of the President, was charged with having committed an act which was an offense both by "the rules and articles of war prescribed for the government of the army" and by "the laws and regulations established for the government of the navy." For this he was placed under guard by military order. The next day the brigade to which he belonged was by executive order withdrawn from the detached service of the army. Subsequently he was brought before a naval court martial for trial and was tried, convicted and sentenced for an offense against the laws and regulations of the navy. When arraigned for trial he entered a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, based upon the fact that at the time the offense was charged to have been committed, he, a private in a brigade of the marine corps, was serving with the army on detached service and that as a matter of law the marine corps when on such service is not subject to the laws and regulations of the navy. The plea was overruled and the case came before the District Court as in effect a case stated to have section 1621 construed. The court held that there was nothing to be added to the clear answer given by the language of the statute itself and that the relator was not subject to the laws and regulations of the navy, and that a court established by these laws was without authority of law to impose or enforce the sentence pronounced. U. S. v. Walker, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 673.

1909 Supp., p. 390, sec. 1. [Act of May 13, 1908.]

Aids to rear-admirals.—A lieutenant commander is not entitled to additional pay on account of services as aid to a rear-admiral. Knox v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 22.

1912 Supp., p. 280, sec. 1.

"Holding appointment," etc.—A nominee as paymaster's clerk having reported to the Mare Island navy yard as ordered, and being found qualified, accepted the appointment and executed the oath of office, was from that date "holding appointment in accordance with law" as expressed in this provision. Katzer v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 32, holding also that the appointing power could not lawfully attach conditions to the appointment so as to have the effect of depriving the appointee of what the law authorized him to receive.

1914 Supp., p. 298. [Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 148.]

A paymaster's clerk commissioned a chief pay clerk under the Act of March 3, 1915, 1916 Supp., pp. 177, 178, was not "advanced in grade or rank pursuant to law" within the meaning of this provision in the Act of March 4, 1913. Seifert v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 40.

Commission; departmental practice.—Where by the deliberate action of the administrative department a new commission is issued to correct a prior commission under the ruling of the court in Toulon v. U. S., (1916) 51 Ct. Cl. 87, recognition will be given to the practice of the department in reckoning the date from that of appointment rather than from the time of actual service, where there is no statute which prohibits said practice. *Toulon v. Half-breed Filipino.—One whose father was a Spaniard and his mother a Filipino is not entitled to the benefit of this provision. In re Rados, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 686.

Filipinos were held not included within the provisions of the Act of July 26, 1894. They fall within the provisions of this section 30. In re Mallari, (D. C. Mass. 1906) 239 Fed. 416.

A Filipino born in the Philippine Islands and whose permanent allegiance was transferred to the United States by force of the treaty with Spain is an "alien" within the meaning of that term in this Act and entitled to its benefits. In re Bautista, (N. D. Cal. 1917) 245 Fed. 765.

Porto Rican.—In the case of In re Giralde, (D. C. Md. 1915) 226 Fed. 826, it was held that a native of Porto Rico was entitled to the provisions of the section.

1916 Supp., p. 177. [Paymaster's clerk, etc.]

This provision "radically changed the method theretofore existing for the selection of paymasters' clerks and inaugurated a system designed to be complete in itself for the creation and selection of acting pay clerks, pay clerks, and chief pay clerks." Seifert v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 40.

1916 Supp., p. 178. [Chief pay clerks, etc.]

A paymaster's clerk commissioned a chief pay clerk under this Act was not "advanced in grade or rank pursuant to law" within the meaning of the provision in the Act of March 4, 1913, 1914 Supp., p. 298.

NEUTRALITY

Vol. V, p. 357, sec. 5282.

On a trial for violation of this section the court has no power to direct the jury to return a verdict of guilty, pursuant to an agreed statement of facts between the government and the defendant, regardless of the jury's own view respecting the proper conclusion to be drawn from the facts agreed upon. Blair v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 217, 154 C. C. A. 137, reversing for that reason a judgment of conviction in (N. D. Cal. 1915) 228 Fed. 77, and holding that the constitutional right to trial by jury in a criminal case cannot be waived.

On the trial of an indictment for conspiracy to violate this statute the court said: "It must be observed that the prohibition of the statute is not aimed at the hiring or retaining by or of citizens of this country alone, but at the hiring or retaining by any person whomsoever of any other person. It is to be observed, further, that the hiring or retaining must be to go without the limits of this country with intent to enlist. The fact that other countries, having laws for compulsory military service, have assisted their subjects in this country to return to their native land, is a false quantity here, and one with which we have nothing to do. It throws no light upon the questions which we are to consider. The case on trial must be determined upon its own particular facts, without regard to what has been done either here or elsewhere by persons not included in the present indictment. Nor is there here involved any question as to the right of individuals to go from this country either singly or in groups to another country with intent there to enlist. The sole question here is: Do the facts before us show a conspiracy on the part of defendants to violate the statute which we have been considering?" U. S. v. Blair-Murdock Co., (N. D. Cal. 1915) 228 Fed. 77, per Dooling, J.

Evidence.—In U. S. v. Blair-Murdock Co., (N. D. Cal. 1915) 228 Fed. 77, an indictment for conspiracy to violate this section, the salient facts of the case as recited by the court, were held sufficient to demand conviction for conspiracy to secure men to return to Great Britain and enlist, although none of the defendants expressly said in words to any of the men that they should enlist in the service of Great Britain as soldiers, sailors, or marines, and although the defendants may have believed they were acting within the law.

Vol. V, p. 358, sec. 5283.

Political recognition of the objects of the hostilities mentioned in the statutes is not required as a condition precedent to a violation of the Act. The Lucy H., (N. D. Fla. 1916) 235 Fed. 610.

Vol. V, p. 366, sec. 5286.

Nations to which applicable.—It would be an offense under this section to prepare a military expedition to be carried on against the Carranza government in Mexico, though his government had not been recognized as the legitimate government of Mexico. De Drozeo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 1008, 151 C. C. A. 70.

Expedition and enterprise defined.—The sending out of a spy or spies to the dominions of a country with which we are at peace comes within the prohibition of this statute; for the words "military enterprise," while including a military expedition, have a wider scope than the latter. U. S. v. Sander, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 241 Fed. 417.

Elements of military expedition.—"A most completely organized military detachment of soldiers marching from a neutral into a belligerent country, simply to march in and then out again, without threat or purpose of attack in any direction upon the belligerent, or upon any of its institutions, while it might impinge upon international neutrality regulations, would not, it is believed, contravene the statute; nor would a wholly unorganized and irresponsible mob of persons going from a neutral into a belligerent state, with a purpose of committing depredations upon the latter's military institutions, alone constitute an infringement of the statute. But if there be a preconcerted plan of operations, with leadership, and a co-ordination of men and arms and munitions and other means for attacking the armies or navies of the belligerent, or crippling or destroying her military institutions, set on foot for the purpose and with the intention of so attacking the belligerent nation in either aspect, and thereby to render aid and assistance to the enemy, the military enterprise or expedition contemplated by the statute would seem to be complete." U. S. v. Tauscher, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 597.

Elements of military enterprise.—"Neither this statute nor any other declares what is meant therein by the words 'military enterprise', nor what would be required to constitute such an enterprise, so that in giving effect to the statute the court must determine from other sources what Congress meant when it used these words." U. S. v. Bopp, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 230 Fed. 723, sustaining a demurrer to an indictment for conspiracy to violate this section, as embodied in PENAL LAWS, § 13, 1909 Supp., p. 460, and holding that, while a purpose to destroy tunnels, railroads, bridges, trains, and ships which were engaged in the transportation of munitions of war might be the aim of a military enterprise, it is not necessarily so and might be directed only against the various companies owning such tunnels, railroads, bridges, trains, and ships.

Number of men material.—"This section does not require that the expedition should have actually set out or any particular number of men, the crime being completed by the organization only. U. S. v. Ybanez, 53 Fed. 536." U. S. v. Chakraberty, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 287.

Sufficiency of indictment.—It is sufficient to charge in the indictment that the defendants, by an act the character of which is of a warlike nature, inaugurated and set on foot an enterprise for the furtherance of a military or warlike purpose against a kingdom or country with which the United States are at peace." U. S. v. Chakraberty, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 287.

PATENTS

Vol. V, p. 417, sec. 4883.

Nature of right.—Eminent domain.—Rights secured under the grant of letters patent by the United States are properly protected by the constitutional guaranties and therefore not subject to be appropriated, even for public use, without adequate compensation. William Cramp, etc., Ship, etc., Bldg. Co. v. International Curtis Marine Turbine Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 28, 38 S. Ct. 271, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 560, affirmed (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 564, 151 C. C. A. 500.

Price restrictions.—The monopoly conferred by the Patent Law does not give the manufacturers of a patented article the right, in derogation of the general law, to fix by contract between its general sales agent and purchasing dealers the price at which such articles shall be resold, and an attempt to enforce the apparent obligations of such contract under the guise of a patent infringement is not embraced within the remedies given for the protection of the rights which the Patent Law confers. Boston Store v. American Graphophone Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 8, 38 S. Ct. 257, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 551.

Vol. V, p. 421, sec. 4886.

I. Who may obtain patents.

III. Invention.

• V. Novelty and anticipation.

I. WHO MAY OBTAIN PATENTS (p. 421)

First inventor defined.—The man who first reduces an invention to practice is prima facie the first and true inventor, but the man who first conceives and in a mental sense first invents a machine, art, or composition of matter may date his patentable invention back to the time of its conception if he connects the conception with its reduction to practice by reasonable diligence on his part, so that they are substantially one continuous act. Otis Elevator Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 501, 138 C. C. A. 97; Evans v. Associated Automatic Sprinkler Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 252, 154 C. C. A. 172, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1916) 229 Fed. 1007.

Rules for determining priority.—When two patents for the same invention have been issued to independent inventors, the dates of their respective inventions are determined by (1) the dates of the patents; (2) the dates of the application, provided the application sufficiently describes the invention; (3) the dates of actual reduction to practice (4) the dates of conception, with this qualification: That if either patentee seeks to carry the date of his invention back to the date of his conception, he must show reasonable diligence in adapting and perfecting his invention, either by actual reduction to practice or by filing his application. Evans v. Associated Automatic Sprinkler Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 252, 154 C. C. A. 172, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1916) 229 Fed. 1007.

It is established as a rule of evidence that in a contest between rival inventors for priority of invention, where both have reduced their conceptions to practice, the burden is on the second reducer to practice to show his prior conception and to establish the connection between his conception and its reduction to practice by proof of due diligence. Evans v. Associated Automatic Sprinkler Co., (C. C. A.

3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 252, 154 C. C. A. 172, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1916) 229 Fed. 1007.

III. INVENTION (p. 430)

What constitutes invention.—Slight variations claimed for a patent for improvements in railroad tie plates, from prior forms of such plates, do not constitute patentable invention. Railroad Supply Co. v. Elyria Iron, etc., Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 285, 37 S. Ct. 502, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 789, 130 C. C. A. 447.

Change of size or proportion.—In Edison v. Allen's American Portland Cement Works, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 219 Fed. 895, 135 C. C. A. 559, the court held that a mere matter of construction such as the elongation of a machine, the only result of the change being to produce a larger output, did not involve patentable invention. And to a like effect see Adrian Wire Fence Co. v. United Fence Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 342, 138 C. C. A. 604, wherein it was held that a mere carrying forward of the original thought, a change only in form, proportions, or degree, doing the same thing in the same way, by substantially the same means, with better results, is not such an invention as will sustain a patent.

Equivalents.—For a patent (acetylene lamp) held to exhibit meritorious invention and entitled to invoke the doctrine of equivalents, see Abercrombie, etc., Co. v. Baldwin, (1917) 245 U. S. 198, 38 S. Ct. 104, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 240.

Combination.—For a case in which the bringing together of elements confessedly old, for a gearing device for use in operating power washing machines and wringers, was held not to amount to a patentable combination, see Grinnell Washing Mach. Co. v. E. E. Johnson Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 426, 38 S. Ct. 547, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1196.

V. NOVELTY AND ANTICIPATION (p. 443)

New use.—If an inventor finds a chemical substance devoted to a particular use and conceives the idea of applying it to a new purpose, and on experiment discovers that the substance must be treated in a particular way to suit his purpose, which method of treatment is essential to his end, but of less importance in obtaining the prior art results, it is apparent that he may be regarded as a real inventor, even though he selects a specific treatment in an occupied field. If he were making only a paste, as others had done, it might not be invention to select part of the old field of experiment, although he might thus produce an improved paste. But he discovers a novel and valuable use for the old product, which he modifies to suit the new purpose. In connection with his new and useful result, and as against a person who produces the old product as modified, and who sells it for the new purpose, he is an inventor, entitled not only to restrain such sale, but also the manufacture or use of the product. Perkins Glue Co. v. Solva Waterproof Glue Co., (N. D. Ill. 1915) 223 Fed. 792.

New element in old combination.—Patentable novelty is sometimes found in discovering what is the difficulty with an existing structure and what change in its elements will correct the difficulty, even though the means for introducing that element into the combination are old and their adaptation to the new purpose involves no patentable novelty. Miehle Printing Press, etc., Co. v. Whitlock Printing Press, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 647, 139 C. C. A. 201.

Patent as evidence of novelty.—The grant of letters patent is prima facie evidence that the patentee is the first inventor of the device in issue and of its novelty. Toledo Metal Wheel Co. v. Foyer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 350, 138 C. C. A. 612.

Vol. V, p. 472, sec. 4888.

III. CLAIMS (p. 478)

Rights determined by claim.—The inventor can, of course, use any language he wishes in describing his invention and in stating his claims. Having done so, however, he must abide by the phraseology chosen. It is then too late to reconstruct his claims by adding to or subtracting from the language used. This rule may result in hardship in many cases, but a contrary rule would work a far greater injustice and would enable the patentee to hold as infringers those who have invested their capital in what they supposed, relying on the plain language of the patent, to be a perfectly legitimate business. When the language of the claims of a patent is clear and distinct, the patentee is bound by it. Evans v. Hall Printing Press Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 539, 139 C. C. A. 129.

Construction of claims for improvements.—In Railroad Supply Co. v. Elyria Iron, etc., Co., 244 U. S. 285, 37 S. Ct. 502, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136, affirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 789, 130 C. C. A. 447, it was held that the state of the prior art required that designated patents for improvements in railroad tie plates, be limited strictly to the forms described in the claims.

Vol. V, p. 499, sec. 4904.

Duty to declare interference.—The refusal of the Commissioner of Patents to declare an interference, where the patent office is informed, through the admission of an applicant, that the invention shown in his application was conceived on a date subsequent to the filing date upon an application of another person for the same invention is justified by the provisions of this section, since the duty to declare an interference imposed by this statute and by the rules of the patent office, cannot be deemed imperatively to arise merely because of an asserted antagonism between the applications, but there must be precedent and supervising judgment of the commissioner. Ewing v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 1, 37 S. Ct. 494, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 955, reversing (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 185.

Vol. V, p. 531, sec. 4898.

III. ASSIGNMENTS

3. Form and Requisites (p. 536)

Acknowledgment.—All that this section requires is an acknowledgment good at common law, not one which shall conform to some special regulations as to acknowledgments which may be from time to time enacted in one or other of the different states. Hildreth v. Auberback, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 651, 139 C. C. A. 205, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 223 Fed. 545. The acknowledgment of an assignment of a patent relates to the date of the assignment. Murray Co. v. Continental Gin Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 149 Fed. 989, 79 C. C. A. 499.

Vol. V, p. 552, sec. 4919.

II. WHO LIABLE FOR INFRINGEMENT (p. 557)

United States — Infringement by officer.

—Where an officer of the United States in dealing with a subject within the scope of his authority, infringes patent rights by a taking or use of property for the benefit of the United States under circumstances not justifying the implication of a contract, the only redress of the owner is against the officer. William Cramp, etc., Ship, etc., Bldg. Co. v. International Curtis Marine Turbine Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 28, 38 S. Ct. 271, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 560, affirmed, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 564, 151 C. C. A. 500.

Liability on implied contract — Consent to suit.—The owner of a patent right appropriated for the benefit of the United States by an officer of the United States, acting within the scope of his authority, and having knowledge of the patent right and its validity, with the consent of the owner, express or implied, upon the conception that compensation will be thereafter provided, may, under the statute law of the United States permitting suits against the United States on contracts, express or implied, recover, by way of implied contract, the compensation which may be rightly exacted because of such taking. William Cramp, etc., Ship, etc., Bldg. Co. v. International Curtis Marine Turbine Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 28, 38 S. Ct. 271, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 560, affirmed (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 564, 151 C. C. A. 500.

Vol. V, p. 566. [Act of March 3, 1897.]

Regular and established place of business.—An allegation that defendant citizens and residents of Indiana "have jointly and severally infringed" the letters patent sued on "within the eastern district of Pennsylvania" and that all of the defendants "are now doing business under the name or style of Wall & Ochs at 1716 Chestnut Street, in said city of Philadelphia" falls short of an allegation that the defendants "have a regular and established place of business" in that city. Scheuerle v. Onepiece Bifocal Lens Co., (E. D. Pa. 1917) 241 Fed. 270.

A return of service was insufficient to give the court jurisdiction which averred service upon the defendants by serving certain named persons, without stating that they were agents engaged in conducting the business, and the bill did not allege them to be such. Scheuerle v. Onepiece Bifocal Lens Co., (E. D. Pa. 1917) 241 Fed. 270.

Consent of the parties cannot confer jurisdiction on a federal court. "Any jurisdictional fact prescribed by the statute is absolutely essential, and cannot be waived, and the want of it may be raised at any stage of the cause." U. S. Envelope Co. v. Transo Paper Co., (D. C. Conn. 1916) 229 Fed. 576.

But it has been said that, construing this provision in connection with Judicial Code, § 50, 1912 Supp., p. 153, a nonresident corporation can come involuntarily into a district and accept service or can voluntarily appear, if it has been named as a party on the record, and by appearing waives the question of jurisdiction of the person and submits itself to the jurisdiction of the court. Dicks Press Guard Mfg. Co. v. Bowen, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 193.

"In suits for infringement of letters patent against a nonresident corporation, both the fact that the defendant has committed acts of infringement and has a regular and established place of business must concur; otherwise, the court is without jurisdiction." U. S. Envelope Co. v. Transo Paper Co., (D. C. Conn. 1916) 229 Fed. 576.

Vol. V, p. 567, sec. 4920.

I. PLEADING AND PROOF IN GENERAL (p. 568)

Defenses — Reissued patent.—An infringer who entered the field when the validity and scope of the infringed patent were still unquestioned and after an extensive market for the patented article had been created, cannot escape accountability for its infringing acts subsequent to the reissue of the patent on the theory that rights had been acquired during the seven years intervening between the issue of the original patent and the application for the reissue, though by the reissue the patentee loses all in the way of an accounting under the original patent. Abercrombie, etc., Co. v. Baldwin, (1917) 245 U. S. 198, 38 S. Ct. 104, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 240.

Question for court.—Where there is no dispute or controversy on the facts as to the meaning of the claims or regarding the disclosure of the prior art, the question becomes one of law to be determined by the court. Prepayment Car Sales Co. v. Orange County Traction Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 939, 137 C. C. A. 509. So it is well settled that when the validity of a patent is to be determined and its claim construed by reference to prior patents, about the dates and authenticity of which there is no controversy, the trial judge will usually construe those documents as he would other documents; his doing so does not invade the province of the jury. Brothers v. Lidgerwood Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 359, 138 C. C. A. 460.

Personating congressman.—In Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 535, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 912, affirming a conviction for violation of this section, the court, per Mr. Chief Justice White, said: "It is insisted that no offense under the statute was stated in the indictment because a member of the House of Representatives of the United States is not an officer acting under the authority of the United States within the meaning of the provision of the Penal Code upon which the indictment was based. This contention is supported by reference to what is assumed to be the significance in one or more provisions of the Constitution of the words 'civil officers,' and reliance is especially placed upon the ruling made at an early day in the Blount Case, Whart. St. Tr. p. 200, that a Senator of the United States was not a civil officer subject to impeachment within the meaning of § 4 of article 2 of the Constitution. But, as previously held in sustaining the motion to dismiss the direct writ of error, the issue here is not a constitutional one, but who is an officer acting under the authority of the United States within the provisions of the section of the Penal Code under consideration? And that question must be solved by the text of the provision, not shutting out as an instrument of interpretation proper light which may be afforded by the Constitution, and not forgetting that a penal statute is not to be enlarged by interpretation, but also not unmindful of the fact that a statute, because it is penal, is not to be narrowed by construction so as to fail to give full effect to its plain terms as made manifest by its text and its context. U. S. v. Hartwell, [1868] 6 Wall. 385, 395, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 830, 832; U. S. v. Corbett, [1900] 215 U. S. 233, 242, 243, 30 S. Ct. 81, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 173, 175, 176."

"Under the authority of the United States."—In Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 535, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 912, affirming a conviction for violation of this section, it was urged by the defendant that no offense was charged in the indictment because it was not charged that, in pretending to be an officer, the defendant did an act which he would have been authorized to do under the authority of the United States had he possessed the official capacity which he assumed to have; in other words, that the first clause of the section prohibits the falsely assuming or pretending to be an officer with intent to defraud, and, as such officer, taking upon himself to act under the authority of the United States,—that is, to do an authorized act. But the court overruled that contention.

Venue of federal prosecution.—Where the false personation is by telephone the offense may be tried in the District Court of the district of the hearer. Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 60, 36 S. Ct. 255, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 526.

Indictment—Personation of congressman.—In Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 535, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 912, an objection to an indictment for falsely personating an officer acting under the authority of the United States with intent to defraud, etc., that it failed to describe the circumstances of the offense was held to be untenable in the appellate court after conviction, where said indictment clearly charged the illegal acts complained of and the requisite fraudulent intent, stated the date and place of the commission of the acts charged, and gave the name and official character of the officer whom the accused was charged with having falsely personated, and there was not the slightest suggestion of a want of knowledge of the crime charged or of any surprise concerning the same, nor any intimation that any request was made for a bill of particulars concerning the details of the offense charged. "Under this situation," said the court, "we think that the case is clearly covered by § 1025 Revised Statutes" in CRIMES AND OFFENSES, vol. II, p. 340.

Evidence.—In Lamar v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 103, 36 S. Ct. 535, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 912, the court, after stating that it had made a close scrutiny of the record, expressed the opinion that it was sufficient to justify submission thereof to the jury, and a conviction was sustained upon an indictment for false personation of an officer acting under the authority of the United States, with intent to defraud, etc.

1909 Supp., p. 414, sec. 35.

Evidence—Purchase or pledge.—In Bolland v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 529, 151 C. C. A. 465, Ann. Cas. 1918B 520, where defendant was convicted on an indictment charging that he knowingly received in pledge an automatic pistol, the property of the United States, the government proved that the pistol was issued by the quartermaster sergeant to one Cartlidge, a member of the United States army, and was found in the grocery store of the defendant, which was near the government reservation where the soldier's company was stationed; and a witness testified that the defendant confessed to receiving the pistol in pledge from a soldier. It was held that the court properly denied a motion of defendant for the direction of a verdict of acquittal at the close of the government's evidence, based upon the contention that the corpus delicti of the crime had not been established by evidence independent of the confession of the accused, since the evidence above stated tended to corroborate the confession, and was such as to warrant the jury in inferring that the defendant knew that Cartlidge was a soldier, and also that the pistol was government property.

In Bolland v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 529, 151 C. C. A. 465, Ann. Cas. 1918B 520, affirming conviction of a defendant charged with receiving from a soldier a pistol, the property of the United States, the fact that the pistol was found in the possession of the defendant, who was not a soldier or officer of the United States, was held to be presumptive evidence that the same had been pledged to the defendant, in view of the presumption expressly created by the terms of R. S. sec. 1242 in WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT, vol. VII, p. 1017, and of R. S. sec. 3748 in PUBLIC PROPERTY, BUILDINGS, AND GROUNDS, vol. VI, p. 711.

Civil action by the United States.—In Union Naval Stores Co. v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 284, 36 S. Ct. 308, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 644, affirming judgment in (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1913) 202 Fed. 491, 123 C. C. A. 1, for the United States in an action for conversion of turpentine and rosin, the court said: "There was no error in charging that 'the boxing of trees by a settler on public land covered by an unperfected homestead entry, or by any person who knew it was public land (which an unperfected homestead entry is), and the extracting of crude turpentine therefrom, constitutes in law an intentional, wilful trespass, although he may have acted without knowledge of the illegality of the act, and that from such persons the United States are entitled to recover the value of the product manufactured from such crude turpentine by the settler, or from any person into whose possession the same may have passed.' This refers of course, as other parts of the charge clearly show, to a manufacture by Rayford, who was himself the trespasser."

Congress has constitutional power to enact this section prohibiting money contributions to be made by certain corporations in connection with any election at which, among others, representatives in Congress are to be voted for. U. S. v. Brewers' Ass'n, (W. D. Pa. 1916) 239 Fed. 163.

"If it should be held that Congress exceeded its power in including, among others, elections in which Presidential and Vice Presidential electors are to be voted for, on the ground that they are officers of the state and not of the federal government, that would not, in my opinion, invalidate the act, except as to that particular provision." U. S. v. U. S. Brewers' Ass'n, (W. D. Pa. 1916) 239 Fed. 163.

"The words 'money contributions' are not vague and uncertain, but, on the contrary, their meaning is plain and their purpose as used in the act unmistakable. Whether, in any given case, an expenditure by a corporation shall be construed as 'a money contribution in connection with any election,' within the spirit, intent, and meaning of the act of Congress, may become a question for the court or jury in the light of all the circumstances of the case." *U. The word "corruptly" is capable of different meanings in different connections. As used in the section any endeavor to impede and obstruct the due administration of justice in the matter under investigation is corrupt. The endeavor need not be accompanied by payment or promises of payment of money as such an interpretation would quite unreasonably restrict the obvious purpose of the legislation. Bosselman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 82, 152 C. C. A. 132.

Erasures in records material to matter under inquiry by grand jury.—In Bosselman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 82, 152 C. C. A. 132, judgment of conviction was affirmed, the conviction being upon an indictment charging that the defendant in violation of this section had corruptly influenced, obstructed, and impeded the due administration of justice by directing and requesting certain specified persons to make certain erasures, charges, and insertions in books and records material to a matter under inquiry by the grand jury.

1909 Supp., p. 444, sec. 150.

This section defines a number of offenses committed by: (1) Any one who shall use, or suffer to be used, for printing a plate from which has been, or may be, printed any obligation or other security of the United States. (2) Any one who shall sell or import such plate with intent to use the same for printing. (3) Any one who shall have in his control or possession any such plate, with intent to use the same, or suffer the same to be used in forging or counterfeiting any such obligation or other security. (4) Any one who "shall have in his possession, except under authority from the Treasurer or other proper officer, any obligation or other security made or executed in whole or in part, after the similitude of any obligation or other security issued under the authority of the United States, with intent to sell or otherwise use the same."

(5) Whoever shall make a print or photograph of any such obligation or security, or who shall sell or import the same. (6) Whoever, unauthorized by the Secretary, shall have and retain in his control or possession a distinctive paper which has been adopted by the Secretary of the Treasury for the obligations and other securities of the United States. Leib v. Halligan, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 82, 149 C. C. A. 292.

"Obligations or securities" generally.—The fourth clause was not intended to be limited to those instruments only which purport to be securities or obligations of the United States, or which so closely resemble them in general appearance that they may be said to be made or executed, in whole or in part, after the similitude thereof. In this view it is immaterial whether or not the instrument was criminal in its inception, or was intended to simulate any security of the United States, or in any of its features purports to be an obligation or security of the United States. Leib v. Halligan, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 82, 149 C. C. A. 292.

Obligations issued by state banks.—The authorities are in conflict as to the question whether the possession of a state bank note may constitute the offense punishable by the fourth clause. Thus it has been held that obligations and securities purporting to be obligations and securities issued by a state bank are not in the similitude of any obligation issued by the United States. U. S. v. Connors, (D. C.

Ore. 1901) 111 Fed. 734; U. S. v. Pitts, (N. D. Cal. 1901) 112 Fed. 522. See Contra, however, Leib v. Halligan, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 82, 149 C. C. A. 292, where the authorities are reviewed.

Intent.—To constitute the offense defined in the fourth clause of this section, it is not necessary that there shall be a fraudulent or felonious intent. It is sufficient if the accused has in his possession, with the intent to use or sell, the paper which is there described. Leib v. Haligan, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 82, 149 C. C. A. 292.

1909 Supp., p. 448, sec. 163.

Sufficiency of indictment.—In Linnigen v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 645, 154 C. C. A. 403, holding, on habeas corpus after conviction, that the indictment was sufficient, the court said: "It is alleged in the first count that defendant had in his possession ten pieces of counterfeited coins in the likeness and similitude of the silver coin of the United States, which has been coined at the mints of the United States, commonly called a dollar, and in the second count that appellant uttered as genuine a counterfeited coin in the resemblance and similitude of the silver coin of the United States, which has been coined at the mints of the United States, commonly called a dollar. . . . The allegation in the indictment that appellant knew the coins to be counterfeited followed the terms of section 163 of the Penal Code, while this allegation was unnecessary under section 164. Each count of the indictment sufficiently stated an offense under section 163."

It is not necessary in order to charge a crime under section 163 that the indictment should negative the fact that the coins that defendant possessed or uttered were not minor coins of the United States, when they were described as being in the likeness and similitude of the silver coins of the United States which has been coined at the mints of the United States, commonly called a dollar. Linnigen v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 645, 154 C. C. A. 403.

Evidence—Guilty knowledge of character of coin.—See Hess v. Bowen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 659, 154 C. C. A. 417.

Punishment.—On habeas corpus it is not a ground for the petitioner's discharge from imprisonment that the court omitted to impose a fine upon him, in addition to the sentence of imprisonment, as the petitioner was not injured thereby. Linnigen v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 645, 154 C. C. A. 403.

A defendant may be sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor under this section, although it does not as formerly expressly permit such a sentence. This is due to section 338, Penal Laws, 1909 Supp., p. 496. Linnigen v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 645, 154 C. C. A. 403.

1909 Supp., p. 448, sec. 164.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In Riggio v. U. S., (D. C. Mass. 1915) 223 Fed. 529, a conviction of the defendant for counterfeiting minor coins was upheld on a review of the evidence.

1909 Supp., p. 451, sec. 173.

"United States commissioners are neither judges nor courts, although they at some times act in a quasi judicial capacity and exercise the power of a court in so far as an act of Congress has conferred specific authority or imposed the performance of a special duty. . . . These commissioners may do what they are authorized to do and may issue search warrants when specially authorized to do so by some act of Congress, but they possess no general power in that respect." U. S. v. Jones, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 262.

1909 Supp., p. 456, sec. 190.

Sufficiency of evidence to support verdict.—In Coleman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 711, 152 C. C. A. 545, the evidence in a prosecution under this section and section 192, PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 457, was held sufficient to support a verdict against the plaintiff in error who had been convicted of the crime of breaking into a post office with intent to commit larceny and for stealing postage stamps and money.

Punishment.—Conviction for stealing a money order stamp could not be reversed because of a sentence seemingly over severe, but not excessive in a legal sense nor an abuse of discretion, even though the court may have taken into consideration the fact that the evidence showed the defendant to have been guilty of subornation of perjury in the case. Peterson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 118, 158 C. C. A. 344.

Joinder of counts.—An offense for burglarizing a post office under this section and an offense for stealing certain property of the United States out of that office under PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 418, may be contained in the same indictment in separate counts and the defendant may be found guilty on both counts. Morgan v. Sylvester, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 886, 146 C. C. A. 82.

Evidence.—In Coleman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 711, 152 C. C.

A. 545, it was held that the evidence supporting an indictment charging offenses under this section and section 190, PENAL LAWS, 1909, Supp., p. 456, was sufficient to warrant the case going to the jury.

1909 Supp., p. 457, sec. 194.

"Authorized depository for mail matter."—Boxes placed by tenants for the receipt of mail in the halls of buildings in which they have their places of business must be deemed to be authorized depositories for mail matter within the meaning of this section in view of a regulation promulgated as an order of the Post Office Department prior to the date of an alleged offense constituting "any letter box or other receptacle," etc., "a letter box for the receipt or delivery of mail matter within the meaning of" this Act. Rosen v. U. S., (1918) 245 U. S. 467, 38 S. Ct. 148, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 406.

The top or outside of a letter box, attached to a lamp-post, is not an authorized depository for mail matter. (1883) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 524, followed in U. S. v. Lophansky, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 232 Fed. 257.

Period of federal protection for mail matter.—The protection afforded by this section to mail matter deposited in an "authorized depository" does not cease with such deposit in a privately owned mail box constituted as an "authorized depository" by a valid postal regulation, but continues so long as the letter remains in the box. Rosen v. U. S., (1918) 245 U. S. 467, 38 S. Ct. 148, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 406.

1909 Supp., p. 462, sec. 211.

"It is not enough that the letter or publication merely relate to sexual matters and illicit sexual relations, but it must be clothed in language and contain expressions which, with reasonable persons, tend to excite the sexual desires or passions or corrupt the morals of the reader in that direction." U. S. v. Davidson, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 523, holding that language in a letter charging a woman with being a prostitute, and surrounded by prostitutes and bastards, did not have such tendency.

"Filthy," etc.—"The cases have been substantially uniform (I am not informed of any exception) in holding that a 'filthy' writing or letter, as described in the statute, must be 'filthy' in its relation to or reference to the sexual relations or desires. There are many filthy writings which have no reference to that subject, and I find no case which brings such writings or communications within the statute. . . . I am not content with the restricted construction placed by the courts on the language of section 211 of the Criminal Code, where it adds to the words 'every obscene, lewd, or lascivious,' the words 'and every filthy . . . letter, writing . . . of an indecent character,' as it seems to me it was not the purpose of congress to restrict nonmailable letters to written or printed matter which relates to sexual acts and conduct and matters which will excite or tend to excite libidinous thoughts and sexual desires or debase and degrade the mind and morals of the reader in the direction indicated. . . . I think the language 'filthy . . . letter . . . of an indecent character' brings within the statute a communication sent to another through the mails which would not be covered by the preceding words obscene, lewd, and lascivious if it be a filthy letter of an indecent character, even though it is not of a character which would promote or excite sexual desires and emotions." U. S. v. Davidson, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 523.

Libelous, etc., language.—Written letters, or printed or written matter which are merely abusive, scandalous, scurrilous, improper, intemperate, unjustifiable, offensive, vulgar or highly reprehensible, or even libelous, are not within the prohibitions of this statute. U. S. v. Klauder, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 240 Fed. 501.

Letters.—The word "writing" appeared in the original Act of Congress. The word "letter" or "letters" did not. It was held that a "letter" was not one of the prohibited writings. The construction was based upon the fact that in all its other legislation, when Congress meant to include letters, it had used that word. U. S. v. Chase, (1890) 135 U. S. 255, 10 S. Ct. 756, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 117. Following this ruling the word "letters" was inserted by amendment. Since then written messages or correspondence commonly known as letters, sent by one person to another through the mail, have been held to be within the Act. U. S. v. Reinheimer, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 545.

Letter mailed by a person to himself.—The word "letter" as used in the statute does not include a letter or writing mailed by a person to himself. While it is the vile thing itself which is excluded from the mails, and the offense consists in the sending of what is thus excluded, and neither the sender nor the addressee is of any importance, except that it is the one who deposits it in the mail who is the guilty party named by the law, there is, however, involved in the thing condemned the thought of something published, and this element is lacking in a writing mailed by a person to himself. U. S. v. Reinheimer, (E. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 545.

Information as to abortion.—"On the adoption of the Penal Code the clauses 'where or by whom any act or operation of any kind for the procuring or production of abortion will be done or performed or how or by what means conception may be prevented or abortion produced were introduced into the act. Before that, the statute forbade the use of the mails for obscene literature or writings, for articles and things adapted to prevent conception or produce abortion, and for printed or written matter giving information as to where, how, from whom or by what means such articles or things might be obtained or made. It aimed to keep out of the mails (1) obscene matter; (2) articles or things designed or intended for a use denounced by the act as immoral; and (3) written or printed matter in respect to such articles. Until the amendment, however, a letter or other written or printed information in respect, not to the articles excluded from the mails, but to the act of abortion, did not fall within the statute. We cannot concur in the contrary views expressed in U. S. v. Somers, (S. D. Cal. 1908) 164 Fed. 259, under which the word 'thing' in the original act was held to cover such a letter." Bours v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 960, 144 C. C. A. 242.

Sufficiency of indictment.—An indictment which charged that the defendant mailed a letter consisting of the figures "938" and "100" posted on the back of a circular, in answer to a letter of inquiry as to a proposed abortion, and which stated that the figures so posted on the back of the circular "then and there gave information that divers articles and things designed, adapted, and intended for producing abortion might be obtained at 938 Fillmore street at a cost of $100" sufficiently charged an offense. Wetzel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 984, 147 C. C. A. 658.

Joinder of counts.—A count charging a violation of this section by mailing a "filthy" letter was properly joined with a count charging violation of Penal Laws, section 212 by mailing a letter having "indecent" and "defamatory" terms on the envelope, where the acts of defendant were directed against one and the same person, were of the same general nature, and were clearly closely connected in point of time. U. S. v. Davidson, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 523.

Multiple counts for same offense.—An objection to an indictment that it charged one offense in three counts should be made by motion to require the prosecution to elect, and not by a motion to quash. A defect, that all the counts are for the same offense, would be no ground for quashing all the counts, and motions to quash are not favored by the courts. Wetzel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 984, 147 C. C. A. 658.

Power of court on demurrer.—On demurrer to an indictment the court has only power to decide whether the book or paper or letter is so clearly innocent that a jury should not pass on it at all.

U. S. v. Klauder, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 240 Fed. 501.

Evidence—Character of prosecuting witness.—On the trial of an indictment charging the sending through the mails of an indecent letter, evidence as to the reputation of the prosecuting witness for chastity in the community is not admissible. The statute has regard only to the character of the letter, and not to the character of the person to whom it is addressed. Robbins v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 987, 144 C. C. A. 269.

1909 Supp., p. 463, sec. 212.

See notes to POSTAL SERVICE, vol. V, p. 849, § 3, post, p. 1365.

1909 Supp., p. 463, sec. 213.

An advertisement in a newspaper that its photographers would take snapshots of women shoppers in the shopping district, that these pictures would be developed in the usual way and then published with their heads cut off, and inviting the women photographed to identify their headless photo and offering a five dollar gold piece for each identification, was held not to fall within this section, as it did not present a lottery scheme because a lottery involves a scheme for raising money by selling chances to share in a distribution of prizes, a scheme for the distribution of prizes by chance. Neither was it a gift enterprise nor the kind of lot or chance which the Act of Congress strikes against, because the particular kind of chance involved in the advertisement in question did not require a parting with anything by members of the public for the prize offered. Post Pub. Co. v. Murray, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 773, 145 C. C. A. 83.

1909 Supp., p. 464, sec. 215.

See also notes to POSTAL SERVICE, vol. V, p. 973, sec. 5480, post, p. 1366.

Constitutionality.—Religious freedom secured by the Constitution is not infringed by this statutory provision so far as it undertakes to punish a person from pretending to entertain certain views, alleged by him to be of a religious character, for the false and fraudulent purpose of procuring money or other things of value from third parties by the use of the post office establishment, where the defendant's good faith is the cardinal question in determining his guilt. New v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 710, 158 C. C. A. 112.

What constitutes unlawful scheme.—In New v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 710, 158 C. C. A. 112, the court affirmed a conviction of the defendant for using the mails to obtain money, etc., by falsely pretending to be one who had attained the supernatural state of self-immortality in the body by abstinence from divers evil practices, thus enabling him to conquer disease, death, poverty, and misery, and that this power could be transmitted by him to others who were willing to accept his teachings and pay therefor the sums demanded by him.

Limitations.—If the scheme or artifice was devised more than three years prior to the return of the indictment, but was in existence and the defendant was operating under it within three years, the case would be without the statute of limitations and might be prosecuted. Bowers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 641, 157 C. C. A. 89.

Sufficiency of indictment.—In New v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 710, 158 C. C. A. 112, affirming a conviction for violation of this section, the court said: "It [the indictment] alleges various pretensions and promises of the defendant, New, which are alleged to have been false and fraudulent, and to have been made for the purpose of obtaining money and other things of value from others, and it alleges that in pursuance of that fraudulent scheme he deposited in the post office certain letters, one of which was set out in each count of the indictment. Those alleged facts are essential elements of the offense denounced by the statute upon which the indictment was based, but all that are essential."

Charging fraud.—"The gist of the offense is the improper use of the mails. While the fraudulent design is essential, it is merely an element of the crime. As where an indictment charges burglary to commit theft, the theft is not described with the same particularity as if theft were the offense, so, in charging the use of the mails to defraud, the fraud need not be stated with the technical details required when swindling, or a like crime, is the subject of the indictment. . . . There is no rule that the description of a fraudulent scheme should mention all the auxiliary devices." Whitehead v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 385, 157 C. C. A. 547.

Evidence—In general.—The only essential elements being the fraudulent scheme and the use of the mails in its execution, the extent of success of the scheme as charged is in no manner necessary to be shown. Preeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 156 C. C. A. 429.

Intent.—In Lyman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 945, 154 C. C. A. 581, the court said: "Nor do we see any merit in the contention on the part of the plaintiff in error that the court erred in giving to the jury this instruction: 'Replying to the question which you have propounded to me, I instruct you that the mailing of a letter without the fraudulent intent would be no crime. If, however, the evidence satisfies you beyond a reasonable doubt that the fraudulent intent was in the mind of the defendant before the mailing of any one of the letters mentioned in the indictment, then, as to the count in which that letter is set forth, the fraudulent intent is sufficiently established.' The question of the juror, to which the foregoing was the response, was as follows: 'Juror Brownstein: We would like to be enlightened in regard to the alleged intent of the defendant to defraud. Are we to consider his intent at the time of organizing the Panama Development Company, or at the time the several letters in the indictment were written and mailed, or any subsequent time?' . . . We see nothing in the case of Durland v. U. S., [1896] 161 U. S. [306] 314, 16 S. Ct. 508, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 709, relied upon by the plaintiff in error, justifying us in holding the instruction complained of erroneous."

On the trial of an indictment for using the mails to solicit from physicians, surgeons, and dentists accounts for collection upon commission, with the purpose of converting to defendant's use all such collections, an advertisement published by the defendant while he was carrying on such business of collecting offering to sell a half interest in "an exclusive business now paying more than $250 per month" was admissible as tending to show representations which could be made good only by appropriating collections. Clark v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 112, 157 C. C. A. 408.

Similar schemes.—The evidence of another, but similar, venture by the accused, is properly received as bearing on the question of fraudulent intent. Trent v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 648, 143 C. C. A. 170.

As the fraudulent intent is one of the material allegations in the indictment, evidence of other and similar ventures by the accused is properly admissible as bearing on the question of intent. Riddell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 695, 157 C. C. A. 143.

Letters set forth in the indictment as having been mailed in execution of the scheme to defraud need not be to or from the intended victim of the fraud in order to be admissible. The execution of the scheme may be most effectually furthered, and the purpose of its execution or attempted execution most directly served, through communications by mail between the persons who concocted or entered into it. Preeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 156 C. C. A. 429.

Letters alleged in the indictment to have been deposited in the mails in pursuance of the alleged scheme are of course admissible in evidence against the defendant. New v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 710, 158 C. C. A. 112.

If prior to and at the time a letter set forth as an overt act was mailed by the defendant the alleged fraudulent scheme had been devised, and the defendant intentionally and for the purpose of carrying out the scheme wrote the letter described and mailed it within three years prior to the filing of the indictment, it was not necessary that the letter should on its face show that it was in furtherance of the scheme to defraud in order to render it admissible. Bowers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 641, 157 C. C. A. 89.

Proved copies of letters mailed to the defendant have been held admissible without otherwise accounting for the absence of the originals. Trent v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 648, 143 C. C. A. 170.

The mailing of letters may be shown by evidence of the custom and course of men's private offices and business. The mailing of letters postage prepaid raises a presumption of their receipt by the addressee. Watlington v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 247, 147 C. C. A. 253.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In Sprinkle v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 111, 156 C. C. A. 539, the evidence was held sufficient to sustain a conviction for violation of this section by using the mails to obtain purchasers of pianos at a "sale price" fraudulently designed to look like a "marked down" price.

In Bowers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 641, 157 C. C. A. 89, the evidence there recited was held to be clearly sufficient for submission to the jury under appropriate instructions, and a conviction of using the mails in execution of a scheme to defraud by the sale of land was affirmed.

Search warrants.—"All that the case of Weeks v. U. S., [1914] 232 U. S. 383, 34 S. Ct. 341, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 652, L. R. A. 1915B 834, Ann. Cas. 1915C 1177, really decides is that when a person is accused of the commission of a crime and arrested by an officer without a warrant of arrest, and while so held away from his home other officers of the law without a search warrant go to his home and enter it without permission, no one being at home, and make a search of his rooms and furniture, and find and seize and without the consent of such arrested person take away his letters and envelopes of an incriminating nature and other property found on such premises and in any furniture found thereon used by him, such acts constitute an illegal search and seizure, and the papers and property so seized must be returned, and that the court has power, and it is its duty, under such circumstances, to direct and compel the United States attorney to whom such papers have been delivered to return same to the owner. However, considerable is said in the opinion of the court in that case which throws some light on the questions here involved, Whether the issuing and execution of search warrants in criminal cases is limited to cases where Congress has expressly provided for their issue and execution is a question, and an important question. From the fact that Congress has specifically provided for the issue and execution of search warrants in revenue cases, in counterfeiting cases, and in customs cases only, we may infer that no such power exists in reference to post office depredations and post office fraud cases, such as the use of the United States mails in the execution of a scheme to defraud, in violation of section 215 of the Penal Code of the United States." U. S. v. Jones, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 262.

In the absence of a search warrant books and papers may not be legally seized, and if so seized and used in a prosecution under this section a conviction of the defendant will be reversed. Flagg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 481, 147 C. C. A. 367.

Instructions.—Where the court instructs on a particular subject and the defendant desires more specific instructions thereon he should take exception to the charge, bringing to the court's notice the ground of exception. Riddell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 695, 157 C. C. A. 143.

Puffing wares.—In Chambers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 513, 150 C. C. A. 395, plaintiffs in error were convicted of devising a scheme to defraud by means of the mails, the scheme being to sell land under water in Florida by false representations as to the character, fertility, and value of the land, and as to its availability for profitable farming operations, and for occupation by comfortable homes. On the appeal the court said: "Complaint is made that the court refused to give a requested instruction to the effect (1) that men engaged in the business of selling land have the habit of puffing their wares, and so long as the statements made are within any proper reasonable bounds they are not criminally liable; (2) that in order to find that the defendants devised a scheme to defraud in the sale of this land the jury must find that the statements which were made amounted actually to a substantial deception of those to whom the lands were attempted to be sold; and (3) that a certain degree of commendation by these defendants of their lands was allowable, and was not criminal, so long as the statements were not actually made in bad faith and with intention to deceive. There was, however, no error in refusing to give this instruction, because the second proposition in it is not the law, and because the first and third propositions, in the absence of any qualifications to the effect that positive statements of material existing facts calculated to deceive, such as the statements that the soil of the land is black muck and is worth $.6 a ton as fertilizer, do not fall within the category of innocent puffing, were indefinite, misleading, and inapplicable to the misrepresentations of facts of this nature on trial in the case in hand."

Question for jury.—The question whether a scheme to defraud was devised by the defendant and was carried out by the use of the mails is one of fact. Cooper v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 81, 146 C. C. A. 273.

Verdict of acquittal as res judicata.—A verdict of acquittal under this section is in no sense res judicata and does not prevent a writ for an injunction by the defendant against a postmaster to restrain the enforcement of a fraud order issued under R. S. secs. 3929, 4041 (see the title POSTAL SERVICE, vol. V, pp. 872, 946). Sanden v. Morgan, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 266.

1909 Supp., p. 466, sec. 218.

Conviction for aiding and abetting under indictment as principal.—One who knowingly aided or abetted another to alter a money order, though the change was not made by him, may be held guilty under an indictment charging him as a principal—by force of PENAL LAWS, § 332, 1909 Supp., p. 495. Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 568, 158 C. C. A. 538.

Evidence was held sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section for having altered a postal money order in Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 568, 158 C. C. A. 538, where the evidence is recapitulated.

1909 Supp., p. 470, sec. 232.

Nature of statute.—This and the following sections 233–235 of the Code (PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 471) "are important regulations of commerce, designed for the protection of the lives of passengers and others, and must also be regarded as an important safeguard for the prevention of the use of instrumentalities of interstate and foreign commerce in aid of crimes which involve the use of high explosives" and a violation of them was regarded by Congress as of such serious character as to rank as a felony. Horn v. Mitchell, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 819, 147 C. C. A. 13.

Application—Generally.—These sections do not make illegal the transportation of explosives, but only their transportation on vessels or vehicles operated by a common carrier, and carrying passengers for hire or otherwise in violation of their provisions. The mode of conveyance rather than the transportation itself is the ground of offense, and a disregard of the safety of fellow passengers on trains engaged in interstate commerce, and a violation of the statutory regulations of interstate commerce constitute the gravamen of the offense. Horn v. Mitchell, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 819, 147 C. C. A. 13.

1909 Supp., p. 471, sec. 235.

Defenses.—One who is charged with a violation of this section cannot set up as a defense that he was an officer in a foreign country engaged in war and that he was so transporting the explosive for the purpose of using it in an alleged act of war in the territory of the enemy. Horn v. Mitchell, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 819, 147 C. C. A. 13.

1909 Supp., p. 473, sec. 239.

Construction.—"This Act, notwithstanding its penal character, should be reasonably construed with a view to carry out the purpose for which it was enacted." Danciger v. Cooley, (1916) 98 Kan. 484, 158 Pac. 1119, denying rehearing (1916) 98 Kan. 38, 157 Pac. 453.

Retroactive effect.—This section cannot be used as an instrument of interpretation from which to deduce the conclusion that the power of a state to prohibit shipments of intoxicating liquors in interstate commerce under c. o. d. contracts existed prior to its enactment. Rosenberger v. Pacific Express Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 48, 36 S. Ct. 510, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 880.

Agent collecting purchase price.—But where it appeared that liquor dealers received written orders from their customers, and shipped the liquor to their own order mailing the bill of lading to their agent who delivered it to the customer for whom the liquor was intended and collected the purchase price, it was held that this section was violated. Danciger v. Cooley, (1916) 98 Kan. 38, 157 Pac. 453, rehearing denied (1916) 98 Kan. 484, 158 Pac. 1119.

1909 Supp., p. 473, sec. 240.

Marking packages—State laws.—So far as markings and inscriptions are contained on packages containing intoxicants, Congress has expressly exercised its power to regulate the interstate shipment, and has furthermore made forfeiture to the United States of the goods shipped a part of the penalty for non-compliance. In that respect it has occupied the whole field and by necessary implication has excluded others therefrom, as much so as it could have done by express prohibition. Hence a state statute requiring packages of intoxicating liquor transported within the state or to any point therein to be marked in a particular manner is void. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Giles, (D. C. Colo. 1916) 235 Fed. 804.

Regulations.—It is not within the province of the Treasury Department to prescribe regulations governing the marking of imported liquors to conform to this section, since this is a criminal statute which has no reference to the collection of either internal revenue or duties on imports, and there is no statute authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to formulate rules and regulations for the enforcement of a general criminal statute which has no relation to the collection of revenue. (1909) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 99.

Sufficiency.—In U. S. v. Hillsdale Distillery Co., (D. C. N. D. 1917) 242 Fed. 536, it was urged that the label required by this section should specify the particular kind and quantity of each if more than one kind was contained in the package. The court held that this was not a sound interpretation of the law.

The statute requires that the particulars, it mentions shall be "plainly" shown on the label. Any attempt to evade the law by failing to set forth the particulars truthfully, or to disclose them plainly, falls within the condemnation of the statute. The label should be devoted to disclosing the facts mentioned in the statute, and not to advertising. Any attempt to cover up with advertising matter the facts which the law requires the label to reveal, so as readily to catch the eye, violates the law. U. S. v. Hillsdale Distillery Co., (D. C. N. D. 1917) 242 Fed. 536.

1909 Supp., p. 474, sec. 245.

Response to decoy letters.—The fact that an offense was committed at the instance of government officials through decoy letters asking that obscene publications be sent to a fictitious person does not excuse the offender. "The system of detecting crime by the use of decoy letters, or decoy witnesses, is necessary to the proper administration of criminal justice, and is in quite general use. It does not of itself excuse the offender, unless a constituent element of the crime be thereby removed." Hanish v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 584, 142 C. C. A. 216.

Fictitious consignee.—When a publication is sent by interstate express the fact that it is billed to a fictitious person does not affect the character of the transaction as commerce. Hanish v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 584, 142 C. C. A. 216.

Prior conviction of principal.—It is not necessary that a bankrupt should first be convicted before bringing to trial one charged with aiding and abetting in the concealment of assets from a trustee in bankruptcy. Kaufman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 613, 129 C. C. A. 149, Ann. Cas. 1916C 466.

Indictment—Duplicity.—An indictment which charged the teller of a national bank with the abstraction of the moneys or funds of the bank and that he embezzled the moneys or funds of the bank, and which in the same counts charged that other defendants aided and abetted him in such abstraction, or misapplication or embezzlement, was held not demurrable for duplicity, since under 'this section such aiders and abettors become principals in the same offense. U. S. v. Rogers, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 512.

1909 Supp., p. 495, sec. 335.

"Ought to be repealed."—In U. S. v. Gaag, (D. C. Mont. 1916) 237 Fed. 728, the court said of this section that it "harks back to barbaric days, and ought to be repealed."

A violation of the Anti-Drug Act of Dec. 17, 1914 (1916 Supp., p. 101), though but a mere statutory infraction, and not a true crime, is by the arbitrary classification of this section a felony. U. S. v. Gaag, (D. C. Mont. 1916) 237 Fed. 728.

Effect on R. S. sec. 5209.—This section has no effect upon R. S. sec. 5209 (see NATIONAL BANKS, vol. V, p. 145), except to define as a felony the offense therein described. Hoss v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 328, 146 C. C. A. 376; Sheridan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 305, 149 C. C. A. 437.

PERJURY

Vol. V, p. 701, sec. 5392.

The provisions in the Bankruptcy Act, § 7a (9) (see vol. I, p. 560), that no testimony given by a bankrupt on his examination shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding, has reference only to crimes committed previous to the giving of such testimony, and not to any criminal proceeding based on a crime inherent in the bankrupt's examination, and in a prosecution for perjury committed during the examination the alleged false testimony not only may be given in evidence, but any other testimony of defendant given in the examination which is relevant to the issue and tends to establish the falsity of that on which the prosecution is based. U. S. v. Coyle, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 256.

Civil service commission.—An applicant for a position in the civil service of the United States who in his sworn application required by the civil service commission knowingly makes false statements commits perjury. U. S. v. Crandol, (E. D. Va. 1916) 233 Fed. 331.

Indictment.—In U. S. v. Coyle, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 256, the indictment charged that Patrick H. Coyle of Oneida, N. Y., on the 15th day of December, 1915, at the city of Oneida, in the northern district of New York, took an oath before George D. Russell, special master duly appointed by the court in bankruptcy, and then and there acting as such, that he would testify truly in the matter of Patrick H. Coyle, alleged bankrupt. The pendency of the proceeding was alleged, and the fact that the said Russell had authority to administer the oath. The indictment then charged that while being so examined and giving evidence before the said special master in the said proceeding, and in violation of section 125 of the Criminal Code of the United States of America [1909 Supp., p. 437], said Coyle—"did willfully and contrary to said oath testify and state to the following question, to wit, 'Have you since October 24, 1915, by cash, check, or otherwise transferred, paid or set over or in any manner placed in the possession of your wife Mrs. Coyle, or your son, Frederick Coyle, any money whatsoever, except the $150 and the $75?' the answer, 'No sir,' which said answer, testimony and statement of the said defendant Patrick H. Coyle was and is a material one for the purpose of ascertaining the assets of the said Patrick H. Coyle and the disposition of the same, and which said answer, testimony, and statement was false and untrue, in that he, the said defendant, Patrick H. Coyle, theretofore and on the 15th day of November, 1915, paid to his son Frederick J. Coyle the sum of $450, as he, the said defendant Patrick H. Coyle, then and there well knew," etc. It was held, on demurrer, that this indictment was sufficient.

Vol. V, p. 705, sec. 5393.

Oath required by law.—In U. S. v. Morehead, (1917) 243 U. S. 607, 37 S. Ct. 458, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 926, it appeared that one Morehead was indicted under section 37 of PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 415, for conspiring with others to commit the offense of subornation of perjury in connection with soldiers' declaratory statements, to be filed by defendant as agent, covering public lands under the Homestead Law. The perjury set forth in the indictment consisted in false swearing before notaries public and clerks of state courts to declaratory statements. It was contended by the defendant that the perjury was not committed because the oaths were not taken before persons authorized to take oaths in such a proceeding, but the court held to the contrary.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Vol. V, p. 722, sec. 10.

Appellate review now confined to certiorari, see Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, §§ 5 and 6, ante, this volume, title JUDICIARY, p. 422.

Vol. 5, p. 722, sec. 10.

Mode of review.—Writ of error was the proper method by which to review the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Philippines in a proceeding for registration of certain property under the Torrens System. Gauzon v. Compania General, etc., (1917) 245 U. S. 86, 38 S. Ct. 46, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 165.

But on appeal and writ of error to review a decree in favor of defendant in a suit in which plaintiffs, in addition to claiming damages, prayed for cancellation of a certain contract and of the mortgages given to secure it, and defendant asked for affirmative relief and for an accounting and damages, the court said: "The action being of an equitable nature, the proper method of review is by appeal, and the writ of error will be dismissed."

Montelibano v. La Compania General De Tabacos, (1916) 241 U. S. 455, 36 S. Ct. 617, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1099.

Scope of review.—Upon a writ of error to review a judgment in a proceeding for registration under the Torrens System, the court will not reconsider the conclusions of the lower court, which find support in the record, in reaching its judgment. Gauzon v. Compania General, etc., (1917) 245 U. S. 86, 38 S. Ct. 46, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1651.

Appellate jurisdiction in divorce cases.—The general rule that the federal courts have no jurisdiction of the subject of divorce or alimony does not preclude an appeal from a decree of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands reversing a decree of the court of first instance, granting a divorce to a wife and awarding her as alimony pendente lite, and as her share of the conjugal property, a sum in excess of $25,000. De La Rama v. De La Rama, (1906) 201 U. S. 303, 26 S. Ct. 485, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 765; (1916) 241 U. S. 154, 36 Stat. 518, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 932.

Action on bond for loss of registered package.—In U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 397, 143 C. C. A. 517, (see also (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 433, 158 C. C. A. 497) the court said: "The only issue involved in this case is whether, in view of the fact that under the regulations of the Post Office Department the government is only responsible in case of a loss of a registered package for an amount not exceeding $50, it can recover from the sureties on the bond of its employee, who embezzled a registered package containing a sum of money in excess of $50, the full amount lost, provided it is not in excess of the penalty of the bond. This identical question was before us in National Surety Co. v. U. S., [C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904] 129 Fed. 70, 63 C. C. A. 512. It was there held that there could be such a recovery. This case is ruled by that decision, and it is unnecessary to add anything to it."

Vol. V, p. 849, sec. 3.

Threatening language.—The following language written upon a postal card was held to be of a threatening character: "In re Unique Tailor Co. v. Fox, District Court. Your breach of stipulation has caused this case against you to be again placed in the hands of the proper officials for serving summons and complaint—this was held up since Aug. 2d and was to be held until 18th inst.—you will find same directed to you at proper address this time and no nonsense will be tolerated as before." U. S. v. Prendergast, (D. C. Ore. 1916) 237 Fed. 410.

"Defamatory" language.—Placing on an envelope an abbreviation following the female addressee's name known to the writer and to the recipient of the enclosed letter, as disclosed by the contents of such letter to the recipient thereof and to no one else, to charge immorality, etc., but which abbreviation to all others would have only an innocent signification, is not a violation of this section. U. S. v. Davidson, (N. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 523, thus holding as to word "Pros." alleged to be an abbreviation of "prostitute;" since "of itself, 'Pros.' does not suggest, even remotely, anything either indecent, lewd, lascivious, obscene, libelous, scurrilous, or of a defamatory character."

Vol. V, p. 872, sec. 3929.

A fraud order for retention of mail of one who was selling electric belts advertised to increase and preserve the sexual powers of men was justified by the admitted existence of some recent and fraudulent quackery in his business. Hall v. Willcox, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 225 Fed. 333.

In Sanden v. Morgan, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 266, the court denied a motion for a preliminary injunction to restrain the defendant postmaster from enforcing a "fraud order" issued by the Postmaster General, the plaintiff in this suit being in receipt of about $500 a day for belts generating and conveying electric currents.

Vol. V, p. 883, sec. 3950.

A contract of partnership for the expressed purpose of operating mail routes in the event that one of the partners should obtain contracts therefor, was not invalid, where there was no fact or circumstance from which a purpose to prevent competition in bidding might be inferred. Hegness v. Chilberg, (C. C. A.

9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 28, 139 C. C. A. 492, the court saying: "In Bellocks v. Russell, [1845] 20 N. H. 427, 51 Am. Dec. 238, it was held that an agreement that one shall bid for several for a mail contract is not void unless made for some illegal purpose affecting public policy."

Vol. V, p. 893, sec. 3962.

Nature of power to impose fine.—"This power to impose a fine is one that is not known to the common law and cannot be enlarged by inference or intendment." Great Northern R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 433, 149 C. C. A. 485.

Fines "for other delinquencies."—In Great Northern R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 433, 149 C. C. A. 485, the court upheld the action of the Postmaster General in imposing upon the railroad company a fine of $400 on account of the wreck of a mail train at a point on the company's route.

Fines for delinquencies in a prior term in a previous contract may be deducted from the earnings of a subsequent term in a later contract, where it appears that the contracts were made with implied acquiescence in the interpretation by the Post Office Department of contracts of this character that the Postmaster General had such power. Great Northern R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 433, 149 C. C. A. 485.

Vol. V, p. 895, sec. 3963.

A contract of partnership for operating mail routes under contracts to be obtained in the name of one of the parties is not an assignment or transfer condemned by this section. Hegness v. Chilberg, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 28, 139 C. C. A. 492.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 974)

This section is not beyond the power of Congress as applied to what may be a mere incident of a fraudulent scheme that itself is outside the jurisdiction of Congress to deal with. Whatever the limits to its power, it may forbid any such acts done in furtherance of a scheme that it regards as contrary to public policy, whether it can forbid the scheme or not. Badders v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 391, 36 S. Ct. 367, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 706.

The overt act of putting a letter into the post office of the United States is a matter that Congress may regulate, and it may make the deposit of each letter a separate offense. Badders v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 391, 36 S. Ct. 367, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 706.

The history and purpose and the changes made therein in PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 464, § 215, are set forth in Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265.

The purpose of the amendment to former R. S. sec. 5480, enacted March 2, 1889, (see vol. V, p. 974) was not to restrict but to extend the operation of the statute. Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265.

Conspiracy contrasted.—"The scheme to defraud denounced by the statute is a crime wholly different from conspiracy, and not to be confounded with the offense known as obtaining money under false pretenses. Emanuel v. U. S., [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1912] 196 Fed. [317] at 322, 116 C. C. A. 137. The gist of conspiracy is the agreement, the substance of an offense under section 215 [PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 464] is the prosecution of a fraudulent purpose, toward the execution or fulfillment whereof the mail is used. One man may form and accomplish it, with or without assistance; but all who with criminal intent join themselves even slightly to the principal schemer are subject to the statute, although they may know nothing but their own share in the aggregate wrongdoing. One man may render the scheme unitary, though he has the assistance of many others at different times." Schwartzberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 348, 154 C. C. A. 228.

II. SCHEME OR ARTIFICE TO DEFRAUD (p. 975)

The scheme to defraud condemned by this section is not confined to devices by which it is intended that the customer shall receive nothing for his money. Sparks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917)

241 Fed. 777, 154 C. C. A. 479; Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265; Freeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 156 C. C. A. 429.

Frauds perpetrated upon particular investors in order to prop up a failing enterprise not fraudulent in itself are not the class of frauds denounced by this section. There is a "real and vital difference between business projects which end and result in loss and disaster to the investors, and schemes which were intended to defraud their victims." U. S. v. Bachman, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 246 Fed. 1009, denying a motion in arrest and for a new trial after verdict of conviction.

While the word "artifice" signifies deceit or trickery the word "scheme" does not necessarily involve trickery or cunning. A scheme may include a plan or device for the legitimate accomplishment of an object. Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265.

"Defraud."—The artifice or scheme must be designed to defraud but the term defraud means only the wrongful purpose of injuring another. Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265.

This section does not require that the scheme should be fraudulent upon its face. All that is necessary is that it be a scheme reasonably calculated to deceive persons of ordinary comprehension and prudence and that the mail service of the United States be used and intended to be used in execution of the same. Oesting v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 304, 148 C. C. A. 206.

Relation of scheme to United States laws.—The scheme to defraud need have no original relation whatever to the laws of the United States. The mere incidental or unpremeditated use of the mails may give to the federal courts the trial of any state law offense which involves defrauding another person—this result being accomplished by the broad definitions of "defraud" and "scheme or artifice" which are now accepted. Hendrey v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 5, 147 C. C. A. 75.

This section "includes everything designed to defraud by representations as to the past or present, or suggestions and promises as to the future. The significant fact is the intent and purpose. . . . It was with the purpose of protecting the public against all such intentional efforts to despoil, and to prevent the post office from being used to carry them into effect, that this statute was passed; and it would strip it of value to confine it to such cases as disclose an actual misrepresentation as to some existing fact, and exclude those in which is only the allure-ment of a specious and glittering promise." Durland v. U. S., (1896) 161 U. S. 306, 16 S. Ct. 508, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 709, followed in U. S. v. Stever, (1911) 222 U. S. 167, 32 S. Ct. 51, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 145; Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265; Moffatt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 522, 146 C. C. A. 480.

Scheme as designed to defraud public generally.—"That in order to fall within the statute, a scheme need not be designed to defraud the public generally or the credulous especially, is established by Weeber v. U. S., (C. C. [Colo. 1894]) 62 Fed. 740, decided at the circuit by Mr. Justice Brewer (Judges Caldwell and Sanborn concurring), and by the decision of the court in Horman v. U. S., [C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1902] 116 Fed. 350, 53 C. C. A. 570, in an opinion written by the present Mr. Justice Day, in each of which cases a scheme to blackmail directed solely and specifically against a given individual or group of individuals was held a scheme to defraud within the meaning of the statute. An application for writ of certiorari in the Horman case was denied by the Supreme Court ([1902] 187 U. S. 641, 23 S. Ct. 841, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 345)." Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265.

Exaggerations.—"There can be an honest, though mistaken, judgment of the future from existing conditions; even sincere but visionary optimism is allowable. But there can also be alluring suggestions and predictions of what will come to pass, put forth without reasonable warrant and with the fraudulent intent to profit by inducing belief and reliance among the credulous and uninformed. In fact that is one of the most successful methods of defrauding well-meaning people, who hope to relieve the stress of limited incomes." Moffatt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 522, 146 C. C. A. 480.

Ordering a diamond ring by mail with intent not to pay for it amounts to a scheme or artifice to defraud. Tucker v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 833, 140 C. C. A. 279.

False statement of financial condition.—See Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265; U. S. v. Akers, (N. D. Ga. 1916) 232 Fed. 963.

It is a violation of this section to make use of the mails to circulate a false statement concerning the financial condition of a bank, the purpose being to defraud. Sparks v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 777, 154 C. C. A. 479, McDonald v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 793, 154 C. C. A. 495.

In Kaplan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 389, 143 C. C. A. 509, it was said that the crucial question was whether or not the defendant devised a scheme to defraud by using false statements of his financial condition to induce the sale to him on credit of a large quantity of goods which, had the truth been known, would not have been sold. There was a conviction which was affirmed.

Scheme relating to discounting and sale of promissory paper.—Inducing persons to part with their money in the discount or purchase of promissory paper may amount to a scheme to defraud. Hart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 911, 153 C. C. A. 597.

Selling stock, etc., of corporation.—In Looker v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 932, 153 C. C. A. 618, the charge was that Looker, with one McLaughlin (who died before trial), devised a scheme for obtaining money by false pretenses from divers persons, by means of selling the stock and debenture certificates of a corporation, called the Monaton Company, and thereupon in furtherance thereof sent by mail copies of a resolution of the directors of the Monaton Company and circular letters to divers persons, naming them in the several counts. It was held that the defendant could be convicted although the evidence showed that the corporation was engaged in a lawful business.

Fraudulent promises respecting medicine or medical treatment.—In Hughes v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 50, 145 C. C. A. 238, an indictment showing a scheme to defraud by physicians was held sufficient.

In Samuels v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 536, 146 C. C. A. 494, Ann. Cas. 1917A 711, the scheme to defraud related to misrepresentation as to the virtues of certain medicines, and there was a conviction.

A person falsely representing himself as a physician professionally equipped and specially trained in the diagnosis and treatment of certain diseases and ailments for the purpose of inspiring intended dupes with confidence in him and trust in his judgment of their condition is guilty of the offense of devising a scheme to defraud within the meaning of this statute. U. S. v. Smith, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 222 Fed. 165.

Fraudulent promises respecting divine healing.—See U. S. v. Schlatter, (S. D. Cal. 1916) 235 Fed. 381.

Scheme devised by individual and not corporation.—In Oesting v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 304, 148 C. C. A. 206, the question arose whether the indictment sufficiently showed that the defendant, an individual, and not a corporation, devised the scheme, and the court said: "Referring to the charge that the plaintiff in error, under the name and guise of 'Dr. Jordan, L. J. Jordan, Incorporated, and Jordan Museum of Anatomy,' devised a certain scheme and artifice to defraud, etc., the objection is made that the charge is equivalent to saying that a corporation conceived the scheme, and that the defendant is charged only with acting for the corporation. No such meaning can be found in the language of the charge. It distinctly alleges that the defendant acted under the guise of a corporation, and that he conceived the scheme. It would make no difference whether there was or was not such a corporation, so long as the defendant devised the scheme to defraud, whether acting for the corporation or in his own behalf."

Where two or more persons jointly devise and execute a scheme to defraud by the use of the mails, they may thereby become in effect partners in the criminal purpose of so using the mails to defraud. If they do, the acts of each thereafter, during the existence and execution of the scheme, done in furtherance of that execution, may become the acts of all the partners, and each may be convicted of the mailing of a letter which one of his partners caused to be mailed in the execution of the scheme. Chambers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 513, 150 C. C. A. 395.

Intent.—In McDonald v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 793, 154 C. C. A. 495, where the defendants were convicted of using the mails to circulate a false statement as to the financial condition of a bank, it was held that their guilt should be determined by their actual intent to defraud rather than by their carelessness or recklessness in banking, or violation of banking laws.

III. OPENING CORRESPONDENCE THROUGH THE MAILS (p. 978)

In general.—"Under section 215 it is not essential that the use of the mails be contemplated by the fraudulent scheme. It may have been carefully designed to avoid using the mails altogether, but if in the execution of the scheme the mails are in fact used, the act is violated. Farmer v. U. S., 223 Fed. 903, 139 C. C. A. 341." Preeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 156 C. C. A. 429.

The word "letter" occurring in the statute is a comprehensive term. An envelope properly stamped and directed, containing a money order only, payable to the addressee, is, according to the popular understanding and in law, a letter. It may be written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, as is usually the case with money orders. Finnegan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 561, 145 C. C. A. 447.

Decoy letters.—In Freeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 353, the court said: "It is contended that the writing and mailing of the letters which are set out in the indictment were not criminal, and do not constitute crimes, for the reason that the letters were solicited by the United States post office inspectors in letters written by them and sent through the mails to Dr. Jordan as decoy letters, that the government officers initiated the crime, and that the case is thereby brought within the principle of the decisions of this court in Woo Wai v. U. S., [C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915] 223 Fed. [412] 414, 137 C. C. A. 604, and Sam Yick v. U. S., [C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917] 240 Fed. 60 [153 C. C. A. 96]. The ruling in each of the cases so referred to was based upon the ground that the government officers had suggested the crime and induced its commission, and that the offense did not have its origin in the mind of the accused. The distinction between those cases and the case at bar is plain. Here the accused was suspected of being engaged in using the mails in a scheme to defraud. It was to ascertain whether such was the case, and not to suggest the commission of a crime which otherwise would not have been committed, that the decoy letters were written. The case comes clearly within the doctrine of Grimm v. U. S., [1895] 156 U. S. 604, 15 S. Ct. 470, 39 (L. ed.) 550."

Letters to victims after receipt of money.—"The scheme alleged, being one for obtaining money through the fraudulent representations and practices set forth, the use of the mails, even after the money is received, for the purpose of assisting in retaining the money, or to convey to the victim assurances calculated to lull him into inaction and to postpone, perhaps indefinitely, his taking action in respect to his loss, is within the purview of the law, which condemns depositing in or taking from the mails any letters, etc., for the purpose of executing any scheme to defraud." Preeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 156 C. C. A. 429.

IV. DEPOSITING AND RECEIVING LETTERS FROM THE MAIL (p. 979)

Mailing by agent.—The mailing of a letter by an agent of the defendant is a mailing by the defendant. U. S. v. Kenofskey, (1917) 243 U. S. 440, 37 S. Ct. 438, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, reversing (E. D. La. 1916) 235 Fed. 1019; Trent v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 648, 143 C. C. A. 170.

Where drafts and checks received from victims of a fraudulent scheme by those actively engaged in it were turned over to the defendant, who rendered guilty assistance by turning them over to a local bank for collection, he thereby made the bank his innocent agent, and knowledge was legally imputable to him of the custom of banks to forward such paper for collection by mail, so that when the bank deposited the letters of transmittal in the mails, he, in contemplation of law, caused it to do so. Spear v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 250, 158 C. C. A. 410.

V. INDICTMENT AND SENTENCE (p. 981)

Indictment—In general.—In Riddell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 695, 157 C. C. A. 143, the indictment there set forth in substance and charging a scheme and artifice to use the mail for the purpose of selling certain ten-acre tracts of worthless land represented to be of high grade and quality, was held sufficient to charge a violation of this statute.

"In the absence of any averments showing a real purpose to defraud purchasers out of their money, the indictment is insufficient." U. S. v. Schwarz, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 537.

Where the defendant is not misled to his prejudice it is immaterial that the indictment charged that the use of the mails was an element of the original scheme to defraud, and that the trial judge made such finding necessary to conviction. Tucker v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 833, 140 C. C. A. 279.

"A general averment that defendants devised a scheme to defraud is by itself not sufficient, without descriptive details showing its character and that it was reasonably calculated to effect the wrongful design. Here the details in descriptive form fall short, but we think the direct averments of what defendants and their associates did and intended are fairly available to and explanatory of the scheme to defraud charged in general language." Spear v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 485, 143 C. C. A. 67.

"In an indictment for mailing a letter in execution or attempted execution of a scheme to defraud, in violation of this statute, if the scheme is sufficiently outlined to show its design and adaptability to deceive and to fairly acquaint the accused with what he is required to meet, it answers the requirements of the statute. Brooks v. U. S., [C. C. A.] 146 Fed. 223, 76 C. C. A. 581. The test to be applied is, not whether the material averments of this indictment might have been made more accurate and certain, but whether they plainly embrace in their terms both requirements, of notice of the ultimate facts to be proved against the accused, and specification thereof which will leave no second prosecution open for the alleged offense. If these requisites are sufficiently stated it is the duty of the court to uphold the indictment." Moffatt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 522, 146 C. C. A. 480.

Description of scheme to defraud.—In an indictment for using the mails in execution of a scheme to defraud creditors of bankrupts by using the mails, if defendants fraudulently devised a scheme to falsely represent their commercial collection "agency" as having done things which it had not, or as having information concerning, or taken steps affecting certain bankrupt debtors, which it had not, the fraudulent scheme was the same whether the alleged "agency" was a corporation, partnership, or what not, and it was not necessary to allege its capacity as a business entity. Freeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 157 C. C. A. 429.

In an indictment containing counts for conspiracy under PENAL LAWS, § 37, 1909 Supp., p. 415, to violate this section, and counts for a violation of this section (now PENAL LAWS, § 215, 1909 Supp., p. 464), "it is necessary only to set forth generally the scheme or artifice which the defendants devised and to charge the use of the mails in execution of the scheme. . . . And the scheme itself is not required to be charged with the detail and particularity necessary in an indictment for the specific offense of obtaining property through false representations." Freeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 157 C. C. A. 429.

"While the particulars of the scheme are matters of substance, and must be described with certainty sufficient to show its existence and character, and to fairly acquaint the accused with the particular fraudulent scheme charged against them, the scheme itself need not be pleaded with all the certainty as to time, place, and circumstance requisite in charging the gist of the offense, the mailing of the letter or other article, in execution or attempted execution of the scheme." Colburn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 590, 139 C. C. A. 136; Gardner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 575, 144 C. C. A. 629.

Where the first count set out the fraudulent scheme in detail it was sufficient for the following counts to refer to and make the first count a part thereof without repeating the details. Riddell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 695, 157 C. C. A. 143.

In McClendon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 590, 139 C. C. A. it was claimed that the first count which charged the scheme to have been to send a forged check through the mail for collection, did not describe the forgery with the particularity required by the statutes of the state of Missouri in indictments for forgery. The court said: "Counsel overlook the fact that this is not an indictment for forgery, nor even for fraud; but the gist of the offense is the mailing of the letters in execution or attempted execution of the scheme. It is true the particulars of the scheme must be described with certainty sufficient to show its existence and character, and fairly acquaint the accused with the particulars of the fraudulent scheme charged against her, but need not be pleaded with all the certainty as to time, place, and circumstances requisite in charging the gist of the offense, the mailing of the letter in execution or attempted execution of the scheme. Colburn v. U. S., [C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915] 223 Fed. 590, 139 C. C. A. 136. Judge Adams, who delivered the opinion of this court in that case, refers to the authorities, and it is unnecessary to repeat them here."

The fraudulent intent of the defendant is a question to be passed upon by the jury and it should be clearly stated in an indictment. Bettman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 819, 140 C. C. A. 265.

"It is contended that the intent to perpetrate the fraud must be alleged in the part of the indictment which follows the videlicet, and that it is not sufficient to allege it in the descriptive part of the indictment. This contention is without merit. It is sufficient if it is charged in any part of the indictment." Moffatt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 522, 146 C. C. A. 480.

"It is claimed that the indictment is fatally defective, because it does not charge that he 'the defendant' deposited, or caused to be deposited, in the post office of the United States, the letters set out in the indictment 'knowingly,' although each count charges that he devised a scheme and artifice to defraud 'unlawfully, knowingly, fraudulently, designedly, and falsely.' The statute does not require it, for it does not in this connection use the word 'knowingly'; and, this being a statutory offense, it is only necessary to charge it in the general language of the statute, provided that the description is accompanied by a statement of all the particulars essential to constitute the offense, or crime, and to acquaint the accused with the nature of the charge." Samuels v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 536, 146 C. C. A. 494, Ann. Cas. 1917A 711.

Names of intended victims.—But where the charge is a scheme to defraud a class, not resolvable into individuals, it is evident that the persons intended to be injured are not known and no necessity therefore exists for an averment to that effect. Finnegan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 561, 145 C. C. A. 447.

In Mounday v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 965, 140 C. C. A. 93, the court said: "Another contention against the validity of the indictment is the fact that each count thereof charges that the scheme was to defraud a person named and various other persons to the grand jurors unknown. It is argued that as there were ten counts in the indictment, and in each count one person was named as the one to be defrauded, that the allegation in each count that the grand jurors did not know the other person was false, as the names of the other persons appear in the other counts of the indictment, showing that the grand jurors did know who the other persons were. The indictment must be taken as a whole, and, so considered, it appears that all the persons that the grand jurors did know were named. The defendants intended to defraud all persons who should do business with them, that is, the public, and they did not know themselves, when they devised the scheme to defraud, the particular persons who would be defrauded."

Mailing of letter, etc.—The gist of the offense denounced by this section is the mailing of a letter or other article mentioned in the execution or attempted execution of a scheme to defraud, and such mailing being the gist of the offense must therefore be pleaded in an indictment with great certainty as to time, place, and circumstances, so as thereby to advise the accused of the exact nature and cause of the accusation against him, in order that he may properly prepare his defense and be able to make use of a conviction or acquittal as a protection against a further prosecution for the same offense. Colburn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 590, 139 C. C. A. 136.

In Gardner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 575, 144 C. C. A. 629, the court said: "It is first objected that counts 1 and 2 of the indictment are fatally defective for want of an averment that the defendants mailed the letters set forth in the indictment for the purpose of executing the alleged scheme. We cannot understand this objection, for both counts charge in reference to the mailing of the letters that they were mailed or placed in the post office 'in and for the purpose, and with the intention on their part of executing and effecting the said scheme and artifice and attempting so to do.'"

Where the indictment charged that the letters were mailed "for the purpose of executing the said scheme and artifice to defraud, and for the purpose of attempting so to do," and the letters themselves did not indicate that they could not and did not have such tendency, but, on the contrary, carry the inference that they could and did, there was no merit in the contention that it was not sufficiently alleged that they were mailed for the purpose of executing the scheme. Pree-man v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 1, 156 C. C. A. 429.

In U. S. v. Dale, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 750, an indictment was held insufficient because the fact that the mails were used in furtherance of the scheme to defraud was not clearly alleged.

To whom envelopes addressed.—In McClendon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 523, 143 C. C. A. 591, the court said: "Another objection is that, in the first, second, and third counts, the pleader fails to allege to whom the envelopes sent through the mails were addressed, and relies on Durland v. U. S., [1896] 161 U. S. 306, 16 S. Ct. 508, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 709. But that case is squarely in point against the contention; the court holding that the allegation that the name of the addressee is to the grand jury unknown is sufficient. And this is alleged in this indictment. The indictment reads: 'That letter was inclosed in an envelope, a further description of which said envelope is to the grand jury unknown,' and then sets out the letter contained in the missing envelope."

Number of counts.—In Mounday v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 965, 140 C. C. A. 93, the court said: "It is next contended that under section 215 of the Penal Code [1909 Supp., p. 464] the defendants could not be punished but for one offense, viz., the devising of one scheme or artifice to defraud. There is nothing in this contention. It has been the uniform holding of the courts that the gist of the offense is the use of the post office in the execution of the scheme to defraud and not the scheme itself."

Joinder with conspiracy.—In prosecutions under this section a conspiracy count based on section 37, in PENAL LAWS, 1909 Supp., p. 415, is frequently tacked upon the principal charge, for the purpose of widening the field of evidence. Hart v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 911, 153 C. C. A. 597.

Sentence—Cruel and unusual punishment.—In Badders v. U. S., (1916) 240

U. S. 391, 36 S. Ct. 367, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 706, the plaintiff in error was indicted for placing letters in the mail for the purpose of executing a scheme to defraud, devised by him. There were twelve counts, on seven of which, each relating to a different letter, he was found guilty. He was sentenced to five years' imprisonment on each count, the periods being concurrent, not cumulative, and also to a fine of $1,000 on each, or $7,000 in all. One of the objections raised by the plaintiff in error was that if this section made the deposit of each letter a separate offense subject to such punishment as it received in the case it imposed cruel and unusual punishment and excessive fine, but the court held that there was no doubt that the law might make each putting of a letter into the post office a separate offense, and that there was no ground for declaring the punishment unconstitutional.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Vol. VI, p. 6, sec. 396.

Rescinding tainted contract.—Where the government superintendent of the free delivery service made a secret arrangement with a corporation which sought and obtained a contract to furnish letter carriers' satchels whereby the said superintendent, in violation of his duties, was to receive a share of the profits, the Postmaster General upon learning of the corrupt agreement was justified in rescinding the contract and stopping further payments under it, and even though said corrupt arrangement was without the actual knowledge of the corporation, if it was known to the agents of the corporation and the latter accepted the fruits of their efforts, thereby making their knowledge its own. Crocker v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 74, 36 S. Ct. 245, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 533.

PRISONS AND PRISONERS

Vol. VI, p. 36, sec. 5541.

Criminal contempt.—Criminal contempt of a federal court is an "offense" under this section. Creekmore v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 743, 150 C. C. A. 497.

A sentence for a year and a day, in a criminal contempt case, is within the discretion of the court, and may be in a penitentiary. Creekmore v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 743, 150 C. C. A. 497.

1912 Supp., p. 304, sec. 1.

Commuted sentence.—Where a sentence commuted is from eight to four years the prisoner is entitled to a parole after serving one-third of the commuted sentence provided his conduct has been such as to satisfy the conditions of this Act. Duehay v. Thompson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 305, 138 C. C. A. 547, affirming (W. D. Wash. 1914) 217 Fed. 484.

1912 Supp., p. 304, sec. 3.

Conclusiveness of board's opinion.—It must appear to the board by showing in the manner prescribed that there is reasonable probability that the applicant for a parole will abide by the law; and if in the belief or judgment of the board his release is not incompatible with the welfare of society, the board may, in its discretion, authorize parole. The opinion called for is that of the board, and the power to authorize release is vested exclusively in the board to be exercised as it may, in its wisdom, see fit. Redman v. Duehay, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 283, 159 C. C. A. 13.

PRIZE FIGHTS

Constitutionality.—This Act is constitutional. U. S. v. Johnston, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 970.

"Brought into United States."—In Pantomimic Corp. v. Malone, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 135, 151 C. C. A. 211, the facts were as follows: April 5, 1915, one Jess Willard and one Jack Johnson engaged in a prize fight at the city of Havana, Cuba. Moving pictures of the fight were taken on negative films, from which positive films could be and were developed for public exhibition. Early in April, 1916, a moving picture camera was set up eight inches on the American side of the international boundary between the state of New York and the Dominion of Canada, with the lens directed toward Canada. About eight inches on the Canadian side of the boundary a box was set up facing the camera. An original positive film taken from the negative film made at Havana was run on a reel through the box in front of an electric light on the Canadian side. An unexposed film was run from a reel through the camera on the American side directly opposite it. The two reels were connected by an endless chain, so that the result was that an exact negative reproduction was taken on the American side of the positive film on the Canadian side. From this secondary negative, rephotographed by another camera, a positive film capable of public exhibition could be made and was made. It was held that these facts showed a violation of the statute.

Conspiracy to commit offense.—In U. S. v. Johnston, (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 970, an indictment for conspiracy to violate this section was sustained on demurrer.

PUBLIC CONTRACTS

Vol. VI, p. 132, sec. 3744.

Unsigned contract as void or voidable.—The fact that a contract is not signed by government officers as required by this section is not a good defense to an action by the government for a breach of the contract, as it is not void but voidable at the election of the government, the statute being for its benefit. U. S. v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., (1915) 239 U. S. 88, 36 S. Ct. 41, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 161, reversing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 1007, 126 C. C. A. 668; (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 206 Fed. 443, 124 C. C. A. 325.

Vol. VI, p. 125, sec. 1.

Labor or materials.—Drills used in the actual construction of the work may be recovered for as materials. National Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 577, 143 C. C. A. 99, L. R. A. 1917A 336.

Provisions furnished contractor's board-house.—Groceries and provisions furnished to the contractor's boarding house and consumed by his employees does not constitute "labor" or "materials" used in the construction of the work. Food for the employees never contributes to the work, except after it is transmitted into that form of labor which, as labor, is protected. The statute does not give twice a claim for one thing. National Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 577, 143 C. C. A. 99, L. R. A. 1917A 336.

Coal for an engine may be allowed as a material; it is expended as a material; it never is and never can be transformed and merged into that labor which is the "labor performed" as distinguished from "material furnished." National Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 577, 143 C. C. A. 99, L. R. A. 1917A 336.

Defective bond.—Where the bond is defective in that it does not contain the additional obligation required by the statute, and the contracts do not provide that the contractor shall pay for the material that goes into the work, liability cannot be extended to the sureties on the theory that where the contract requires the contractor to furnish all materials, this is equivalent to an agreement on his part to pay for the same and that the bond having been given to secure the faithful performance of the contract, the sureties can be held liable for an amount due for materials furnished the contractor. The court may not by construction make other and different contracts than those made by the parties. Babcock v. American Surety Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 340, 149 C. C. A. 472.

Material variation of terms of contract.—After the terms of contract have been agreed upon, the measure of the surety's liability is thereby fixed, and, in the case of an individual surety, a material change without his consent will relieve him from liability. But this rule has been qualified in its application to companies that make a business of guaranty insurance and such companies are not relieved by such a change in the contract as would relieve an individual surety unless the change has done them harm. American Bonding Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 364, 147 C. C. A. 300, citing Atlantic Trust, etc., Co. v. Laurinburg, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 690, 90 C. C. A. 274; U. S. v. Fidelity Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 692, 102 C. C. A. 192; U. S. v. Lynch, (D. C. Del. 1912) 192 Fed. 364; Pittsburg-Buffalo Co. v. American Fidelity Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 219 Fed. 818, 135 C. C. A. 488.

The assignee of a claim is entitled to all the benefits of the statute. U. S. v. Brent, (W. D. S. C. 1916) 236 Fed. 771.

Action on bond—Jurisdiction of court. The provision of the Act which gives exclusive jurisdiction to the court in the district where the contract was to be performed applies only to an action instituted by the persons supplying labor and materials themselves in the name of the United States; when the United States itself institutes any action under the statute on the bond of a contractor it may do so without being restricted to the district of performance. U. S. v. Marshall, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 760, 141 C. C. A. 26, distinguishing U. S. v. Congress Constr. Co., (1911) 222 U. S. 199, 32 S. Ct. 44, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 163.

Parties—Who may sue.—The statute indicates an alternative procedure. The United States is given the first right of action, and the subcontractor no right of action at all until six months after the final settlement with the general contractor. If the United States has exercised the right of action given to it by bringing its suit within the six months, then the subcontractors are permitted to intervene as use plaintiff. If, however, the United States does not bring its action, then after the expiration of six months the subcontractors may bring the action in the name of the United States to their use. U. S. v. Emery, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 287. For cases under the original enactment of Aug. 13, 1894, which did not authorize the United States to bring suits of its own motion against the obligors in such bonds as were therein provided for, but which merely delegated authority to the laborer or materialman to use the name of the United States for his use and benefit in any court having jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties, see U. S. v. National Surety Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 549, 34 C. C. A. 526; U. S. v. Henderlong, (C. C. Ind. 1900) 102 Fed. 2; U. S. v. American Surety Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 127 Fed. 490; U. S. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (1906) 78 Vt. 445, 63 Atl. 581.

An amendment of a complaint, which does not allege a new or different cause of action but which merely corrects a defective statement of an existing right, by the addition of appropriate allegations, is allowable. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 214, 36 S. Ct. 321, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 609, distinguishing Texas Portland Cement Co. v. McCord, (1914) 233 U. S. 157, 34 S. Ct. 550, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 893.

Statement of claim.—In U. S. v. Emery, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 287, the argument was addressed to the court that the statement of claim, filed by an intervening plaintiff, was insufficient, because the statute gives a right of action which did not before exist, and that its existence is conditional, one of the conditions being that the United States shall not of itself bring suit upon the bond, and that there was no negating of such action in the statement of claim. There was no averment of the fact that a suit was commenced by the United States within the six months but the court was asked to hold that the statement of claim was insufficient because the pendency of such action was not negated therein. The court said: "This we cannot do. A general principle of pleading is that the existence of a fact must be averred by the party upon whom rests the affirmative and that a negative need not be pleaded. The jurisdictional fact upon which the right of action in this respect is granted is that the action cannot be commenced at the instance of the subcontractor within six months, nor after a year from the date of final settlement between the United States and the general contractor. These facts are averred in the statement of claim, and there is no presumption that the United States has brought its suit. Indeed the issuance of the certificate provided by the Act itself negatives the fact of action by the United States because under the provisions of the Act, it is only to issue where no such action has been brought."

Defenses.—A surety may as a general rule set up any defense of which his principal may take advantage. American Bonding Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 364, 147 C. C. A. 300.

Vol. X, p. 343. [Act of Feb. 24, 1905.]

"Final settlement" of the contract.—The pivotal words are not "final payment" but "final settlement," and in view of the significance of the latter term in administrative practice, it is hardly likely that it would have been used had it been intended to denote payment. The word "settlement" in connection with public transactions and accounts has been used from the beginning to describe administrative determination by the proper authority, of the amount due. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 214, 36 S. Ct. 321, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 609, modifying and affirming (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 334, 131 C. C. A. 476.

PUBLIC LANDS

Vol. VI, p. 210, sec. 446.

"The Land Department of the United States is a special tribunal with judicial functions, and has exclusive jurisdiction of issues affecting title to the public lands until patent is issued." Reed v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 234 Fed. 123.

Vol. VI, p. 212, sec. 453.

Jurisdiction of commissioners in general.—The surveying of the public lands is an administrative act confided to the control of the commissioner of the general land office under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior. It is competent for the commissioner acting within this authority, to direct how surveys shall be made and to require that they shall be subject to his examination and approval before they are filed as officially complete in the local land office. U. S. v. Morrison, (1916) 240 U. S. 192, 36 S. Ct. 326, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 599.

Vol. VI, p. 225, sec. 2225.

Fees.—By virtue of R. S. sec. 1765, in PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES, vol. VI, p. 595, the surveyor-general of Louisiana was held not entitled to fees for furnishing copies of plat of surveys, and transcripts from the records of his office to various individuals requiring them. Lewis v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 134, 37 S. Ct. 570, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1039, affirming (1915) 50 Ct. Cl. 226.

Vol. VI, p. 285, sec. 2289.

Forcible entry.—This statute does not deprive a party in peaceful possession of the right to maintain an action of forcible entry and detainer under a state statute against one who, by force or stealth, obtains possession in order to initiate a homestead claim. Denee v. Ankeny, (1918) 246 U. S. 208, 38 S. Ct. 226, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 669, affirming (1915) 85 Wash. 322, 148 Pac. 15.

Vol. VI, p. 290, sec. 2290.

Recovery of payment.—Where a patent is canceled by reason of the entryman's fraud, the wrongdoer must restore the title unlawfully obtained and abide the judgment of Congress as to whether the consideration paid shall be refunded. A suit to annul a patent is not within the reason of the ordinary rule that a vendor suing to annul a sale fraudulently induced must offer and be ready to return the consideration received. Causey v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 399, 36 S. Ct. 365, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 711.

Vol. VI, p. 292, sec. 2291.

Refund of consideration on annulment of patent.—When a suit is brought to annul a patent obtained in violation of these restrictions, the purpose is not merely to regain the title but also to enforce a public statute and maintain the policy underlying it. Such a suit is not within the reason of the ordinary rule that a vendor suing to annul a sale fraudulently induced must offer and be ready to return the consideration received. Causey v. U. S., (1916) 240 U. S. 399, 36 S. Ct. 365, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 711.

Succession of widow to inchoate homestead right.—The widow of a deceased entryman, who takes advantage of the provisions of this section and R. S. sec. 2301 in PUBLIC LANDS, vol. VI, p. 317, and completes her husband's residence and obtains a patent from the government, but who, during the lifetime of her husband, joined with him in a mortgage on the land in question, in which she personally promised to pay the debt secured, and executed personal covenants of seisin and quiet possession, was held to be estopped by such covenants from asserting her after-acquired title, in an action brought by her to determine adverse claims and to quiet title as against the purchaser under the foreclosure of said mortgage. Martin v. Yager, (1915) 30 N. D. 577, 153 N. W. 286.

Vol. VI, p. 336, sec. 2362.

The statute of limitations of six years, even though not pleaded, applies to a suit under this section in the Court of Claims to recover purchase-money. Quinn v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 496.

Vol. VI, p. 353, sec. 2.

Rights conferred and vested by the Right-of-way Act of Dec. 15, 1870, ch. 2, 16 Stat., L. 395, were not disturbed by this section. Salt Lake Invest. Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 416, 38 S. Ct. 348, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 823, affirming (1915) 46 Utah 203, 148 Pac. 439.

Vol. VI, p. 392, sec. 1.

Agreement to convey after vesting of title is in violation of the decisions of the Land Department, against public policy, and gives no right of action for breach. Eymann v. Wright, (Cal. 1917) 169 Pac. 1037.

Vol. VI, p. 404, sec. 2480.

Decision by Secretary of Interior as to character of land cannot be collaterally attacked. State v. New, (1917) 280 Ill. 393, 117 N. E. 597.

Vol. VI, p. 438, sec. 5.

Determination by land department.—If the Secretary of the Interior has made a mistake in overruling the contention by a state that the title to certain land passed to it under the Act of Aug. 3, 1892, ch. 362, 27 Stat. L. 347, and in deciding that a superior title was acquired by a corporation found to be a bona fide purchaser, the error cannot be redressed by a suit by the state to quiet title and to enjoin the issuance of patents to such corporation, where such decision was not arbitrary and was made upon full hearing. "The remedy must be sought in the courts after the issuance of patent." Minnesota v. Lane, (1918) 247 U. S. 243, 38 S. Ct. 508, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1098.

Bona fide purchasers.—In Krueger v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 69, 38 S. Ct. 262, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 582, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 97, 142 C. C. A. 503, a suit by the government to cancel a land patent, it was held, on the evidence, that the defendant had not sustained the burden of showing she was a bona fide purchaser, but that under the circumstances she had constructive notice of fraud.

Vol. VI, p. 449, sec. 1.

"The proviso must be given the effect of a curative measure confined to lands theretofore patented, and not granting dispensation for frauds or mistakes thereafter occurring." U. S. v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 310, 38 S. Ct. 525, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1130, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 27, 139 C. C. A. 301, and holding the proviso was not a bar to a suit by the government to annul a patent applied for and issued long after its enactment.

Vol. VI, p. 450, sec. 2.

Application of section.—Homestead entry.—Whether or not this section applies to a patent for a homestead entry, commuted to a cash entry, seems to admit of some doubt. But the title of the Act is broad enough to include all patents erroneously or fraudulently issued under any of the Acts of Congress and would therefore include a fraudulent entry under the Homestead Law. U. S. v. Pitan, (D. C. S. D. 1915) 224 Fed. 604.

Recovery.—The Act indicates the purpose of Congress that as to lands erroneously or fraudulently patented, for which nothing has been received by the government, it shall recover only the minimum government price thereof from the patentee, upon the title being confirmed in a good faith purchaser from him. U. S. v. Norris, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 14, 137 C. C. A. 552; U. S. v. Pitan, (D. C. S. D. 1915) 224 Fed. 604.

Vol. VI, p. 462, sec. 2275.

When title vests.—This statute imposes no limitation upon the authority of Congress to dispose of the lands before title passed to the state; and if title passes upon survey, it must be upon a survey duly completed according to the authorized regulations of the Department. U. S. v. Morrison, (1916) 240 U. S. 192, 36 S. Ct. 326, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 599.

Vol. VI, p. 498, sec. 2477.

Acceptance.—Under the Colorado statute, the public lands were subject to the rights of an entryman until the board of county commissioners declared the section and township lines on the public domain public highways. Korf v. Itten, (Colo. 1917) 169 Pac. 148.

Vol. VI, p. 508, sec. 1.

A railroad indemnity grant is subject to the requirement of this section. U. S. v. Lane, (1917) 46 App. Cas. (D. C.) 74.

Vol. VI, p. 512, sec. 2. [Act of May 11, 1898.]

Purpose and effect.—This Act "neither enlarges the Act of 1891 in such manner as to supersede the Act of 1896, nor reinstates sections 2339 and 2340 of the Revised Statutes in so far as those sections have been affected by the Act of 1896." Utah Power, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 328, 144 C. C. A. 470.

Vol. VI, p. 514, sec. 2448.

Application of section.—This section seems to be applicable only to cases where the entryman dies after final proof and before patent. In re Evans, (D. C. Idaho 1916) 235 Fed. 956.

Vol. VI, p. 525, sec. 7.

"Pending contest or protest."—As applied to public land affairs the term "contest" has been long employed to designate a proceeding by an adverse or intending claimant conducted in his own interest against the entry of another, and the term "protest" has been commonly used to designate any complaint or objection, whether by a public agent or a private citizen which is intended to be and is made the basis of some action or proceeding in the public right against an existing entry. Lane v. Hoglund, (1917) 244 U. S. 174, 37 S. Ct. 558, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1066, affirming (1916) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 310.

Where a report of a deputy forest supervisor recommending the cancellation of a homestead entry on land within a national forest reserve "on account of nonresidence and lack of cultivation," is received at the general land office but is not acted on until after the expiration of the two year limitation period contained in the proviso of the above section, it does not constitute a "pending contest or protest." Lane v. Hoglund, (1917) 244 U. S. 174, 37 S. Ct. 558, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1066, affirming (1916) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 310.

Mandamus to compel issuance of patent.—In case of the refusal of the Secretary of the Interior to issue the patent, mandamus lies to compel him to do so. Lane v. Hoglund, (1917) 244 U. S. 174, 37 S. Ct. 558, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1066, affirming (1916) 44 App. Cas. (D. C.) 310.

Vol. VI, p. 526, sec. 8.

Scope of statute.—The correction of a mistake is not an attempt to vacate or annul the patent. Wilson v. U. S., (1917) 245 U. S. 24, 38 S. Ct. 21, 62 U. S. (L. ed.)

128, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 827, 142 C. C. A. 351, and holding that the statute did not apply to an action by the government to quiet its title to land erroneously excluded from a patent under the mistaken assumption that a lake existed within meander lines run in making the survey.

When fraud is concealed by the wrongdoers the statute does not begin to run until discovery of the fraud. Exploration Co. v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 435, 38 S. Ct. 571, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1200; U. S. v. Booth-Kelly Lumber Co., (D. C. Ore. 1917) 246 Fed. 970.

Bona fide mortgagee.—A bona fide mortgagee of land for which the mortgagor holds a patent, even though the mortgage was executed prior to the patent, has rights superior in equity to the United States in a suit to annul a land patent for fraud. U. S. v. Grover, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 227 Fed. 181.

Action to set aside patent.—This statute is strictly one of limitation and does not create the right to maintain an action to set aside a patent. U. S. v. Koleno, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 180, 141 C. C. A. 178.

Recovery for fraud.—The government is not barred by this section of the right to recover the value of lands to which a patent has been fraudulently obtained by the defendant. U. S. v. Whited, (1918) 246 U. S. 552, 38 S. Ct. 367, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 879.

Desiring to give stability to titles depending on patent, the government has preferred to confirm such titles after six years in the patentee, and thereby waive any right of action it may have had for annulment of the patent, but the language of the limitations Act is not susceptible of broader construction, and indicates no intentment to bar the government of its right of action to recover the value of land obtained through fraud. U. S. v. Pitan, (D. C. S. D. 1915) 224 Fed. 604, affirmed (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 364, 154 C. C. A. 244.

So the mere fact that the government permitted the patent to become valid by the statute of limitations instead of by its express ratification would not affect the right to maintain an action for damages. Pitan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 364, 154 C. C. A. 244, affirming (D. C. S. D. 1915) 224 Fed. 604.

But this section has no application to an action at law to recover specific damages for the fraudulent acquisition of land by a patentee from the government and for the fraudulent sale thereof by him to third parties. Bistline v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 546, 144 C. C. A. 6.

Election of remedies.—Where title to public lands has been divested through fraud, the government may either bring a suit in equity to cancel the patent, or at its option maintain an action at law to recover the value of the land. Bistline v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 546, 144 C. C. A. 6.

Laches.—Where the United States is not the real party in interest but merely a nominal complainant in an action to cancel a land patent, it is barred by laches and bound by the same principles thereto that govern an individual. U. S. v. Fletcher, (D. C. S. D. 1916) 231 Fed. 326.

And the mere institution of a suit or the filing of a lis pendens will not relieve from the charge of laches. If there is failure to prosecute diligently the consequences are the same as if no action had been begun. U. S. v. Fletcher, (D. C. S. D. 1916) 231 Fed. 326.

Vol. VI, p. 533, sec. 1.

A state statute prohibiting any person having charge of sheep from allowing them to graze on the federal public domain previously occupied by cattle was valid and not in conflict with this Act. Omaechevarria v. Idaho, (1918) 246 U. S. 343, 38 S. Ct. 323, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 763, affirming (1915) 27 Idaho 797, 152 Pac. 280, which was conviction in a prosecution under the state statute.

Color of title.—Lands held under color of title and in good faith are not affected by this section. Smith v. Sandusky Third Nat. Exch. Bank, (1917) 244 U. S. 184, 37 S. Ct. 516, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1071, affirming (1915) 20 N. M. 264, 148 Pac. 512, following Cameron v. U. S., (1893) 148 U. S. 301, 13 S. Ct. 595, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 459.

The clause at the close of this section prohibits "merely the assertion of an exclusive right to use or occupation by force or intimidation or by what would be equivalent in effect to an inclosure." Omaechevarria v. Idaho, (1918) 246 U. S. 343, 38 S. Ct. 323, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 763.

Under Rem. & Bal. (Wash.) Code, § 811, an action of forcible entry and detainer will lie against one who, to initiate a homestead claim, forcibly enters upon land, which was surrounded by a fence, where the occupant was holding it under claim of right and color of title, and he and his predecessor had so held it for more than twenty years. Denee v. Ankeny, (1918) 246 U. S. 208, 38 S. Ct. 226, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 669, affirming (1916) 91 Wash. 693, 157 Pac. 1199.

Name of Act.—This Act is known as the "Pickett Act." U. S. v. Grass Creek Oil, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 481, 149 C. C. A. 533.

Withdrawals prior to Act.—The effect of this section was not to repudiate withdrawals made by the President prior to its enactment. U. S. v. McCutcheon, (S. D. Cal. 1915) 234 Fed. 702; U. S. v. Midway Northern Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1916) 232 Fed. 619.

1912 Supp., p. 321, sec. 2.

"The general purpose of this act" was expounded in U. S. v. Thirty-Two Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 242 Fed. 730.

"It is true the Pickett Act provides that the right of a bona fide occupant or claimant at the date of a withdrawal order, and who was at such time in diligent prosecution of 'work leading to discovery,' shall not be impaired or affected so long as such occupant or claimant shall continue in diligent prosecution of 'said work,' referring logically to work leading to discovery, thus implying that when discovery is made his right shall no longer continue. It cannot be supposed, however, that Congress intended any such result. The duty therefore devolves upon the court to search out the true meaning of the law, and to permit the spirit and reason to prevail over the letter. U. S. v. Mulvey, [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916] 232 Fed. 513, 146 C. C. A. 471; Holy Trinity Church v. U. S., [1892] 143 U. S. 457, 12 S. Ct. 511, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 226. And, so construed, is conferred upon an occupant or claimant of withdrawn land, who is within its provisions, the right to continue his work to a discovery, and the benefit thereof, as if the land had not been withdrawn, with the same right in the government to re-enter, if the diligence was not continuous, as a private citizen would have had if the land had not been withdrawn." U. S. v. North American Oil Consol., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 242 Fed. 723.

Diligent prosecution of work.—"The Pickett Act (36 Stat. 847), . . . while neither acknowledging nor repudiating the validity of the withdrawal order, limited the extent to which such order might otherwise go, if valid, by protecting from withdrawal those who were at the date of withdrawal 'in diligent prosecution of work leading to discovery of oil or gas.' In other words, by this Act Congress sought to give oil locators before discovery the same rights as against the government that judicial decisions had given them as against third persons. There is no inference to be drawn, however, that Congress, legislating, as it then was as to withdrawals and in aid of the proprietary rights of the government, was intending to confer any additional rights, particularly as against the government, upon those claiming, without a discovery, land withdrawn by competent authority. The net result of the situation, then, was that, upon the withdrawal of the land embraced within his claim, in the absence of a discovery, a claimant possessed no rights at all, as against the government, save the right, if he were then actually engaged in the diligent prosecution of work leading to a discovery of oil or gas on such claim to 'continue in diligent prosecution' of such work until a discovery, as a result of such continued diligent prosecution, had been effected. By that event, of course, and not till then, his immunity as against attack by the government in its proprietary capacity would be complete. Previously to such event, and in the absence of the required diligent prosecution of work, he has no defense to the government's claims." U. S. v. Stockton Midway Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 240 Fed. 1006.

"The proviso in the Pickett Act is somewhat indefinite and uncertain, but when interpreted in the light of the known conditions and the purpose of Congress, it was intended, I take it, to confer upon those occupying or claiming in good faith at the time of withdrawal public land within a withdrawn area, with the bona fide intention of complying with the mining laws, and who were at such time in diligent prosecution of work leading to discovery thereon, the right to continue such work if discovery was subsequently made, and the right to retain possession and extract the oil, or take title by patent, the same as if the land had not been withdrawn." U. S. v. Thirty-two Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 242 Fed. 730.

"What constitutes diligent prosecution of work does not lend itself to exact definition. Diligence is a relative term, and what is due diligence in a given case must be determined by the circumstances. U. S. v. North American Oil Consol., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 242 Fed. 723.

Lack of diligent prosecution of work leading to a discovery of oil was held to have been shown as matter of law in

U. S. v. McCutchen, (S. D. Cal. 1915) 234 Fed. 702.

Work done upon precise land.—"Though it may not be so phrased in express terms, the clear inference to be drawn from the Pickett Act is that Congress intended that the work therein provided for should be done upon the precise land which might be the subject of a withdrawal order." U. S. v. Thirty-Two Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 242 Fed. 730.

"It is not necessary that the work being performed at the time of the withdrawal was on the particular tract in question, but before it can be deemed work leading to discovery thereon it must have been such as would reasonably tend to that end, and been presently and purposely designed for that purpose." U. S. v. Thirty-Two Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 242 Fed. 730.

Marking boundaries.—"There was no law, state or national, at the date of the withdrawal, authorizing or requiring the marking of boundaries of a mining location or the posting or recording of notice of location prior to discovery; but a practice had grown up in the oil districts to do so, which operated by common consent as an aid in tracing the boundaries of the claim, and as constructive occupation or possession of the described area, and gave the locators or their assignees a preference right to the possession as against all persons, except the United States, while in diligent prosecution of work leading to discovery, in order that they might make discovery and a valid location. U. S. v. North American Oil Consol., [S. D. Cal. 1917] 242 Fed. 723, just decided. It was this right, existing at time of withdrawal, Congress had in mind and intended to make valid as against the government by the provisos of the Pickett Act, within the limitations, if any, therein contained, and which it declared should not 'be affected or impaired' by a presidential withdrawal. When, therefore, the occupation or claim was under such a location, the area or extent thereof should, for the purposes of the rights conferred, be determined thereby. Each location, which could not exceed 160 acres, so marked on the ground and described in the notice, should be considered as a separate unit, regardless of the number of such locations, contiguous or otherwise, occupied or claimed at the date of the withdrawal by any one person or corporation, and the work contemplated in the act is work leading to discovery on the particular location." U. S. v. Thirty-Two Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1917) 242 Fed. 730.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In U. S. v. Ohio Oil Co., (D. C. Wyo. 1916) 240 Fed. 996, which was a suit in equity by the United States to have lands in possession of the defendants declared by decree to have been at all times after the date of a certain withdrawal order lawfully withdrawn from mineral exploration it was held that the evidence was sufficient to show that the defendants were at the date of the withdrawal order, bona fide claimants of the lands in controversy, and in actual occupancy of them.

PUBLIC OFFICERS

Vol. VI, p. 614. [Act of Feb. 8, 1899.]

Purpose of Act.—“The remedial Act was to enable pending proceedings against public officials in their official capacity to be continued when necessary to obtain settlement of the questions involved.” Roberts v. Lowe, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 236 Fed. 604.

Successor of tax collector.—Under this Act one who has paid taxes illegally exacted by a collector of internal revenue cannot maintain an action against his successor, no action having previously been instituted against the collector who exacted the taxes. Roberts v. Lowe, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 236 Fed. 604; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 492, 155 C. C. A. 268, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 184.

PUBLIC PROPERTY, BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

Vol. VI, p. 704. [Act of Aug. 18, 1890.]

Conformity.—By virtue of this statute the federal courts are required to follow the local practice, pleadings, forms and proceedings. They are not required to observe any provision concerning any matter of substance prescribed in the local procedure. Kanakanui v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 923, 157 C. C. A. 273.

Vol. VI, p. 704, sec. 3748.

Evidence of pledge.—In Bolland v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 529, 15 C. C. A. 465, the fact that a pistol was found in the possession of the accused, who was not a soldier or officer of the United States, was held to be presumptive evidence that the same had been pledged to the accused.

Vol. VI, p. 714, sec. 3753.

Party entitled to immunity.—This statute is designed for the protection of the government and can be invoked only by the United States. Missouri Valley Bridge, etc., Co. v. Blake, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 417, 145 C. C. A. 411.

RAILROADS

Vol. VI, p. 752, sec. 1.

The main purpose of this section is to save the lives and limbs of those men who heretofore have been required to go on the tops of moving trains to set the hand brakes. U. S. v. Grand Rapids, etc., Ry., (E. D. Mich. 1916) 244 Fed. 609.

Constitutionality.—“The obvious purpose of the statute being to protect men employed upon trains in the movement of interstate commerce, the power of Congress may be fully exerted in the premises, and, the statute being fairly within the scope of the regulation of commerce among the states, in our opinion its validity is not impaired by the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.” Great Northern R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 406, 157 C. C. A. 32; U. S. v. Great Northern R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 927, 144 C. C. A. 209.

“The construction of these statutes has been most benevolent, looking carefully to ascertain whether the particular thing complained of came within the mischief of the act." International R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 317, 151 C. C. A. 333.

A "train" includes a string of cars being transferred from one railroad yard to another, the transfer being something more than a "switching" operation which is not within the provisions of this Act. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., Bridge Co., (W. D. Ky. 1916) 236 Fed. 1001.

Equipment.—A carrier is liable for defective equipment on its road notwithstanding that it has no control over the equipment. Thus where it allows a lumber company to operate logging trains over a part of its road, such trains being under the exclusive control of the lumber company, the carrier is nevertheless liable for defective equipment. U. S. v. Northwestern Pac. R. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1916) 235 Fed. 965.

The duty to equip, and maintain equipment, required by this section is absolute and mandatory. Pennsylvania Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 824, 154 C. C. A. 526, affirming (N. D. Ohio 1915) 237 Fed. 471. "It is no excuse that the railroad company has used reasonable care and effort to comply with the law." St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. Schuerman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 1, 150 C. C. A. 203.

Handbrakes.—The statute is mandatory in requiring that the trains must not only be equipped to run, but must actually be run without requiring brakemen to use the hand brakes in the ordinary movement of the trains. Great Northern R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 406, 57 C. C. A. 32; U. S. v. Great Northern R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 927, 144 C. C. A. 209, citing U. S. v. Grand Rapids, etc., Ry., (E. D. Mich. 1916) 244 Fed. 609.

Action by injured employee.—In general.—None of the Safety Appliance Acts contain express language conferring a right of action for the death or injury of an employee; but the safety of employees and travelers is their principal object, and the right of private action by an injured employee, even without the Employers' Liability Act, has never been doubted. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rigsby, (1916) 241 U. S. 33, 36 S. Ct. 482, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 874, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 221, 138 C. C. A. 51.

Pleading.—A denial that the Safety Appliance Act mentioned in the complaint was violated by the railroad company is but a conclusion of the pleader, to be disregarded if the antecedent specific averments of the answer were not denials of the material averments of the plaintiff's complaint. Great Northern R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 406, 157 C. C. A. 32; U. S. v. Great Northern R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 927, 144 C. C. A. 209.

Vol. VI, p. 753, sec. 2.

"Used in moving interstate traffic."—The test of the application of the Safety Appliance Act is the use of such car on a railroad which is a highway of interstate commerce and not its actual use at the time in moving interstate traffic; and the car and not the train is the unit in determining the application of the Act; and a switching operation moving interstate cars may be within its application. Hurley v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 133 Minn. 101, 157 N. W. 1005.

Automatic coupling and uncoupling apparatus.—In Atlantic City R. Co. v. Parker, (1916) 242 U. S. 56, 37 S. Ct. 69, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 150 (affirming (1915) 87 N. J. L. 148, 93 Atl. 574), the court said: "If couplers failed to couple automatically upon a straight track it at least may be said that a jury would be warranted in finding that a lateral play so great as to prevent coupling was not needed, and that, in the absence of any explanation believed by them, the failure indicated that the railroad had not fully complied with the law."

Coupling and uncoupling included.—This section applies the test of whether the person operating the coupler is required to go between the ends of the cars to the act of coupling as well as that of uncoupling, and the concluding phrase is applicable to both acts. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, (1916) 241 U. S. 476, 36 S. Ct. 626, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1110, affirming (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 166 S. W. 24.

Notwithstanding an interstate carrier complies with the Safety Appliance Act, yet if it operates the cars so that the appliances cannot be used without doing the thing the Act seeks to avoid, i. e., going between the cars, it violates the statute as fully as if it had failed to install the appliances. Christy v. Wabash R. Co., (1916) 195 Mo. App. 232, 191 S. W. 241.

Duty to "equip" and maintain as absolute.—By the Safety Appliance Acts it is made unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to haul on its line any car not equipped with automatic couplers capable of being coupled and uncoupled without the necessity of a man going between the ends of the cars. The liability for failure to obey this provision is absolute, and not dependent upon lack of reasonable care. Pennsylvania Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 824, 154 C. C. A. 526, affirming (N. D. Ohio 1915) 237 Fed. 471. See to the same effect San Antonio, etc., Co. v. Wagner, (1916) 241 U. S. 476, 36 S. Ct. 626, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1110; Noel v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., (Mo. App. 1915) 182 S. W. 787.

To whom duty to equip is owed.—In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Layton, (1917) 243 U. S. 617, 37 S. Ct. 456, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 931, affirming (1916) 145 Ga. 886, 90 S. E. 53, the court said: "The language of the acts and the authorities we have cited make it entirely clear that the liability in damages to employees for failure to comply with the law springs from its being made unlawful to use cars not equipped as required,—not from the position the employee may be in or the work which he may be doing at the moment when he is injured. This effect can be given to the acts and their wise and humane purpose can be accomplished only by holding, as we do, that carriers are liable to employees in damages whenever the failure to obey these safety appliance laws is the proximate cause of injury to them when engaged in the discharge of duty."

Duty of employees to use couplers.—Where freight cars were equipped with automatic couplers, so as to couple by impact, as required by this section, a brakeman, who, after failing to recouple cars by the automatic coupler, went between moving cars to attempt to recouple them with his hands, when there was no necessity or circumstance that made it his duty to try such an unsafe method of work, and whose foot caught in a guard rail and held him, where he was run over and injured, was guilty of contributory negligence defeating his recovery. Swasey v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1916) 115 Me. 215, 98 Atl. 706.

Civil action—Sufficiency of evidence.—A violation of the federal Safety Appliance Act may be established by proof that repeated efforts to work the lever of an automatic coupler, in the manner it is designed to be worked by switchmen in railroad operations, failed to lift the coupling pin. Davis v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1916) 134 Minn. 369, 159 N. W. 802.

In a suit in damages for injuries resulting in the death of plaintiff's intestate, on the ground that defendant, an interstate carrier, had been negligent, in that it used upon its lines certain freight cars not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and that deceased, an employee of defendant, was killed while attempting to couple said cars, the evidence reasonably tended to prove that the cars did not couple automatically by impact, and by reason thereof deceased was caught between them and killed. It was held that this was sufficient to take to the jury the question of the primary negligence of defendant. It was held further, that the Act took away from defendant the defense of assumption of risk by deceased. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ray, (Okla. 1917) 168 Pac. 999.

Where there was evidence showing that respondent made several efforts to work the coupler in the manner contemplated by such Act and that the coupler failed to work, this evidence was ample to support a finding that the appellant had failed to comply with the provisions of the section. Fletcher v. South Dakota Cent. R. Co., (1915) 36 S. D. 401, 155 N. W. 3.

Vol. VI, p. 755, sec. 3.

Duty of connecting carrier to accept.—"We find nothing either in the Safety Appliance Acts or in any rule of the common law, which requires a carrier to accept from a connecting line a car equipped in violation of the Safety Appliance Act; and we are of opinion that it is both the right and duty of a carrier to refuse to accept such defective car in interchange when such acceptance would necessarily involve its own use of such car in violation of these Acts. . . . In our opinion, in case a defective car is received from a connecting carrier in a string or train of cars, the mere incidental handling of such car by the receiving carrier, refusing to accept it, in such manner as may be necessary to disconnect it from the other cars for redelivery to the connecting carrier and to proceed with the use of the other cars, would not be a use or hauling of such defective car by the receiving carrier which would subject it to the penalties of the Act; such incidental handling of the car not being in contravention of the purposes of the Act, but a necessary step in furtherance thereof." Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 420, 155 C. C. A. 196.

Vol. VI, p. 755, sec. 4.

Equivalents for the appliances required by the Safety Appliance Acts are not allowed. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, (1917) 243 U. S. 311, 37 S. Ct. 278, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 741 (affirming (1916) 268 Mo. 31, 186 S. W. 1035). See also Moore v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., (1916) 268 Mo. 31, 186 S. W. 1035; Lemee v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1917) 141 La. 769, 75 So. 676.

Vol. VI, p. 756, sec. 6.

"Permitting to be hauled."—"The duty of carriers to exclude the use on their lines of defective equipment is absolute, and not limited to the exercise of reasonable care for the purpose, and that the question of knowledge of such defects is wholly immaterial." U. S. v. Northwestern Pac. R. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1916) 235 Fed. 965.

The proviso.—The fact that cars are being used for the transportation of logs is not enough to bring them within the terms of the proviso. The statute excludes only "standard logging cars where the height of such car from top of rail to center of coupling does not exceed 25 inches." U. S. v. Northwestern Pac. R. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1916) 235 Fed. 965. See also Mathis v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., (1917) 140 La. 855, 74 So. 172.

Due diligence as defense.—"The suggestion is made in argument that in any event the railroad company was not liable for the penalties because of the difficulty of equipping the twelve cars with grabirons which would not interfere with the lateral movements of the radial couplers and because the other three cars were so constructed that they could not be provided with automatic couplers and were used only on the one day because of unusually heavy traffic. But this merely asserts that the statute may be violated with impunity if only the railroad finds its provisions onerous or deems it expedient to do so." Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 344, 36 S. Ct. 668, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1037, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 210 Fed. 243, 127 C. C. A. 61, L. R. A. 1917A 558.

Pleading.—A denial that the Safety Appliance Acts mentioned in the complaint were violated by the railroad company is but a conclusion of the pleader, to be disregarded if the antecedent specific averments of the answer were not denials of the material averments of the plaintiff's complaint. Great Northern R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 406, 157 C. C. A. 32; U. S. v. Great Northern R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 927, 144 C. C. A. 209.

Expert testimony.—In Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 344, 36 S. Ct. 668, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1037, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 210 Fed. 243, 127 C. C. A. 61, L. R. A. 1917A 558, "it was claimed that the requirements of the Safety Appliance Act with respect to handholds and grabirons were in substance complied with by a different and what was asserted to be an equivalent appliance, that is, openings in the top of the buffer or sill extending across the ends of the cars just above the couplers. To support this claim the company offered testimony of experienced railroad men to the effect 'that the handholds or grabirons in the buffers or sills of such cars were sufficient to protect men who might be required to go between the cars in coupling or otherwise handling them, that they were sufficient to accomplish purposes intended to be accomplished by the provisions of the Safety Appliance Act requiring handholds and grabirons to be placed upon the ends of cars used in interstate commerce, and that they were better than those commonly used upon cars engaged in interstate commerce.' The United States objected to the introduction of the testimony and it was excluded on the ground 'that it was not a question for expert testimony, but was a matter of common knowledge.' During the trial (at whose request it does not appear) the jury were taken to inspect the openings in some of the cars." It was held on error that the action of the trial judge was proper.

Vol. VI, p. 756, sec. 8.

Effect of section.—"An employee injured by any car in use contrary to the provisions of the [Safety Appliance] act is not to be deemed to have assumed the risk, although continuing in the employment of the carrier after the unlawful use of the car has been brought to his knowledge." Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rigsby, (1916) 241 U. S. 33, 36 S. Ct. 482, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 874, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 221, 138 C. C. A. 51.

Vol. X, p. 375, sec. 1.

In general.—The Safety Appliance Acts of Congress embrace all locomotives, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad which is a highway of interstate commerce. Lemee v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1917) 141 La. 769, 75 So. 676.

Application to employee not engaged in interstate commerce.—The Safety Appliance Acts are applicable to all employees who are injured through a violation of its provisions, irrespective of the character of the commerce in which they are engaged, and the Acts are not unconstitutional as so construed, for "the right of private action by an employee injured while engaged in duties unconnected with interstate commerce, but injured through a defect in a safety appliance required by the Act of Congress to be made secure, has so intimate a relation to the operation of the Act as a regulation of commerce between the states that it is within the constitutional grant of authority over that subject." Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rigsby, (1916) 241 U. S. 33, 36 S. Ct. 482, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 874, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 221, 138 C. C. A. 51, and following Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 222 U. S. 20, 32 S. Ct. 2, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 72.

"Train."—In Pennsylvania Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 824, 154 C. C. A. 526, affirming (N. D. Ohio 1915) 237 Fed. 471, it was held that the train brake provision of the Safety Appliance Acts applied to "all trains" and to all cars "used on the railroad engaged in interstate commerce" and included a "hospital" train of thirty-four empty bad-order cars, not equipped with automatic couplers operating automatically, and all but one fastened to the other cars by means of chains, together with an engine tender and caboose.

"Locomotives"—Couplers.—This Act requires locomotives to be equipped with automatic couplers. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, (1916) 241 U. S. 476, 36 S. Ct. 626, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1110, affirming (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 166 S. W. 24, and following Johnson v. Southern Pac. Co., (1904) 196 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 158, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 363.

Intrastate cars.—This amendment enlarged the scope of the original Act so as to embrace all locomotives, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railway that is a highway of interstate commerce, whether the particular vehicles are at the time employed in interstate commerce or not. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, (1916) 241 U. S. 476, 36 S. Ct. 626, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1110, affirming (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 166 S. W. 24; Southern R. Co. v. Indiana R. Commission, (1915) 236 U. S. 439, 35 S. Ct. 304, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 661, affirming (1913) 179 Ind. 23, 100 N. E. 337; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Layton, (1916) 145 Ga. 886, 90 S. E. 53. Congress had the power, under the commerce clause of the federal Constitution, to require, as it did in the Safety Appliance Act of March 2, 1893, as amended by this Act, that all locomotives, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railway engaged in interstate commerce, shall be equipped with certain designated safety appliances, regardless of whether such vehicles are used in moving intrastate or interstate traffic. Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 222 U. S. 20, 32 S. Ct. 2, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 72, affirming (N. D. Ala. 1908) 164 Fed. 347; Curran v. Chicago Short Line R. Co., (1916) 198 Ill. App. 154.

"Similar vehicles" includes trains drawn by electric motors, and an interstate electric road is within the provisions of this section though its terminals run over street railways. Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1916) 241 U. S. 497, 36 S. Ct. 683, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 217 Fed. 518, 133 C. C. A. 370.

What constitutes "used" — Switching operations.—The Safety Appliance Act applies where a switching crew is making up cars in a railroad yard for immediate transportation out of the state; the tracks of the yard being used to make up and transfer interstate cars, and in general for interstate transportation; the couplers on the interstate cars moved at the time in the process of transfer being defective. Hurley v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 133 Minn. 101, 157 N. W. 1005.

"Used upon street railways."—The quoted words were not meant to cover cars which were regularly used in interstate commerce on a standard gauge track, but at the terminals were operated over street railways. Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1916) 241 U. S. 344, 36 S. Ct. 668, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1037, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 210 Fed. 243, 127 C. C. A.

Trolley cars operated singly are not subject to the provisions of the Safety Appliance Acts regarding automatic couplers. International R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 317, 151 C. C. A. 333.

Vol. X, p. 375, sec. 2.

"The undisputed facts upon which the second count of the declaration is based are briefly as follows: The defendant, on the date above named, moved a train or 'drag' of 55 cars from the Fulton yard in Richmond, over the main line of its railway, to the Albemarle paper plant, a distance of about two miles. In making this movement the automatic brakes were coupled up and in use only on the first 12 cars of the train, but not coupled up and used on the other 43 cars. This operation was what is known as a 'transfer'; that is, the movement of a considerable number of cars coupled together from the Fulton yard, where trains were broken up, to the Second Street yard, where they were sorted out for delivery to other yards and sidings in the city. The cars so associated for this purpose are called a 'drag,' as no caboose is attached and the cars are hauled by a transfer engine.

"At the time this movement took place the Safety Appliance Law, as modified by an authorized order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, required that any train operated with power or train brakes should have such brakes used and operated on not less than 85 per cent. of the cars composing such train, which concededly was not done in this instance. The defendant, however, contended that this requirement did not apply to the hauling of a train or 'drag' of cars in transfers service, and therefore the facts shown did not charge it with liability. The trial court overruled this contention, and the jury under instructions found a verdict for the government. The correctness of this ruling has lately and since this case was argued, been fully upheld by two decisions of the Supreme Court. U. S. v. Erie R. Co., [1915] 237 U. S. 402, 35 S. Ct. 621, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1019, and U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., [1915] 237 U. S. 410, 35 S. Ct. 634, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1023, rendered in May, 1915. The case at bar is clearly covered by these decisions, and the question involved is no longer open to discussion." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 683, 141 C. C. A. 439.

"Any train."—"This act differs in this respect from the Employers' Liability Act. The latter is expressly limited to employees injured 'while engaged in interstate business,' while the Hours of Service Act applies to all employes actually engaged in or connected with the movement of any interstate trains, regardless of the fact whether at the time the offense was committed he was so employed." Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 685, 150 C. C. A. 17.

Work train.—"Any train" includes a work train. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 349, 146 C. C. A. 397.

Purpose of this legislation.—"The purpose of the [Hours of Service] act was to prevent the dangers which must necessarily arise to the employee and to the public from continuing men in a dangerous and hazardous business for periods so long as to render them unfit to give that service which is essential to the protection of themselves and those entrusted to their care. It is common knowledge that the enactment of this legislation was induced by reason of the many casualties in railroad transportation which resulted from requiring the discharge of arduous duties by tired and exhausted men whose power of service and energy had been so weakened by overwork as to render them inattentive to duty or incapable of discharging the responsible labors of their positions." Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 336, 37 S. Ct. 635, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175, Ann. Cas. 1918C 794, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 748, 136 C. C. A. 354. To the same effect see U. S. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Tex. 1917) 241 Fed. 302; U. S. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1915) 234 Fed. 433; U. S. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Cal. 1915) 236 Fed. 154.

Construction.—The Act is remedial and in the public interest, and should be construed in the light of its humane purpose. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 336, 37 S. Ct. 635, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175, Ann. Cas. 1918C 794, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 748, 136 C. C. A. 354; U. S. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 576.

"Although it may be called punitive in so far as it prescribes penalties for its violation, still the primary rule of construction is that which will make the law effectual in its main purpose. The act is analogous to Safety Appliance Act." Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 584, 148 C. C. A. 350, affirming (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 561.

"The act is so manifestly in the interests of humanity that it should be liberally construed, and yet, because of the penalties imposed for violations of the act, its provisions should not be extended beyond their plain meaning. It is highly important that those who may be subjected to penalties for violations of the act should know what acts or omissions may subject them to penalties." U. S. v. Pennsylvania Co., (W. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 761.

"Officers or agents."—The Act does not operate against carriers alone, but against officers and agents of carriers as well. U. S. v. Pennsylvania Co., (W. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 761.

"Required or permitted."—"Permit" as used in the section does not imply knowledge and consent but in view of the legislative history of the Act is synonymous with "suffer." Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 315, 153 C. C. A. 241.

"To require or permit an employe to work ordinarily implies knowledge by the employer, who exacts or consents to the doing of the work. Upon this point reference to the history of the passage of the act is relevant." Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 584, 148 C. C. A. 350, affirming (D. C. Idaho 1915) 228 Fed. 561.

Yardmasters whose duty it is to direct train movements by telephone are within the terms of the following provision: "Operator, train dispatcher, or other employe who by the use of the telegraph or telephone dispatches, reports, transmits, receives, or delivers orders pertaining to or affecting train movements," etc. U. S. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 576.

Switch tenders.—In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 247 U. S. 197, 38 S. Ct. 442, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1066, affirming (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 945, 157 C. C. A. 295, a switch tender under the facts of the case was held to be within the nine hour limit of the proviso.

Telegraph operators engaged in wrecking or relief service.—"They may not, in a sense, be termed one of the crew of a wrecking or relief train, but they are employes engaged in and about service in connection with the wreck, quite as important as that of any member of the crew proper, and whose work is of an emergency character, and necessarily of uncertain duration. To extend the Act to one so employed would be contrary to the provisions and spirit of the Act, and entirely inconsistent with its manifest purpose and intent." U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1915) 226 Fed. 220.

Employees of terminal company.—In Brooklyn Eastern Dist. Terminal v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 287, 152 C. C. A. 275, which was an action by the United States against the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal for penalties incurred by violation of the Hours of Service Act, the case was tried on an agreed statement of facts, which admitted that the Terminal had permitted "several members of switching crews" at their own request, to remain on duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours. There was a judgment for the plaintiff in the District Court which was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals on the ground that the terminal was not a "common carrier" but an "agent" of common carriers and that the "employees" within the protection of the Act were employees of common carriers and not of agents of common carriers.

On duty—In general.—The 24-hour period must be counted from the time the operator goes on duty. U. S. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (D. C. Colo. 1916) 235 Fed. 944.

Dividing hours of service.—It is permissible for a railroad company to divide the hours of service provided those hours of service do not exceed nine hours in any twenty-four hour period. U. S. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 38, 156 C. C. A. 466 (affirming (D. C. Colo. 1916) 235 Fed. 944).

"The intention of Congress being apparently that, if the sixteen hours of service is divided, then the period of release affects the time which the employee is entitled to remain off duty at the end of his service." Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 60, 157 C. C. A. 356, affirming (S. D. Ia. 1916) 236 Fed. 414.

Continuity of service.—In U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 722, 158 C. C. A. 124, it appeared that all freight trains were stopped at a divisional terminal, and train and engine crews were relieved for the length of time of the necessary detention of trains for icing refrigerator cars, and switching, making up, and breaking up of trains, the work being done by others than the train or engine crews. On the question of whether the delay caused a break in the continuity of service the court said: "It will be seen that there was evidence clearly tending to show that although the employees were relieved from duty for periods of one hour, one hour and twenty minutes, or one hour and thirty minutes, as the case might be, the releases were not absolute; that the time limit of the releases, if a time limit was specified, was subject to change; and that the men were required to hold themselves in readiness and to be within reach in case their services were needed at any time within the designated period of the release. A release of such a nature would not, we think, be sufficient to break the continuity of service."

"A release, so as to justify a deduction of time, under the statute, can only be given by some officer or agent having authority to give it." Denver, etc., R. Co. v.

U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 62, 147 C. C. A. 132.

Period of rest at end of run out.—Where a train crew made a round trip covering seventeen or eighteen hours altogether, it was held that the fact that there was a stop of from two to three hours at the end of the run out and before the return trip was begun did not break the continuity of the service so as to relieve the railroad company from liability under the Hours of Service Act. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 60, 157 C. C. A. 356 (affirming (S. D. Ia. 1916) 236 Fed. 414).

In determining whether engineers and firemen on certain extra freight engines called "pushers" were "continuously on duty" for more than sixteen hours, the question whether rest periods when those employees were waiting for a train in the opposite direction were to be regarded as breaking the continuity of their service, "depended on whether, as a matter of fact, there was during those sixteen hours a substantial break, one that was substantial in amount and recuperative and restful in effect." The mere fact that they were subject to call during those periods, was not decisive that the service was continuous. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 881, 159 C. C. A. 153, where the court said: "The case is one of those border line and exceptional ones."

"No extra crews were kept at Park City, nor was there any occasion to keep them. The journey from Salt Lake City and return was usually made well within the 16-hour period. If the crew had been released from the train at Park City, the company had no person there competent to take charge of the train or the engine. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the round trip must be treated as a continuous journey, and Park City simply as a way station." Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 62, 147 C. C. A. 132.

Night and day offices.—In Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 667, 154 C. C. A. 425 (affirming (N. D. Ia. 1915) 234 Fed. 433) one of the questions in issue was whether the facts showed that the defendant railroad company maintained a day and night office at Rockwell City. The court said: "... In the case of Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 908 [150 C. C. A. 168], this court said: 'Obviously the intent of the statute would be defeated if the work at a place of a character requiring attention both day and night were divided between two shifts and performed with separate instruments installed in near proximity. And what could not be done as a new departure would be equally inadmissible as an old custom.' . . . We think the present case is ruled by the case cited."

Emergency.—"With the context and purpose of the act in mind, it is unreasonable to believe that the ordinary and everyday ups and downs of railroad operation should be considered emergencies. Such a conclusion would bring within its scope a vast multitude of unexpected and unanticipated minor predicaments and contingencies constantly arising. The term emergency as here used is of greater moment than this, though of less significance than the terms used in the third section. The same word may be applied with appropriateness in innumerable instances in a variety of different bearings and relations. So we cannot stop with its abstract meaning. The context determines its particular significance. A definition that would override and defeat the plain purpose of the act must be rejected." U. S. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (D. C. Colo. 1916) 235 Fed. 944.

In Indiana Harbor Belt R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 943, 157 C. C. A. 293, the facts and conclusions as stated by the court were as follows:

"The railroad crew, consisting of five men in charge of a freight train running from Blue Island to Chicago and return, a distance of 63 miles, and which train was engaged in interstate commerce, was in continuous service for a period varying from 17 hours 5 minutes to 17 hours 35 minutes. In justification for such hours of service the plaintiff in error showed that, by reason of a derailment of a car in a train ahead, there was a delay of 2 hours and 20 minutes.

"The first contention of the plaintiff in error is that delay being of such origin comes within the exception of section 3 of the act, and the maximum period of 16 hours was thereby automatically extended 2 hours and 20 minutes. This position must be rejected upon the authority of" cases cited, including Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 268, 148 C. C. A. 170, and Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 153, 156 C. C. A. 19.

Exception and not proviso.—"A form of the statute is somewhat peculiar. While the provision regarding the hours of service of telegraph and telephone operators is found in a proviso, it is really an enactment of what ordinarily would be found in an independent section, dealing with a class of employes, and a service, separate and distinct from those coming within the preceding clause of section 2 of the act. This is not material, except as it affects a rule invoked in the construction of statutes and applied in pleading. That the term 'in cases of emergency' constitutes an exception and not a proviso is manifest from an examination of section 3 of the statute. Treating the dispensing or exemptive term as an exception, the rule of construction is well settled." U. S. v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., (E. D. N. C. 1915) 224 Fed. 160.

The liability of a railroad for injuries resulting to an employee is not, where a violation of the Hours of Service Act is relied on, limited to injuries happening while the violation of law is going on, "and as to the ten hours the statute fixes only a minimum and a minimum for rest after work no longer than allowed." Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1916) 242 U. S. 295, 37 S. Ct. 123, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 312.

1909 Supp., p. 583, sec. 3.

Telegraphers.—The proviso applies to all employees affected by the acts and includes telegraphers. U. S. v. Delano, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 107, 158 C. C. A. 333; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 153, 156 C. C. A. 19.

Excuses for excess of service.—In general.—The language here used is broad and comprehensive. It is not a mere limitation or restriction on the enforcement of the Act, but it excepts absolutely from the operation of the law situations such as are described in the proviso. U. S. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Tex. 1917) 241 Fed. 302.

"The statute fixes a duty upon the defendant not to permit its servants engaged in running trains to work more than 16 consecutive hours. If it does, then the penalty is incurred, unless it can excuse itself by alleging and proving one of the causes contained in section 3 of the act." U. S. v. Charlotte Harbor, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 243 Fed. 772.

Proviso as relieving carrier from exercise of diligence.—"It was not the intention of the proviso . . . to relieve the carrier from the exercise of diligence to comply with the general provisions of the act, but only to relieve it from accidents arising from unknown causes which necessarily entailed overtime employment and service. U. S. v. Dickson, [1841] 15 Pet. 141, [10 U. S. (L. ed.) 689]. It is still the duty of the carrier to do all reasonably within its power to limit the hours of service in accordance with the requirements of the law." Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 336, 37 S. Ct. 635, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175, Ann. Cas. 1918C 794, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 748, 136 C. C. A. 354. See to the same effect Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 62, 147 C. C. A. 132.

Even if the sudden and unexpected illness of a telegraph operator were to be regarded as a "casualty," the railroad company was not excused where it failed to exercise a high degree of diligence after learning of such illness. U. S. v. Delano, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 107, 158 C. C. A. 333.

Insubordination of employee.—"We think the trial court properly held that the unforeseen insubordination of this employé was a casualty within the meaning of the statute. In U. S. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., [C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915] 220 Fed. 293, 136 C. C. A. 275, we held that insubordination of an employé may constitute an 'emergency,' within the meaning of section 2 of the statute, justifying the retention of a telegraph operator overtime. No sound reason can be given why similar insubordination does not constitute a 'casualty,' within the proviso of section 3." Denver, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 62, 147 C. C. A. 132.

Defect in steam pump.—See Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 153, 156 C. C. A. 19, affirming judgment for the government in an action for penalty.

Derailment of trains.—"The pleas under discussion are silent as to the cause of derailment, and if such derailment could have been avoided by ordinary foresight the accident could not be said to be unavoidable, and unless it was unavoidable it is no defense to the action brought. I am therefore of opinion that the demurrers to these pleas are well taken, and should be sustained." U. S. v. Charlotte Harbor, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Fla. 1917) 243 Fed. 772.

Delay result of cause not foreseen.—"It is not unlikely that Congress had in mind conditions such as existed by reason of the Johnstown flood in this district where operations over the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad were suspended for days, due to the washing out of bridges. If such a flood should again occur, it could not be imagined that a train dispatcher would be subject to the penalties of this act if, after having knowledge of the flood, he would send out a train for Johnstown and intermediate places, where the crew of said train were required to be on duty longer than 16 hours." U. S. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (W. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 761.

Train delay.—In the practical operation of its road, the carrier is bound to anticipate such frequent occurrences as ordinary delays of trains. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 114, 155 C. C. A. 644. And a delay in starting a train caused by reason of the fact that another train is late is not necessarily an excuse within the meaning of the proviso. U. S. v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., (W. D. Ark. 1911) 189 Fed. 471.

But although a train dispatcher permitted a train to leave a terminal after having knowledge that a derailed train blocked the road over which it had to go to reach its destination such fact did not make the railroad company liable for a violation of the Hours of Service Act in respect of the crew on the train if dispatcher was informed by the conductor of the derailed train that the track would be cleared of the wreck in an hour. U. S. v. Pennsylvania Co., (W. D. Pa. 1917) 239 Fed. 761.

In Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 1, 154 C. C. A. 593, a judgment against the railroad was reversed and a new trial awarded because of error in the trial judge's charge to the jury. The facts showed that a train crew was kept at work more than sixteen hours by virtue of the train being delayed by weather and a broken knuckle.

Continuance on duty to end of run.—In case of an unavoidable accident delaying the movement of a train to the extent of causing the train crew to remain on duty beyond the period made ordinarily lawful under the Hours of Service Act provided it takes the train to the terminal, it is the duty of the railroad to substitute a new crew if in the exercise of diligence that can be done. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 244 U. S. 336, 37 S. Ct. 635, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 175, Ann. Cas. 1918C 794, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 748, 136 C. C. A. 354.

Where a train is held up by the derailment of a train ahead the railroad company is not obliged to relieve the train crew at the first convenient stopping place reached after the expiration of the 16-hour period but may keep them on the train until its destination is reached. U. S. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Tex. 1917) 241 Fed. 302.

Evidence.—The burden of proof is on the defendant to show that the cause of the excess service of the train crew comes within the terms of the proviso. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 114, 155 C. C. A. 644.

Similar accidents.—Where a railroad company relies on two accidents as a defense to permitting a train crew to work longer than the Hours of Service Act allowed, evidence of many similar accidents immediately preceding these accidents was admissible as tending to show a negligent habit of the company. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 114, 155 C. C. A. 644, following U. S. v. Great Northern R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 630, 136 C. C. A. 238.

The action to recover a penalty under this Act is a civil one and the question of costs and disbursements must be decided upon the same principles as are involved in other civil actions. U. S. v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Minn. 1916) 235 Fed. 951.

1909 Supp., p. 584, sec. 4.

In U. S. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 190, 37 S. Ct. 22, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 240 (affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 162, 129 C. C. A. 514, L. R. A. 1917A 1198), which was a civil proceeding against the railroad company to recover a penalty under section 20 of the Act to Regulate Commerce as amended June 18, 1910 (see vol. IV, p. 499), for a failure to include in a report certain alleged violations of the Hours of Service Act as required by an order of the Commission, it was held that the judgment for the defendant in the court below was proper, it appearing that the omissions were the result of an honest mistake in a doubtful case. See also Elgin, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 411, 142 C. C. A. 107.

In U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1915) 226 Fed. 220, wherein it was alleged that the defendant failed and refused to make proper reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission, within 30 days of the dates aforesaid of the excess time required of telegraph operators in its employ with the reasons therefor, as required by law, the court said: "The case thus stated presents two legal questions for determination, namely, whether the defendant is required to make report of extra service hours where the same does not exceed more than 4 hours in each day of 24 hours for 3 days in a week, and whether the report of extra hours is required where telegraph operators are engaged at a wreck." The first question was answered in the affirmative and the second in the negative.

1909 Supp., p. 584, sec. 1.

I. INTRODUCTORY.

"The first Employers' Liability Act . . . extended in terms to all common carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, and because it embraced subjects not within the constitutional authority of Congress was declared invalid." Southern Pac. Co. v. Jensen, (1917) 244 U. S. 205, 37 S. Ct. 524, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1086, Ann. Cas. 1917E 900, L. R. A. 1918C 451, reversing (1915) 215 N. Y. 514, 109 N. E. 600, Ann. Cas. 1916B 276, L. R. A. 1916A 403.

The Safety Appliance Act and the Employers' Liability Act "are in pari materia, and where the Employers' Liability Act refers to 'any defect or insufficiency, due to its negligence, in its cars, engines, appliances,' etc., it clearly is the legislative intent to treat a violation of the Safety Appliance Act as 'negligence'—what is sometimes called negligence per se." San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, (1916) 241 U. S. 476, 36 S. Ct. 626, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1110. But this Act defines the rights of employees in cases of injury due to the negligence of a carrier engaged in interstate commerce and recovery depends thereon and not on the Safety Appliance Act. Aldread v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 93 Wash. 209, 160 Pac. 429.

"The Act is a remedial one, and, like all remedial legislation, should have a liberal construction to advance the remedy proposed and to correct the evils against which it was directed. It was designed to enlarge—not to restrict—the rights of the injured workmen." Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, (1916) 128 Md. 678, 98 Atl. 225.

"The opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States construing the Employers' Liability Act, or other Acts of Congress, is controlling not only upon the federal courts, but the state courts as well upon the construction and interpretation of the laws of Congress." Walker v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1917) 241 Fed. 395.

Paramount to state laws—In general.

—"It is therefore not disputable that recovery under the act can be had alone in the mode and by and for the persons or class of persons in whose favor the law creates and bestows a right of action." Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Kenney, (1916) 240 U. S. 489, 36 S. Ct. 458, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 762.

"The federal Employers' Liability Act of 1908 supersedes the laws of the states upon all matters within its scope, and in cases involving accidents to the employees of railroad companies when engaged in interstate commerce the state laws must be regarded as nonexistent." Hogarty v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 255 Pa. St. 236, 99 Atl. 741. To the same point see Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Hess, (Fla. 1917) 74 So. 500; Landrum v. Western, etc., R. Co., (1916) 146 Ga. 88, 90 S. E. 710; Carlson v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., (1917) 205 Ill. App. 156; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Jones, (1916) 111 Miss. 852, 72 So. 681; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. De Bord, (Tex. 1917) 192 S. W. 767; Geer v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1917) 194 S. W. 939.

"The federal Employers' Liability Act is the supreme and paramount law of the land with respect to the liability of interstate carriers by rail for injuries to or the death of employees while engaged in interstate commerce." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Rhoda, (Fla. 1917) 74 So. 19.

"Plaintiff being at the time of the accident engaged in the repair of cars employed solely in interstate commerce, his rights must be determined in accordance with the laws of the United States, and not of this state, or of the state of Minnesota in which the accident occurred." Smiegl v. Great Northern R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 57, 160 N. W. 1057.

State common law.—"If it is a case wherein relief may be properly had under the federal Act, it supersedes the common law of the states and any recovery . . . must necessarily be based upon the federal act." Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, (1916) 169 Ky. 662, 185 S. W. 94.

Common law of parent and child.—The common-law right of a father to recover for loss of services caused by an injury to his infant son, while the latter was employed in interstate commerce by a railroad common carrier was taken away by this Act. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Tonsellito, (1917) 244 U. S. 360, 37 S. Ct. 620, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1194.

State statutes, in general.—"The federal law is exclusive within the scope of its operation. It is the same as though it were a part of the state law, and it supersedes and takes the place of all state statutes within its scope and field." Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Thrift Trust Co., (Ind. App. 1917) 115 N. E. 685. To the same point see Geer v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1917) 194 S. W. 939; McCutcheon v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Ia. 1917) 164 N. W. 774.

A state statute forbidding the employment of minors under eighteen between certain hours in the night can have no effect even as a state police regulation to aid in recovery by a minor under eighteen injured while employed in violation of that statute in interstate commerce covered by the federal statute. Smithson v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 174 Cal. 148, 162 Pac. 111.

A state statute giving the railroad companies the right to "cut down any standing trees that may be in danger of falling on the road" was not superseded by the federal statute. O'Connor v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 163 Wis. 653, 158 N. W. 343.

State Employers' Liability Acts.—"It is settled that if an employee of a railroad suffers injury or death while engaged in interstate commerce, recovery cannot be had under a state statute for such injury or death, but that the exclusive remedy is under the federal Employers' Liability Act. As was said in St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Seale, [1913] 229 U. S. 156 at page 158, 33 S. Ct. 651 at page 652, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1129, Ann. Cas. 1914C 156: 'If the federal statute was applicable, the statute was excluded by reason of the supremacy of the former under the national Constitution.'" Lynch v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1917) 227 Mass. 123, 116 N. E. 401.

Where a state statute relating to an employer's liability for an injury to an employee is so similar to that of the United States that the liability of the employer does not appear to be affected by the question which of them governs the case it is unnecessary for the United States Supreme Court to decide which law applies. Kansas City Western R. Co. v. McAdow, (1916) 240 U. S. 51, 36 S. Ct. 252, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 520.

A state statute giving a right of action for death is excluded from operation where the facts of a case bring it within the federal statute. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1917) 62 Colo. 492, 163 Pac. 857; Sells v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1915) 266 Mo. 155, 181 S. W. 106.

State Workmen's Compensation Acts.—An employee of a railroad common carrier injured while engaged in interstate commerce, though without any negligence on the part of the carrier, cannot recover under a state Workmen's Compensation Act. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Winfield, (1917) 244 U. S. 147, 37 S. Ct. 546, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1045, Ann. Cas. 1917D 1139, L. R. A. 1918C 439, reversing (1915) 216 N. Y. 284, 110 N. E. 614, Ann. Cas. 1916A 817, (1915) 168 App. Div. 351, 153 N. Y. S. 499; Erie R. Co. v. Winfield, (1917) 244 U. S. 170, 37 S. Ct. 556, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1057, Ann. Cas. 1918B 662, reversing (1916) 88 N. J. L. 619, 96 Atl. 394; Walker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Ind. App. 1917) 117 N. E. 969. To the same effect see Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Knapp, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 950, 147 C. C. A. 624; Waters v. Guile, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 532, 148 C. C. A. 298; Chicago Junction R. Co. v. Industrial Board, (1917) 277 Ill. 512, 115 N. E. 647; Dickinson v. Industrial Board, (1917) 280 Ill. 342, 117 N. E. 438; Flynn v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1917) 90 N. J. L. 450, 101 Atl. 1034; Rounsaville v. Central R. Co., (1917) 90 N. J. L. 176, 101 Atl. 182.

The decisions by the federal Supreme Court cited in the last preceding paragraph overruled not only the New Jersey case cited in the opinion, but in effect overrules as to state Workmen's Compensation Acts, Rounsaville v. Central R. Co., (1915) 87 N. J. L. 371, 94 Atl. 392; West Jersey Trust Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1915) 88 N. J. L. 102, 95 Atl. 753; Corico v. Smith, (1916) 97 Misc. 447, 161 N. Y. S. 293.

But the federal Employers' Liability Act does not prevent the operation of a state Workmen's Compensation Act in respect of injuries suffered by one not at the time employed in interstate commerce, within the decisions construing and applying the federal statute, even though he was at the time employed by a railroad company which was, in a general sense, engaged in interstate commerce. Raymond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 43, 37 S. Ct. 268, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 583; New York Cent. R. Co. v. White, (1917) 243 U. S. 188, 37 S. Ct. 247, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 667, Ann. Cas. 1917D 629, L. R. A. 1917D 1. See also Okrzesz v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (1915) 170 App. Div. 15, 155 N. Y. S. 919.

A judgment against plaintiff in a suit brought on the federal Employers' Liability Act, on the ground that the party injured was not employed in interstate commerce at the time of the injury, is no bar to proceeding under the state Workmen's Compensation Act. Jackson v. Industrial Board, (1917) 280 Ill. 526, 117 N. E. 705, holding that such judgment, though rendered on defendant's demurrer, concluded the defendant as to the question of the character of plaintiff's employment involved in the judgment.

II. EMPLOYER ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

In general.—The federal Employers' Liability Act extends only to railroads, and so an employee injured while unloading a vessel does not come within the Act although the vessel is owned by an interstate railroad. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Jensen, (1917) 244 U. S. 205; 37 S. Ct. 524, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1083, Ann. Cas. 1917E 900, L. R. A. 1918C 451, reversing (1915) 215 N. Y. 514, 109 N. E. 600, Ann. Cas. 1916B 276, L. R. A. 1916A 403.

A railroad owned and operated by a lumber company for the transportation of logs from the forests to a tidewater point within the same state is not engaged in interstate commerce and an employee injured while working for such a road cannot maintain an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act, and this is true though the logs after being sold at the tidewater point are transported by the purchasers beyond the limits of the state. McCluskey v. Marysville, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 36, 37 S. Ct. 374, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 578, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 737, 134 C. C. A. 415; Bay v. Merrill, etc., Logging Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 40, 37 S. Ct. 376, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 580, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 295, 136 C. C. A. 277.

The right to recover under the Act arises only where the injury is suffered by an employee of a carrier engaged in interstate commerce. Shanks v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1916) 239 U. S. 556, 36 S. Ct. 188, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 436, L. R. A. 1916C 797, affirming (1915) 214 N. Y. 413, 108 N. E. 644 Ann. Cas. 1916E 467.

In Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. Thompson, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 353, 146 C. C. A. 401, it was held that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of the death of the plaintiff's intestate.

In McCluskey v. Marysville, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 36, 37 S. Ct. 374, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 578, affirming judgment in (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 737, 134 C. C. A. 415, which affirmed judgment in (W. D. Wash. 1914) 211 Fed. 721, dismissing a suit under the federal Employers' Liability Act, the federal Supreme Court said: "The conclusion of the court below that the defendants were not engaged in interstate or foreign commerce when the accident occurred is, we think, clearly demonstrated by the reasoning by which it sustained its conclusion and the authorities upon which it relied as above stated, and its judgment should be affirmed." This ruling controlled the decision that the defendant was not engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, under substantially the same facts (said the court) in Bay v. Merrill, etc., Logging Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 40, 37 S. Ct. 376, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 580, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 295, 136 C. C. A. 277.

Traffic agreement with street railroad in another state.—Where it appeared that the defendant, a Kansas corporation, had an electric railway from Leavenworth into Kansas City, Kansas, and a traffic agreement with a street railway company operating street railways in Kansas City, Missouri, it was held that the company was engaged in interstate commerce. Kansas City Western R. Co. v. McAdow, (1916) 240 U. S. 51, 36 S. Ct. 252, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 520, affirming (1914) 192 Mo. App. 540, 164 S. W. 188.

Transportation of mail.—"We think there can be no serious question, in view of the decisions, that the transportation of mail between different states and territories is interstate commerce." Zenz v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1917) 168 Pac. 364.

Empty cars.—Only while they have an interstate movement do empty cars have an interstate character, "and such interstate movement ceases when they reach the first distributing point in the state of their destination." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Feightner, (Ind. App. 1916) 114 N. E. 659.

Electric railway—Federal corporation.—In view of the Acts of Congress incorporating the Washington Railway and Electric Company and the fact that it operated a line of electric railway extending from a terminus within the District of Columbia to a terminus in Maryland, and that it was a common carrier of passengers for hire between its termini, it was held to be a "common carrier by railroad" within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act. Washington Ry., etc., Co. v. Scala, (1917) 244 U. S. 630, 37 S. Ct. 654, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1360, affirming (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 484, and holding that the decision in Omaha, etc., St. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1913) 230 U. S. 324, 33 S. Ct. 890, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1501, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 385, was of negligible value in the determination of this question. See also Washington R. Co. v. Downey, (1913) 40 App. Cas. (D. C.) 147.

State corporation.—"An electric railway company which operates an urban car line and also other lines connecting therewith and extending into another state, is both an intrastate and an interstate carrier. But the federal Employers' Liability Act does not apply in the case of injury to a servant of such company, who is operating a street car, confined to the urban lines and not, at the time of the injury, carrying interstate passengers or traffic." Watts v. Ohio Valley Electric R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 144, 88 S. E. 659.

An interurban electric railway operated entirely within the state may be engaged in interstate commerce. Cholerton v. Detroit, etc., Ry., (Mich. 1917) 165 N. W. 606.

And in Hammill v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1915) 87 N. J. L. 388, 94 Atl. 313, affirmed (1916) 88 N. J. L. 717, 96 Atl. 292, it was held that an employee of a railroad company, which was the lessee of a canal and which used the same as an interstate railway, was not engaged in interstate commerce because, the court said, he was employed on a canal and not on a railroad.

Express company.—Wells Fargo & Co., though using the facilities of a railroad company in conducting its business, is not a common carrier "by railroad," and therefore not within the federal Employers' Liability Act. Higgins v. Erie R. Co., (1916) 89 N. J. L. 629, 99 Atl. 98.

III. EMPLOYEE ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Relation of employer and employee, in general.—"To be an employee of a railroad corporation, in the capacity of an operative, upon a train, it is apparent that the relation of master and servant must exist between the company and the individual who claims to be an employee. The relation of master and servant must be based upon a contract, either express or implied, and the terms and conditions of the contract must, in a large measure, be looked to, to determine the duties, which each one owes to the other, so that it may be ascertained what acts of the employee may or may not constitute negligence as applied to the employee." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Harmon, (1916) 173 Ky. 1, 189 S. W. 1135.

The relationship of employer and employee is the same as that of master and servant. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Tredway, (1917) 120 Va. 735, 92 S. E. 560.

"It would seem from the federal decisions that when an employee is summoned for duty in relation to interstate transportation he is within the protection of the Act of Congress as soon as he comes upon the premises of the railway company. It should follow that he is under the same protection while, after leaving his duties, he is passing out of the premises of his employer, provided it is done within a reasonable time and along the usual route." Davis v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 134 Minn. 49, 158 N. W. 911.

In answer to the contention that the violation of an order for the movement of his train by a motorman on an interstate electric railroad terminated the relation of employer and employee for the time being, the court in Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1916) 241 U. S. 497, 36 S. Ct. 683, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125, said: "This invokes the doctrine that where an employee voluntarily and without necessity growing out of his work abandons the employment and steps entirely aside from the line of his duty, he suspends the relation of employer and employee, and puts himself in the attitude of a stranger or a licensee. The cases cited are those where an employee intentionally has gone outside of the scope of his employment, or departed from the place of duty. The present case is not of that character; for Campbell, as the jury might and presumably did find, had no thought of stepping aside from the line of his duty. From the fact that he disregarded and in effect violated the order as actually communicated to him, it, of course, does not necessarily follow that he did this wilfully. The jury was not bound to presume—it would hardly be reasonable to presume—that he deliberately and intentionally ran his train out upon a single track on which he knew an incoming train with superior rights was then due. However plain his mistake, the jury reasonably might find it to be no more than a mistake attributable to mental aberration, or inattention, or failure for some other reason to apprehend or comprehend the order communicated to him. In its legal effect this was nothing more than negligence on his part, and not a departure from the course of his employment."

It has been held that a section hand injured after working hours while returning on a hand car to his bunk house was still an employee of the railroad. Sala-brin v. Ann Arbor R. Co., (1916) 194 Mich. 458, 160 N. W. 552.

In Perez v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 192 S. W. 274, it was held that a section hand who after his day's work was done was standing behind a box car for shelter from the weather and to watch his children to see them safely across the tracks was not an employee of the railroad company at the time and so could not maintain an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act.

While a "student" fireman, so called in railroaders' parlance, was upon the engine and performing the duties contemplated by the arrangement with him, and within the scope of his duties under said arrangement, the railroad company owed to him the same duties it owed to the regularly employed fireman of an engine in its employment. But where the arrangement contemplated that while in the service of the company, such student fireman should be upon the engine, and under the direction of the engineer, and he was killed in a collision while riding in the caboose, which was not a place where his duties required him to be, and despite the engineer's request to come to the engine and assist so that, as the court said, "he, when he received his injuries, had for the time being, at least, abandoned and desisted from exercising the duties of his employment, as he had a right to do, . . . and was refusing to engage in the work contemplated by his arrangement," he was not an employee within the meaning of the federal Employers' Liability Act, although he had, for a few miles on the same trip, acted as fireman on the engine, under his "permit" as student fireman without wages. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Harmon, (1916) 173 Ky. 1, 189 S. W. 1135, Ann. Cas. 1918B 41.

In Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Tredway, (1917) 120 Va. 735, 93 S. E. 560, it was held under the facts of the case that a signalman at a crossing of two railways was an employee of the defendant railroad within the meaning of the federal Employers' Liability Act.

In Wichita Falls, etc., R. Co. v. Puckett, (Okla. 1916) 157 Pac. 112, writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction, (1916) 242 U. S. 619, 37 S. Ct. 214, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 531, it was held that an engineer employed and controlled as shown in the case, who was injured by the negligence of one or both of two railroad companies, while doing the work of both, was an employee of both within the meaning of the federal Employers' Liability Act, and might sue one or both of the companies.

Where an express messenger was also employed by the railroad to take charge of and operate its electric plant for lighting the cars, which was situated in the express car, he was held to be an employee of the railroad and entitled to sue under the federal Employers' Liability Act.

Wesseler v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 90 Wash. 234, 155 Pac. 1063, rehearing denied (1916) 90 Wash. 237, 157 Pac. 461.

Employed in interstate commerce, in general.—In construing the federal Employers' Liability Act the courts agree that to warrant an action under the Act both the employer and the employee must be engaged in interstate commerce at the time of the injury. Erie R. Co. v. Krysienski, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 142, 151 C. C. A. 218; Pryor v. Bishop, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 9, 148 C. C. A. 25.

That the employee must be engaged in interstate commerce at the precise time of the injury is emphasized by the courts. Erie R. Co. v. Welsh, (1916) 242 U. S. 303, 37 S. Ct. 116, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 319.

"It is the employment that determines whether or not the injury to the employee is within the purview of that act, and not the act of the employee just at the time of his injury." Jackson v. Industrial Board, (1917) 280 Ill. 526, 117 N. E. 705.

"The true test as to whether one is engaged in interstate commerce is this: Was the employee, at the time of the injury, engaged in interstate transportation, or in work so closely related to it as to be practically a part of it?" Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hansford, (1917) 173 Ky. 126, 190 S. W. 690.

In Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, (1916) 169 Ky. 662, 185 S. W. 94, it appeared that a workman engaged as an assistant to an engine hostler and called a pan puller, whose duty it was to get into a pit, under both interstate and intrastate engines, and remove the ashes, was injured by reason of the negligent backing up of a switch engine. The court held that the plaintiff was entitled to sue under the federal Act.

In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Parker, (1916) 242 U. S. 13, 37 S. Ct. 4, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 119, affirming (1915) 165 Ky. 658, 177 S. W. 465, the court, holding that the purpose of the act performed governed the determination of the question whether it was interstate commerce, said: "The business upon which the deceased was engaged at the moment was transferring an empty car from one switch track to another. This car was not moving in interstate commerce, and that fact was treated as conclusive by the court of appeals. In this the court was in error, for if, as there was strong evidence to show, and as the court seemed to assume, this movement was simply for the purpose of reaching and moving an interstate car, the purpose would control and the business would be interstate. The difference is marked between a mere expectation that the act done would be followed by other work of a different character, as in Illinois Cent. R. Co. v.

Behrens, [1914] 233 U. S. 473, 478, Ann. Cas. 1914C 163, 34 S. Ct. 646, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, [1055], and doing the act for the purpose of furthering the later work."

The rule for determining whether a railroad is engaged in interstate commerce so as to bring it within the operation of the federal Employers' Liability Act was stated in Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kindlesparker, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 1, 148 C. C. A. 17.

In Mayers v. Union R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 474, 100 Atl. 967, it does not appear from the opinion whether the injured employee was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of the injury. The court, apparently basing its decision entirely on the nature of the traffic in which the train that struck him was engaged, said: "The engine which struck the plaintiff and the cars which had come from Ohio had finished some interstate business, and had not yet begun upon any other. Their next work, so far as appears, might have been interstate or confined to Pennsylvania, as it should happen. At the moment the plaintiff was injured they were not engaged in either. Their character as instruments of commerce depended on their 'employment at the time, not upon remote probabilities or upon accidental later events.'" And in Mathews v. Alabama Great Southern R. Co., (Ala. 1917) 76 So. 17, a foreman of a bridge gang injured while on a flat car carrying a pile driver, by a faulty apron of an abandoned coal chute striking him as the flat car was being hauled past the chute was held not to be so engaged in interstate commerce as to come within the federal Employers' Liability Act.

If an employee is not engaged in interstate commerce the mere fact that he is injured by an interstate train will not bring his case within the federal Employers' Liability Act. Hardy v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 303, 93 S. E. 18.

"Work of preparing articles for interstate commerce is not a part of such commerce within the meaning of the federal Employers' Liability Act." Sullivan v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 163 Wis. 583, 158 N. W. 321.

Service "preliminary to the erection of a structure which might eventually form a part of a roadbed used in interstate commerce" "had no connection even remote, with transportation." Dickinson v. Industrial Board, (1917) 280 Ill. 342, 117 N. E. 438.

Employees within the statute—Employee operating train, in general.—It is not open to question that an employee engaged in operating a train carrying interstate traffic comes within the federal Employers' Liability Act, it being uniformly so held by the courts. Washington Ry., etc., Co. v. Scala, (1917) 244 U. S. 630, 37 S. Ct. 654, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1360 (conductor); Waters v. Guile, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 532, 148 C. C. A. 298 (brakeman); Daley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1917) 166 N. Y. S. 840 (brakeman); Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 411 (fireman).

Engineer.—In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, (1916) 239 U. S. 548, 36 S. Ct. 185, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 431, affirming (1914) 96 Neb. 87, 146 N. W. 1024, it was held that an engineer who was injured while taking road engine from Phillipsburg, Kansas, to Council Bluffs, Iowa, was engaged in interstate commerce, and was entitled to recover within the meaning of the federal Employers' Liability Act, and it was said to be immaterial whether the engine was in actual commercial use or whether it was being taken to a repair shop.

An engineer on a gravel train hauling from North Dakota to Montana has been held to have been engaged in interstate commerce. Hein v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 34 N. D. 440, 159 N. W. 14.

A baggage master employed on a train, making an interstate journey and injured while assisting in side tracking the train for the purpose of permitting another train to pass has been held to be engaged in interstate commerce, and entitled to recover under the federal Act. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Shaw, (1916) 168 Ky. 537, 182 S. W. 653.

Brakeman.—In Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Sherer, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 183 S. W. 404, it was held that a brakeman injured while setting a brake on a string of cars which were being switched, and which carried both interstate and intrastate merchandise, was engaged in interstate commerce and was entitled to sue under the federal Act, though the car on which he was working at the time of the accident contained intrastate freight only.

Members of a switching crew engaged in making up a train for interstate service are engaged in interstate commerce. Hurley v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 133 Minn. 101, 157 N. W. 1005; Geer v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (Tex. 1917) 194 S. W. 939.

And this is true although the cars contain no interstate shipment at the time of the injury, if they have been designated for such service. Christy v. Wabash R. Co., (1916) 195 Mo. App. 232, 191 S. W. 241.

In Bolch v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 90 Wash. 47, 155 Pac. 422, it was held that moving a car loaded with lumber for an interstate journey and standing on a storage track off the repair track to get at certain other cars and then moving it back again to the repair track, constituted an act of interstate commerce.

While an empty car loses its interstate character as soon as it reaches its destination in a state and subsequent movements of the car preparatory to sending it to another point in the state do not constitute interstate commerce, a car containing an interstate shipment continues its interstate character until the shipment is delivered to its final destination and a switchman injured while switching such a car after its arrival at one point within the state preparatory to placing it in a local train to be sent to another point within the state, its final destination, is within the Act. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Meadors, (1917) 176 Ky. 765, 197 S. W. 440.

A member of a switching crew injured while coupling cars has been held to be engaged in interstate commerce, where it appeared that one of the cars had been brought from without the state and before it was completely unloaded was moved temporarily but was to be returned to complete the unloading, the court holding that the service of the car in interstate commerce had not been completed. Wagner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1917) 277 Ill. 114, 115 N. E. 201.

A conductor of a switch engine engaged in moving cars to be made up into an interstate train is so engaged in interstate commerce as to be within the Act. Southern R. Co. v. Fisher, (Ala. 1917) 74 So. 580.

A member of a switching crew engaged in moving a refrigerator car which had been iced preparatory to receiving an interstate shipment of fruit has been held to have been engaged in interstate commerce. Aldread v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 93 Wash. 209, 160 Pac. 420.

A section foreman riding on a hand car with his men on the way to repair a supposed washout of an interstate track was within this Act. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Tomlinson, (Ga. App. 1918) 94 S. E. 909.

Employee engaged in construction or repairs.—"Employment or work in interstate commerce is not limited or restricted, for the purposes of the Act, to employment or work in actual interstate transportation. Its scope includes that, and also work in the operation or repair of cars, engines, appliances, machinery, tracks, roadbeds, works, boats, wharves, and other equipment actually used in interstate commerce." McKee v. Ohio Valley Electric R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 131, 88 S. E. 616.

Where the instrumentality under repair consists of the track, bridges, telephone or telegraph wires or other necessary general means of operation of a railroad engaged in interstate commerce, an employee injured while so engaged is generally held to be engaged in interstate commerce, and the fact that the road may also do an intrastate business is immaterial. Thus a section hand employed in repairing the track of a railroad engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce is entitled to the benefits of the Act. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Winfield, (1917) 244 U. S. 147, 37 S. Ct. 546, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1045, Ann. Cas. 1917D 1139, reversing (1915) 216 N. Y. 284, 110 N. E. 614, Ann. Cas. 1916A 817, 168 App. Div. 351, 153 N. Y. S. 499; Treadway v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1917) 127 Ark. 211, 191 S. W. 930; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Davella, (Colo. 1917) 165 Pac. 254. Likewise a section hand engaged in repairing an interstate track, who after "smoothing" the track was sent to assist in loading rails to be placed on the track, and was injured while so engaged, has been held to be within the Act. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Williams, (1917) 175 Ky. 679, 191 S. W. 920.

A section hand engaged in repairing a spur track leading to scales on which interstate cars were weighed has been held to be engaged in interstate commerce within the meaning of the Act. Dowell v. Wabash R. Co., (Mo. App. 1916) 190 S. W. 939.

An employee engaged in removing wreckage from a track used by the railroad in both interstate and intrastate commerce has been held to be within the Act. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (Colo. 1917) 163 Pac. 857; Schaeffer v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 172 Ky. 337, 189 S. W. 227.

An employee engaged in removing wreckage from a track over which interstate traffic regularly passes is engaged in interstate commerce within the meaning of the federal Employers' Liability Act, although his primary object at the time is to assist in jacking up a wrecked car in order to rescue a fellow workman caught beneath it. Southern R. Co. v. Puckett, (1917) 244 U. S. 571, 37 S. Ct. 703, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1321, affirming (1915) 16 Ga. App. 551, 85 S. E. 809.

An assistant foreman of a gang of men on a work train, engaged in removing old rails and other material from the tracks and roadbed of a railroad company, which road was used both in interstate and intrastate commerce, and who was injured while so employed, has been declared to come within the Act, even though the train on which he was at work did not go without the state in which it was on the day of the accident. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. McConnell, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 263, 142 C. C. A. 555. See also Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. Thompson, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 353, 146 C. C. A. 401.

An employee engaged in cleaning out ditches along an interstate railroad track has been held to be within the Act. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Blankenship, (Ala. 1917) 74 So. 960.

An employee assisting an engineer in making a survey with a view to improving a curve in the track has been held to be engaged in interstate commerce. Southern R. Co. v. McGuin, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 649, 153 C. C. A. 447.

A section hand who at the time of his injury was going to a place designated by the foreman to assist in unloading ties that were to be used in the track, "was engaged in work necessary to the maintenance and repair of the track—an instrumentality of interstate commerce—and was therefore employed in interstate commerce." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Williams, (1917) 175 Ky. 679, 194 S. W. 920.

In Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (Colo. 1917) 163 Pac. 857, the plaintiff's intestate, who was a wrecker or car repairer, "was engaged in interstate commerce when he received the fatal injuries, as he was removing a wreck of interstate freight from, and opening up, the track used by defendant to carry both intra- and interstate commerce."

In Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Knapp, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 950, 147 C. C. A. 624, it was held that a carpenter riding in a train carrying equipment for the repair of a bridge used for interstate and intrastate commerce was within the federal Act where it appeared that he was to assist in making the repairs.

In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Netherton, (1917) 175 Ky. 159, 193 S. W. 1035, a painter working on a bridge used in both interstate and intrastate commerce was held to be within the Act.

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kindlesparcker, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 1, 148 C. C. A. 17, it was held an engine used in both intrastate and interstate commerce partook of the character of both and retained such character while it was laid up for repairs, and so an employee injured while making such repairs came within the federal Act. That case, however, may be considered as overruled by the later decision in Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Winters, (1917) 242 U. S. 353, 37 S. Ct. 170, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 358.

"Plaintiff being at the time of the accident engaged in the repair of cars employed solely in interstate commerce, his rights must be determined in accordance with the laws of the United States." Smiegl v. Great Northern R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 57, 160 N. W. 1057.

A carpenter engaged in repairing a pumping station which supplies water to engines carrying interstate and intrastate commerce is at work on an instrumentality of interstate commerce and is within the federal Act. Newkirk v. Pryor, (Mo. App. 1916) 183 S. W. 682.

A workman on a station used in both interstate and intrastate commerce has been held to be engaged in interstate commerce. Chrosciel v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1916) 174 App. Div. 175, 159 N. Y. S. 924.

It has been held that an employee engaged in repairing a telegraph line used by the railroad in dispatching its trains, both intrastate and interstate, was engaged in interstate commerce and so was within the operation of the federal Employers' Liability Act. Coal, etc., R. Co. v. Deal, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 604, 145 C. C. A. 490, affirming (N. D. W. Va. 1914) 215 Fed. 285 (writ of error granted to Supreme Court, Coal, etc., R. Co. v. Deal, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 1020, 146 C. C. A. 665); Southern Pac. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (1916) 174 Cal. 19, 161 Pac. 1143; Collins v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., (1916) 193 Misc. 303, 159 N. W. 535.

An employee engaged in cleaning out an ash pit used by both interstate and intrastate engines has been held to have been engaged in work on an interstate instrumentality and so to come within the Act. Grybowski v. Erie R. Co., (1916) 89 N. J. L. 361, 98 Atl. 1085, affirming (1915) 88 N. J. L. 1, 95 Atl. 764.

Employee supplying fuel or water.—An employee engaged in providing coal and water for trains used in interstate commerce is within the federal Employers' Liability Act. Guy v. Cincinnati Northern R. Co., (Mich. 1917) 166 N. W. 667.

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. De Bord, (Tex. 1917) 192 S. W. 767, it was held that a brakeman engaged in assisting in the placing of a coal car on an elevated track so that it could be unloaded into coal chutes from which engines used in interstate traffic were supplied was engaged in interstate commerce.

An employee engaged in operating a pumping station, which furnished water to be used for both interstate and intrastate business has been held to be within the Act. Roush v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 243 Fed. 712.

In Collins v. Erie R. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1917) 245 Fed. 811, it was held that an employee engaged in pumping water for use by engines in interstate commerce was within the Act, provided it appeared that the water was for immediate use and its use was not dependent on remote possibilities.

A person engaged in repairing a pumping station which supplied water to engines carrying interstate and intrastate commerce is at work on an instrumentality of interstate commerce and as such is within the federal Act. Newkirk v. Pryor, (Mo. App. 1916) 183 S. W. 682.

Employee guarding or inspecting property.—A flagman stationed as a watchman at a street crossing of a railroad engaged in interstate commerce is so closely connected with such commerce that his employment partakes of its nature and he may maintain an action for personal injuries under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Southern Pac. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (1916) 174 Cal. 16, 161 Pac. 1142; West v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1917) 174 N. C. 125, 93 S. E. 479.

It has been held that the fact that the particular train which a gateman was attempting to protect and by which he was injured, was an intrastate train, did not affect his status as an interstate employee. Southern Pac. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (1916) 174 Cal. 8, 161 Pac. 1139, L. R. A. 1917E 262.

Employee going to or returning from work or temporarily diverted therefrom.—An employee leaving the yards of a railroad after his day's work, which consisted of switching both interstate and intrastate commerce, was within the federal Act, as held in Erie R. Co. v. Winfield, (1917) 244 U. S. 170, 37 S. Ct. 556, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1057, reversing (1916) 88 N. J. L. 619, 96 Atl. 394.

A car inspector while going through the yards in search of material for the repair of an interstate car has been held to have been engaged in interstate commerce. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Short, (1916) 171 Ky. 647, 188 S. W. 786.

In Armbrecht v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1917) 90 N. J. L. 529, 101 Atl. 203, it was held that it was open to the jury to infer from the evidence that the plaintiff's intestate was engaged in removing snow from the tracks both interstate and intrastate of a railway; that the work had been only temporarily suspended; that the men were told by the boss to go in a covered car, as it was raining and freezing at the time; that to do so they walked along the tracks because they could not go otherwise, and decedent was struck and killed by a fast passenger train considerably behind time; that there was a failure to warn him that the passenger train was behind time and might be expected.

Where an employee engaged in interstate commerce left his engine for the purpose of rescuing a pedestrian who had fallen on the main line track on which an interstate train was approaching, it was held that the nature of his employment was not destroyed by such act. Hardy v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 303, 93 S. E. 18. And see Southern R. Co. v. Puckett, (1917) 244 U. S. 571, 37 S. Ct. 703, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1321, affirming (1915) 16 Ga. App. 551, 85 S. E. 809.

A fireman who was engaged in "making up trains" for an interstate journey, but who during a temporary lull in the work was injured, has been held to come under the Act. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Skotzy, (1916) 196 Ala. 25, 71 So. 335.

Other employees.—A station employee injured while going to an interstate train to get the mail for his station has been held to be engaged in interstate commerce so as to come within the federal Employers' Liability Act. Lynch v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1917) 227 Mass. 123, 116 N. E. 401.

An employee engaged in unloading freight from a train engaged in interstate commerce is entitled to the benefits of the federal Employers' Liability Act. Western Ry. v. Mays, (1916) 197 Fla. 367, 72 So. 641.

A hostler engaged in fitting out engines for interstate traffic has been held to be engaged in interstate commerce. Hinson v. Atlanta, etc., Air Line R. Co., (1916) 172 N. C. 646, 90 S. E. 772.

In Wesseler v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 90 Wash. 234, 155 Pac. 1063, 157 Pac. 461, an express messenger in charge of the electric plant on an interstate train whose duty it was to stay on during the entire journey, who was injured while turning on the electric current to illuminate the train, was declared to be engaged in interstate commerce even though there was not at that particular moment of time any interstate freight or passengers.

A member of a bonding crew who was injured while they were preparing to resume the work of bonding the rails of the track of an electric railway company, which operated wholly within the state, but transported shipments in interstate commerce, was an employee within this Act. Cholerton v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., (Mich. 1917) 165 N. W. 606.

Employees not within the statute.—Brakeman.—While cars may have an interstate character, this is true only while they are in interstate movement, and the interstate movement ceases when they reach the first distributing point in the state of their destination. Thus in Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Feightner, (Ind. App. 1916) 114 N. E. 659, it was held that where the evidence did not show that cars after reaching a point of distribution would be sent out of the state it could not be said that a brakeman on a train taking them up and bound for a point within the state was engaged in interstate commerce.

Conductor.—It has been held that a conductor on a freight route between two points within a state could not be said to have been engaged in interstate commerce on his return trip because of the fact that on his outgoing trip the train carried freight destined to points without the state. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Peery, (1916) 242 U. S. 292, 37 S. Ct. 122, reversing 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 309, (1913) 123 Minn. 264, 143 N. W. 724, and (1914) 128 Minn. 119, 150 N. W. 382, 1103.

Engineer.—In Missouri, etc., R. Co. v.

Pace, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 184 S. W. 1051, it was held that coal billed to a point in Texas from Oklahoma and there reshipped to other Texas points lost its interstate character on reaching its first destination, and an engineer on the local train hauling the reshipment did not come within the statute.

A member of a switching crew, of a railroad company engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce, who was injured while switching cars loaded with coal which had been standing on a storage track to a coal shed, where it was kept to supply locomotives both for interstate and intrastate commerce, has been said not to come under the Act, the crew of which he was a member being confined to intrastate work. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington, (1916) 241 U. S. 177, 36 S. Ct. 517, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 941.

In Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Barlow, (1917) 244 U. S. 183, 37 S. Ct. 515, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1070, reversing (1915) 214 N. Y. 116, 107 N. E. 814, which affirmed (1913) 158 App. Div. 768, 143 N. Y. S. 1053, it was held that where it appeared that coal brought from without the state had remained on sidings for several days before being switched to the coal chutes, it had lost its interstate character, and therefore a member of the switching crew, injured while placing the cars on the chute, was not engaged in interstate commerce. The court said: "The essential facts in Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington, [1916] 241 U. S. 177, 36 S. Ct. 517, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 947, did not materially differ from those now presented."

A member of a switching crew removing cars from the shops to a shed to be iced has been held not to be within the Act where it appeared that none of the cars had been specifically designated for interstate service. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Industrial Board, (1917) 277 Ill. 512, 115 N. E. 647.

In Moran v. Central R. Co., (1916) 88 N. J. L. 730, 96 Atl. 1023, wherein it appeared that the plaintiff, a railroad employee, was injured by a car which had delivered a cargo of interstate merchandise and was at the time of the injury not in service but was awaiting an order for service, it was held that the car had ceased to perform its function in interstate commerce as soon as it disposed of its cargo, and therefore the plaintiff was not injured in interstate commerce and could not recover under the federal Act.

Employee engaged in construction or repairs.—A laborer engaged in cutting a tunnel for an interstate railroad is not engaged in interstate commerce, where the tunnel is not so far completed as to be used as an instrumentality of interstate commerce. Raymond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1917) 243 U. S. 43, 37 S. Ct. 268, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 583, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 239,

147 C. C. A. 245, and the court saying the question was settled "by recent decisions of this court, whatever doubt may have existed in the minds of some at the time the judgment below was rendered."

In McKee v. Ohio Valley Electric R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 131, 88 S. E. 616, it was held that a laborer in an excavation, made under a wooden trestle over which the trains of an interstate railroad ran and engaged in making a foundation for a new steel bridge to be substituted for the wooden trestle, was not engaged in interstate commerce, his work not being intimately enough connected with interstate commerce.

A section hand engaged in helping to remove ties from the right of way and piling them for safe-keeping and future use has been held not to have been engaged in interstate commerce, and the fact that the ties were afterward used on a section of track over which interstate commerce was hauled did not alter the rule. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Watson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 195 S. W. 1177.

A section hand engaged in peeling railroad ties along the right of way for future use in the track has been held not to have been engaged in interstate commerce. Karras v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 578, 162 N. W. 923, L. R. A. 1917E 677.

A section hand employed ordinarily in replacing rails on an interstate track was not engaged in interstate commerce while merely loading old rails lying on the right of way. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hansford, (1917) 173 Ky. 126, 190 S. W. 690.

A carpenter building forms into which concrete was to be poured to form a retaining wall for the tracks of a railroad engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce has been held not to be within the Act. Dickinson v. Industrial Board, (1917) 280 Ill. 342, 117 N. E. 438.

In Hudson, etc., R. Co. v. Iorio, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 855, 152 C. C. A. 641, wherein it appeared that an employee was engaged in placing rails in a pit for future use, the court said: "It cannot be said that the rails which Iorio was engaged in storing against a use that was certainly not imminent, and might never occur, were at the moment engaged in, or practically part of, interstate commerce; for that commerce was going on without any present assistance, either from Iorio, or the rails on which he was working, or the men who were working with him. We therefore hold that the actual employment or use at the moment of injury of the thing upon which the person injured was working is the test of applicability of the statute, under circumstances such as shown here. By that test plaintiff below was not practically engaged in or a part of interstate commerce when he was hurt, and the judgment is reversed."

Following Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington, (1916) 241 U. S. 177, 36 S. Ct. 517, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 941, the court, in Kelly v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 95, 151 C. C. A. 171, wherein it appeared that a carpenter was injured while causing the removal of lumber from storage tracks to certain coal chutes which he had been directed to repair, said: "What is there, then, in the case at bar from which it can be inferred that Kelly was, at the time he was killed, engaged in interstate transportation? His engagement in causing the transfer of the lumber from the storage tracks to the place where it was to be used does not connect him more closely with transportation than Harrington's engagement in taking coal from the storage tracks to the coal chutes. In neither case was there such close direct relation to interstate transportation as would require the application of the provisions of the law."

Where rails were removed from a track and new ones put in their places several days before plaintiff was injured, and were laid on the ground outside of and parallel with the track, and could not have interfered with the railroad's use of the track or its business as a carrier, and it was not shown to have been the intention of the railroad company to use these rails in its track elsewhere, or that they were so used, or even fit for such use, the work of gathering them up for the purpose of storing them elsewhere, or perhaps selling them as scrap steel, could in no sense be considered as a repairing of the track, or as necessary to the railroad's engaging in interstate commerce. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 167 Ky. 745, 181 S. W. 375.

In Alexander v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 51 Mont. 565, 154 Pac. 914, a conductor on a work train, operating wholly within the state, and carrying timber to a point within the state from where it would be carried by a tributary branch to the company's tie treating plant within the state, from which place it was shipped to various points either within or without the state as the need arose, was held not to be engaged in interstate commerce.

In Killes v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 93 Wash. 416, 161 Pac. 69, it was held that a workman building a scaffold to be used in painting a freight shed used for interstate traffic was not engaged in interstate commerce.

An employee engaged in loading sand and gravel at a gravel bank for repair of an interstate railroad, and who was killed by the falling of a portion of the bank on which he was at work, has been held not to have been engaged in interstate commerce. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Houston, (1917) 114 Miss. 888, 75 So. 690.

A mechanic repairing a locomotive in a railroad company's roundhouse in Iowa was not then employed in interstate commerce. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Winters, (1917) 242 U. S. 353, 37 S. Ct. 170, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 358, 154 N. W. 964, 155 N. W. 1103, reversing on this point, but for other reasons affirming judgment in (1914) 126 Minn. 260, 148 N. W. 106, (1915) 131 Minn. 181, 496.

In Central R. Co. v. Paslick, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 713, 152 C. C. A. 547, wherein it appeared that an employee was injured while at work repairing a car belonging to another interstate carrier, the court said: "If the repair of an engine in the intervals between its interstate occupations is not sufficiently close to commerce to be a part of it, the repair of a car, which moves only when the engine hauls it, is certainly no closer."

In Castonguay v. Grand Trunk Ry., (Vt. 1917) 100 Atl. 908, it was held that a workman engaged in the repair of a roundhouse wall was not employed in interstate commerce.

In Washington, etc., Electric R. Co. v. Owens, (1917) 131 Md. 1, 101 Atl. 532, reversing judgment for the plaintiff, and without awarding a new trial, the court said: "Judge Dobler, who presided at the trial below, followed the ruling of this court in Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, [1916] 128 Md. 678, 98 Atl. 225. In that case Branson suffered injury in the shops at Cumberland while engaged in painting engines and cars used in both interstate and intrastate commerce, and this court allowed a recovery upon the ground that the work of painting these engines and cars had a reasonable and substantial relation to interstate commerce. But that case has been reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States (Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, [1917] 242 U. S. 623, 37 S. Ct. 244, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 534), apparently upon the sole ground that Branson was not engaged in interstate commerce at the time he suffered the injury."

An employee engaged in repairing a car which was used during the previous week in interstate commerce but which was used in intrastate commerce after its repair has been held not to be within the Act. Loveless v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (Ala. 1917) 75 So. 7.

An employee assisting in unloading wreckage from a car for the purpose of selecting that which is capable of repair is not brought within the Act merely because inspectors several days later designate the parts, through which he is injured, to be shipped out of the state for repair. Schaeffer v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 172 Ky. 337, 189 S. W. 237.

A carpenter engaged in erecting a stove pipe to be used in a round house where engines engaged in interstate commerce were kept was held in Dunn v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (Mo. App. 1916) 190 S. W. 966, not to be engaged in interstate commerce.

Employee supplying fuel or water.—In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington, (1916) 241 U. S. 177, 36 S. Ct. 517, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 941, affirming (Mo. App. 1915) 180 S. W. 443, it appeared that at the time an employee was killed he was engaged in causing the removal of coal from storage tracks to the coal shed or chutes by which the same would be delivered to locomotives used in interstate traffic. The Supreme Court held that the Act of Congress did not apply because there was no close or direct relation to interstate transportation in the taking of the coal to the coal chutes.

Employee guarding or inspecting property.—In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Industrial Board, (1916) 273 Ill. 528, 113 N. E. 80, L. R. A. 1916F 540, a watchman employed in a railroad yard, which contained a few cars used in interstate commerce and others not carrying interstate commerce, who was injured while inspecting certain cars not shown to be used in interstate commerce, was declared not to be engaged in an act of interstate commerce at the time of his injury. Compare Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Farmers' Trust, etc., Co., (1915) 183 Ind. 287, 108 N. E. 108.

A night watchman charged with the duty of guarding tools and material for the construction of a new depot and track to be used in interstate commerce has been held not to be engaged in interstate commerce as tested by the rule that the employee at the time of the injury must be engaged in interstate transportation, or in work so closely related to it as to be practically a part of it. New York Cent. R. Co. v. White, (1917) 243 U. S. 188, 37 S. Ct. 247, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 667, Ann. Cas. 1917D 629, L. R. A. 1917D 1, affirming (1915) 216 N. Y. 653, 110 N. E. 1051, (1915) 169 App. Div. 903, 152 N. Y. S. 1149.

A railroad detective riding on a train of cars which was being switched in the railroad yards has been held not to be engaged in interstate commerce where it did not appear that there were interstate cars in that vicinity. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Industrial Board, (1916) 273 Ill. 528, 113 N. E. 80, L. R. A. 1916F 540.

A person employed by a railroad to assist in a search for train robbers who had robbed an interstate train has been held not to have been engaged in interstate commerce so as to come within the Act. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Bonner, (Ala. 1917) 75 So. 986.

Employee going to or returning from work or temporarily diverted therefrom.—An employee who was injured while on his way for orders from his superior has been held not to have been engaged in interstate commerce at the time of his injury, since the nature of his work was undetermined until his orders had been given, and it was further held that the fact that but for his injury he would have been given orders requiring him to engage in interstate commerce did not alter the rule. Erie R. Co. v. Welsh, (1916) 242 U. S. 303, 37 S. Ct. 116, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 319, affirming (1913) 89 Ohio St. 81, 105 N. E. 189.

A member of a train crew occupying a caboose while waiting to be called to duty is not engaged in interstate commerce before the call is actually made. Pryor v. Bishop, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 9, 158 C. C. A. 25.

In Bumstead v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1917) 99 Kan. 589, 162 Pac. 347, L. R. A. 1917E 734, the Kansas court extended the doctrine as announced in Pryor v. Bishop, cited in the last preceding paragraph, to include a freight conductor who, after actually being called about an hour and a half before the time for his train to leave and who was required to report thirty minutes before that time, was getting his breakfast in the caboose preparatory to reporting.

In Jacoby v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 610, 161 N. W. 751, 164 N. W. 88, it was held that a car record clerk, who after completing his duties was injured while leaving the yards, was not at the time engaged in interstate commerce. The court distinguished the case from that where a fireman was injured while going from his engine to his boarding house, preparatory to returning to his engine for an interstate trip, on the ground that the car clerk was leaving for the day after finishing his duties and with no intention to return.

In McBain v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 52 Mont. 578, 160 Pac. 654, it was held that, under the rule that the employment at the precise time of the injury is the test of the nature of the work, a brakeman who after the completion of his trip and before assignment to another was injured while going through the yards for material for use in a future trip, the nature of which was undetermined, could not be said to have been engaged in interstate commerce. And it was further held that it was of no consequence that his work ordinarily had to do with interstate commerce to a much greater extent than with purely local shipments.

It has been held that a railroad carpenter who temporarily left his work and went across the tracks for the purpose of buying a newspaper and was injured while so doing was not at that time engaged in interstate commerce. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Archer, (1916) 113 Miss. 153, 74 So. 135.

A janitor in a general office of a railroad who was injured while breaking up coal to put in the furnace has been held not to be engaged in interstate commerce, although the business of the railroad was almost entirely interstate in character.

Great Northern R. Co. v. King, (1917) 165 Wis. 159, 161 N. W. 371.

IV. NEGLIGENCE AS BASIS OF LIABILITY

In general.—Under this Act, the mere happening of the accident will not warrant a recovery; there must be negligence on the part of the railroad company or on the part of some employee, as this is the basis of liability. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, (1916) 241 U. S. 476, 36 S. Ct. 626, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1110; Southern Ry. Co. v. Gray, (1916) 241 U. S. 333, 36 S. Ct. 558, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1030; Williams v. Western, etc., R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 726, 93 S. E. 555; Western Maryland R. Co. v. Sanner, (1917) 130 Md. 581, 101 Atl. 587; Hull v. Virginian R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 25, 88 S. E. 1060.

Therefore before a recovery can be had, it must be shown by either direct or circumstantial evidence that the railway company was negligent; or, in other words, that it owed a care and failed to exercise it. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skaggs, (1916) 240 U. S. 66, 36 S. Ct. 249, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 528; Southern R. Co. v. Derr, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 73, 153 C. C. A. 109; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Glas, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 256, 152 C. C. A. 244; Williams v. Western, etc., R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 726, 93 S. E. 555; Roebuck v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1917) 99 Kan. 544, 162 Pac. 1153, L. R. A. 1917E 741; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Short, (1916) 171 Ky. 647, 188 S. W. 786; Western Maryland R. Co. v. Sanner, (1917) 130 Md. 581, 101 Atl. 587; Sims v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (Mich. 1917) 162 N. W. 988; Gaines v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (1916) 193 Mich. 398, 159 N. W. 542; Hurley v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 133 Minn. 101, 157 N. W. 1005; Wilson v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (N. H. 1916) 97 Atl. 981; Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Fitts, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 188 S. W. 528; Hull v. Virginian R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 25, 88 S. E. 1060.

The employer is not an insurer of the safety of his employees. Toler v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 94 Wash. 360, 162 Pac. 538.

So where an employee is hurt and there is no proof that he was at fault it does not follow that the employer's agents must have been, so as to permit him to recover therefor. Popoutsikis v. Spokane, etc., R. Co., (1915) 89 Wash. 1, 153 Pac. 1053.

And the question of negligence on the part of the company as a deduction from the pulling out of a draw bar or of a comparison of negligences should not be submitted to the jury where it appears that an accident was due to the neglect of the deceased to perform his duty by complying with the rules of the company in such cases. Great Northern R. Co. v. Wiles, (1916) 240 U. S. 444, 36 S. Ct. 406, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 732.

Negligence is essential to recovery and the plaintiff must prove it even where the local state statute provides that in actions against railroads for damages proof of injury inflicted by an engine propelled by steam shall be prima facie evidence of negligence. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, (1918) 247 U. S. 367, 38 S. Ct. 535, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167, reversing (Miss. 1916) 71 So. 913.

The doctrine has been recognized that where an injury cannot reasonably be anticipated and would not have happened unless under exceptional circumstances, it is not negligence to fail to take precautionary measures to prevent it, although if taken the injury would not have resulted. Brightwell v. Lusk, (1916) 194 Mo. App. 643, 189 S. W. 413.

Willfulness is not an element under this statute. Dutton v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1916) 104 S. C. 16, 88 S. E. 263.

The term negligence as here used must be taken to mean such act of commission or omission as would at common law have been sufficient to entitle the case to be submitted to the jury. Western Maryland R. Co. v. Sanner, (1917) 130 Md. 581, 101 Atl. 587.

In this connection the United States Supreme Court has declared that in an action under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, rights and obligations depend upon it and applicable principles of common law, as interpreted and applied in the federal courts. Southern R. Co. v. Gray, (1916) 241 U. S. 333, 36 S. Ct. 558, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1030. And in a case in Kansas it is said: "While the Federal Employers' Liability Act does not define the term 'negligence' of the carrier, it has been determined that the expression as used in the act is the common-law negligence of master and servant as defined by the federal courts, and that the common law as interpreted and applied in the federal courts determines what constitutes negligence; and, if a state court differs with the federal courts as to what will or will not constitute negligence, the interpretation of the federal courts necessarily controls." Roebuck v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1917) 99 Kan. 544, 162 Pac. 1153, L. R. A. 1917E 741.

Negligence must have been proximate cause.—There must be a proximate and causal relation between the damages and the negligence of the company. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Carnahan, (1916) 241 U. S. 241, 36 S. Ct. 594, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 979; Carlson v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., (1917) 205 Ill. App. 156; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Perkins, (1917) 177 Ky. 88, 197 S. W. 526; Young v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (1916) 171 Ky. 510, 188 S. W. 621.

So in an action to recover damages for an injury alleged to be due to the company's negligence, it must appear that the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence or wrongful act. And where, upon the evidence presented, the proximate cause of a person's death may well have been either his own or the company's negligence, adequate instructions should be given to the jury in regard thereto so that they may know and apply the rules laid down by the federal courts in such cases. Delaware, etc., Co. v. Ketz, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 31, 147 C. C. A. 101.

The death of a brakeman in a rear-end collision cannot be said not to "result in part from the negligence of any of the employees" of the railway company, within the meaning of this section where, but for the negligence of such employees, neither train would have been at the point of collision at the time it occurred, even though the decedent would not have been killed had he done his duty and gone back to warn the following train instead of remaining in the caboose, as he did. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hadley, (1918) 246 U. S. 330, 38 S. Ct. 318, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 751, affirming (1916) 99 Neb. 349, 156 N. W. 765.

In Wisconsin, however, it has been declared that under the Federal Employers' Liability Act the common-law rule as to proximate cause has no relevancy, it being sufficient that the defect or negligence pleaded contributed in any manner to cause the injury. Calhoun v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 162 Wis. 264, 156 N. W. 198.

"The mere fact that some other cause operated with the negligence of the defendant does not relieve it from liability. The original wrong, concurring with some other cause for which neither party is liable and both causes operating proximately at the same time in producing the injury, makes the defendant liable, even though the other cause was one for which the defendant was not responsible." Thus it was so held where both a jack block and a stationary car on the adjoining track were concurring causes in the death of plaintiff's intestate, which could not have resulted from either cause alone, it being said that the presence of the stationary car on an adjoining track was not an independent, intervening cause that would relieve the defendant of the primary, producing cause, which, as found by the jury, was the negligent presence of the jack block in the space between the tracks. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skinner, (1917) 177 Ky. 62, 197 S. W. 552.

Defects in cars, engines, appliances, etc.—Presumption as to knowledge of defect.—"Under the federal statute the presumption prevails, even after proof of the defect, that the railway company was not aware of its existence; and until it is shown that the railway company knew, or in the exercise of ordinary care should have known, of the defect, it is not charged with that knowledge." St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Ingram, (1916) 124 Ark. 298, 187 S. W. 452.

Defect not due to negligence.—A railroad company is not liable to damages under this Act for a defect in its cars unless that defect was due to its negligence. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Glas, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 256, 152 C. C. A. 244.

Effect of inspection.—Testimony by those who did it, that their work of inspection and preparation was properly done and made safe a place where another employee was required to work, is not conclusive of no negligence when their statements are contradicted by the physical facts. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840.

Duty of employer to furnish sufficient assistants.—An employer must furnish his employee with adequate assistance or a sufficient number of workmen. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Tucker, (1916) 168 Ky. 144, 181 S. W. 940.

It is the duty of the master to exercise ordinary care to assign an adequate number of servants to each particular piece of work and to maintain them during the progress of the work and each particular part of it. Sorenson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 53 Mont. 268, 163 Pac. 560.

Duty of carrier as to place to work.—It is the duty of the carrier to furnish a reasonably safe place for his employees in which to do its work. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Steel, (1917) 129 Ark. 520, 197 S. W. 288; McFarland v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 177 Ky. 551, 197 S. W. 944; Young v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (1916) 171 Ky. 510, 188 S. W. 621; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, (1916) 170 Ky. 230, 185 S. W. 861; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Tucker, (1916) 168 Ky. 144, 181 S. W. 940; Winslow v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (Mo. App. 1916) 192 S. W. 121; Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 367, 100 Atl. 961.

And where a servant is required to work in a dangerous and unsafe place the master is responsible for any injury that he may sustain on account of such unsafe and dangerous condition. Coal, etc., R. Co. v. Deal, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 604, 145 C. C. A. 490.

Obligations which duty imposes.—The duty of a carrier to exercise reasonable care to provide a safe place for his employees to work includes properly constructed roadbed, structures, and track used in the operation of a railroad. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 76, 155 C. C. A. 606. See also Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51.

The standard of care required of a railroad company in constructing its roads and bridges is such reasonable care as is ordinarily used by railroads generally in that respect. Hull v. Virginian Ry. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 25, 88 S. E. 1060.

The failure of a railroad company to discover the condition of a tie, a piece of which, being rotten, slivered off under the weight of an employee who stepped upon it, causing him to stumble and fall, and its failure to ballast to the top of the tie, neither of which defects was of a character to impair safety in operation, will not render it liable under this Act for injuries sustained by such employee, who knew that there were always some ties on the line which were partly decayed, and that the ballast was occasionally below the top of the ties. Nelson v. Southern R. Co., (1918) 246 U. S. 253, 38 S. Ct. 233, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 699, affirming (1915) 170 N. C. 170, 86 S. E. 1036.

Duty of employer as to appliances.—The employer must furnish the employee reasonably safe tools and appliances to work with. Philadelphia, etc., Ry. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Tucker, (1916) 168 Ky. 144, 11 S. W. 940; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Patrick, (1915) 167 Ky. 118, 180 S. W. 55; Knight v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., (1917) 142 La. 357, 76 So. 799; McFarland v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 177 Ky. 551, 197 S. W. 945; Young v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (1916) 171 Ky. 510, 188 S. W. 621; Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 367, 100 Atl. 961; Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Fitts, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 188 S. W. 528; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Cosio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 182 S. W. 83.

"The rule of law is that the employer is under the duty to exercise ordinary care to supply machinery and appliances reasonably safe and suitable for the use of the employee, and in case of his failure so to do, unless the employee has waived his right after due notice of defective appliances and machinery, or has, upon due knowledge, assumed the risk, the employer is, of course, liable for any such dereliction in duty." Toler v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 94 Wash. 360, 162 Pac. 538.

"While the act abolished what is known as the 'fellow-servant doctrine,' there is nothing contained therein which changes the rule as respects the nonassignable duty of the master to exercise reasonable care in providing the servant with reasonably safe tools and appliances with which to perform the work required of him by the master." Coal, etc., R. Co. v. Deal, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 604, 145 C. C. A. 490.

If an appliance has been furnished for use by the workman for a particular purpose and in a particular way, and the workman proceeds to use it for the contemplated purpose and in a proper manner without any want of care, and that appliance unexpectedly and without any known cause gives way or breaks, it would be imputable to a defective condition, and upon proof of such accident and of such facts it is a case of res ipsa loquitur, a prima facie case is established, and the burden is upon the employer to explain away, if possible, his presumed negligence. Toler v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 94 Wash. 360, 162 Pac. 538.

The employer is under a duty to exercise ordinary care to supply machinery and appliances reasonably safe and suitable for the use of the employee, but is not required to furnish the latest, best, and safest appliances, or to discard standard appliances upon the discovery of later improvements, provided those in use are reasonably safe and suitable. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bower, (1916) 241 U. S. 470, 36 S. Ct. 624, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1107.

"The master is not compelled to provide the best means or implements that can be secured, or those that are absolutely safe and most convenient. His duty is discharged when he provides implements and means which are reasonably safe for those exercising ordinary intelligence for their own safety." Kentucky Traction, etc., Co. v. Sharp, (Ky. 1917) 197 S. W. 464.

And in the absence of some rule of law prescribing the character of a maintenance of a way car, no negligence can be predicated upon the use of such a car which was duly inspected, which was in continuous service, and which had always stood up under the work for which it was designed, and was wrecked by a collision brought about by the deceased himself, the employee's act being the proximate cause of the accident and the sole negligence shown. Trice v. Southern Pac. Co., (1916) 174 Cal. 89, 161 Pac. 1144.

Rules of company—In general.—"The master cannot escape responsibility or avoid his legal duty to use ordinary care to furnish his servant a reasonably safe place to work by promulgating a rule which places that responsibility on the servant." The court also further said in this connection: "We do not hold that the rule was in any sense improper, nor do we hold that in no case can the master discharge his full duty to the servant by promulgating proper rules for his guidance. Each case must stand on its own facts in that regard, and there may be, and often are, conditions connected with the servant's work which make the promulgation of rules necessary, and in which the establishment of adequate rules to govern the workmen is all that can reasonably be expected of the master. In such a case the master does discharge his whole duty to the servant when he establishes such rules." Yoakum v. Lusk, (Mo. 1917) 193 S. W. 635.

Where employee in position of peril at distance from others.—Where coemployees are distant from each other, and it is dangerous for one to have another continue at his work, he who is subject to the peril not being in a position to ascertain the true conditions, it is the duty of the employer to frame and promulgate such rules and regulations as will afford reasonable safety to employees. Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 367, 100 Atl. 961.

Effect of acquiescence in disregard of rule.—A rule of the company which has been habitually disregarded by its employees with its knowledge will not relieve it from liability. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skinner, (1917) 177 Ky. 62, 197 S. W. 552.

But it is only acquiescence in habitual violation of rules that amounts to abrogation. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, (1916) 124 Ark. 437, 187 S. W. 920.

Particular acts or conditions as negligence.—Loading cars.—A railroad is charged with the duty of exercising ordinary care to equip and load its trains so as to avoid injury to trackmen whose presence along and near the track it has reason to anticipate, and where it fails to exercise such care, and by reason thereof one charged with the duty of maintaining the track is injured, it is liable. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Claybourne, (1916) 169 Ky. 315, 183 S. W. 903.

Weeds on right of way.—The mere presence of weeds upon a right of way is not of itself a breach of duty to a section hand whose duties involve the care and maintenance of such right of way. McCutcheon v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., (1917) 164 N. W. 775.

Trolley pole close to track.—Closer to the track than other poles on the line and maintaining a trolley pole so close thereto that a conductor cannot safely discharge the duties required of him, constitutes evidence of negligence sufficient to justify the submission of the case to the jury. Washington R., etc., Co. v. Scala, (1916) 244 U. S. 630, 37 S. Ct. 654, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1360.

Violation of Safety Appliance Acts.—The United States Supreme Court, in referring to a violation of the Safety Appliance Acts as negligence, has said: "It is of course settled that if the equipment was in fact defective or out of repair, the question whether this was attributable to the company's negligence is immaterial." Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1915) 241 U. S. 497, 36 S. E. 683, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125.

A violation of the Safety Appliance Act is negligence per se. Lemee v. Texas, etc., Ry. Co., (1917) 141 La. 769, 75 So. 676.

In view of the positive duty imposed by the Safety Appliance Act upon railroads to furnish safe appliances for the coupling of cars, the jury may infer negligence on the part of the company from the fact that a coupler failed to perform its function. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Gottschall, (1917) 244 U. S. 66, 37 S. Ct. 598, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 995.

It is error in an action under this Act, alleging a violation of the Safety Appliance Act, because the tender of an engine was not equipped with grabirons or hand holds, to charge that "any iron rod or iron device securely fastened upon the end of defendant's tender to which employees could conveniently catch hold while in the performance of their duties in coupling or uncoupling cars was a handhold or grab iron within the meaning of the law," and that, therefore, if the vertical iron handhold and iron rod—pin lifting or uncoupling lever—extending across the tender just above the coupler, were so designed and constructed as to permit employees engaged in coupling or uncoupling cars to readily grasp them for their better security while in the performance of such work, the defendant was not guilty of negligence in failing to provide necessary and proper handholds or grab-irons, and the plaintiff cannot recover for any injury sustained from lack of them on the engine tender, provided, only, the jury should find "that said attachments or devices furnished reasonable security to the employees of defendant in coupling and uncoupling said tender and cars." St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, 243 U. S. 311, 37 S. Ct. 278, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 741.

As to the application of the rule of res ipsa loquitur it has been said: "We think we give the plaintiff in an employee's case all the benefit of the maxim to which he is entitled when we say that it may apply to aid him; but whether the event does speak, and what it says, depends upon the facts of the particular case." Southern R. Co. v. Deer (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 73, 153 C. C. A. 109.

And in another case it was declared: "Though the strict doctrine of res ipsa loquitur does not apply as between master and servant, except in a modified form, where the accident results from defective conditions, conditions which can be explained upon no reasonable assumption other than negligence, and circumstances appear, independent of the accident itself, indicating negligence on the part of the defendant—in such event there is sufficient proof to authorize the submission of the question of the defendant's negligence to the jury." McFarland v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 177 Ky. 551, 197 S. W. 944.

Fellow servant doctrine.—In general.—Under the Employers' Liability Act, the action lies for "injury or death resulting in whole or in part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees

The Act by this language abrogated the common-law rule known as the fellow-servant doctrine by placing the negligence of a coemployee upon the same basis as the question of the defendant's negligence the negligence of the employer. Therefore under this statute as a general rule, an employer is liable to his employee for an injury resulting from the negligence of a fellow servant. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. De Atley, (1916) 241 U. S. 310, 36 S. Ct. 564, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1016; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skaggs, (1916) 240 U. S. 66, 36 S. Ct. 249, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 528; Southern R. Co. v. Derr, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 73, 153 C. C. A. 109; Virginian R. Co. v. Linkous (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 88, 144 C. C. A. 386; Harris v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1917) 176 Ky. 846, 197 S. W. 464; Lanis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 140 La. 1, 72 So. 788; Elliott v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 117 Miss. 426, 71 So. 741; Koukouris v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 193 Mo. App. 495, 186 S. W. 545; Kinney v. Hudson River R. Co., (1916) 98 Misc. 11, 162 N. Y. S. 42; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 196 S. W. 613; Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Fitts, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 188 S. W. 528; Anest v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 89 Wash. 609, 154 Pac. 1100; Hovaneck v. Great Northern R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 511, 162 N. W. 927.

Fellow-servant in intrastate commerce.—A right of recovery under the statute arises if the injury is suffered while the carrier is engaged in interstate commerce and while the employee is employed by the carrier in such commerce, although the causal negligence is that of a coemployee engaged in intrastate commerce. Central Vermont R. Co. v. White, (1915) 238 U. S. 507, 35 S. Ct. 865, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1433, Ann. Cas. 1916B 252; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skaggs, (1916) 240 U. S. 66, 36 S. Ct. 249, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 528, affirming (1914) 125 Minn. 532, 147 N. W. 1135.

Limitation on liability.—The master is not liable for any and every negligent act of his servant. It is necessary to show that the negligence was committed by the servant while engaged in the service and in some way connected with the doing of the service. Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. Bryan, (1916) 18 Ariz. 106, 157 Pac. 376.

Assault by fellow servant.—A recovery cannot be had under this section for a willful and criminal assault by one employee upon another where, on the undisputed facts, the assault was not committed in the course or scope of his employment, nor in the furtherance of the company's business. Roebuck v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1917) 99 Kan. 544, 162 Pac. 1153, L. R. A. 1917E 741.

Liability of fellow servant.—Independent of any statute, a person is liable in damages for any negligent act of his own which causes injury to his fellow servant. Lusk v. Osborn, (1917) 127 Ark. 170, 191 S. W. 944.

Particular instances.—The negligent handling of cars by agents and employees of a railroad which results in injury to another employee is actionable under this law, and a failure to warn may likewise be actionable thereunder. Young v. Lusk, (1916) 268 Mo. 625, 187 S. W. 849.

So where the conductor of a train, whose duty it was to look out for the safety of a brakeman working on the same train with him, gave the signal to the engineer to back up the train while the brakeman was between the cars, it was held that he was guilty of negligence rendering the company liable, where, in view of the circumstances, he had good reason to believe, if he had exercised the required care, that the brakeman was in that position. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Norris, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 926.

In the absence of evidence rendering applicable the provisions of a statute allowing the operation of a locomotive to its destination when the headlight becomes defective while in transportation, it is negligence, as a matter of law, to operate a locomotive after dark without a headlight, and although such provision might operate to relieve the company of liability for the penalty provided by the act, such operation might nevertheless be negligent. Solalrin v. Ann Arbor R. Co., (1916) 194 Mich. 458, 160 N. W. 552.

Where the engineer knows that the track ahead is obstructed by the track men and their operations upon it, in a manner to endanger lives and property if care is not observed, he has no right to indulge in any presumption of a safe track, but must advance cautiously, keeping a lookout for signals to stop. So it has been said: "The great current of authority . . . recognizes the sensible doctrine that the presumption of a clear track cannot be allowed to shield the defendant against liability where the act in question did not proceed from such presumption but with knowledge of the actor—the engineer—that the track ahead was not clear, and that it was necessary to keep a lookout." Brightwell v. Lusk, (1916) 194 Mo. App. 643, 189 S. W. 423.

V. ACTIONS

Persons entitled to sue—In general.—Necessity of showing of dependency and pecuniary loss.—"Notwithstanding the pecuniary loss may be more or less, according to the degree of the dependency of the beneficiaries of the first and second classes upon deceased, and the amount of recovery therefor may be increased or diminished accordingly, the act does not make their right contingent upon dependency, as it does that of the next of kin. Therefore, to sustain an action for the benefit of the first two classes, it need only appear that they have sustained some pecuniary loss. The relation of the beneficiary to deceased may be such that such loss will be presumed; but, if it is not, then it must be alleged." Berg v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (S. C. 1917) 93 S. E. 390.

Personal representative.—A cause of action for the death of an employee must be prosecuted by a personal representative and not by beneficiaries. Treadway v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1917) 127 Ark. 211, 191 S. W. 930; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1917) 62 Colo. 492, 163 Pac. 857.

Power of administrator to compromise.—An administrator may compromise and accept settlement of an unliquidated claim for damages without special authority from the Probate Court. Where the personal representative acts in good faith, those who would impeach his conduct must show fraud or mistake or such gross negligence as would amount to fraud. Treadway v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1917) 127 Ark. 211, 191 S. W. 930.

Appointment of administrator.—Under a statute authorizing a county judge to appoint a temporary administrator and to define the powers conferred by such statute it has been held that such a court has power to appoint a temporary administrator to prosecute a suit under this Act. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 191 S. W. 570.

Effect of settlement by one of beneficiaries.—After suit is brought under the federal Employers' Liability Act by the personal representative of the decedent to recover damages for his death, a settlement by one of the beneficiaries of the action in no way affects the right of the personal representative to proceed with the action to final judgment. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Collard, (1916) 170 Ky. 239, 185 S. W. 1108.

Widow cannot sue in individual capacity.—The federal Employers' Liability Act does not give to the widow of the deceased, as such, any right of action whatever for his death, but gives that right solely to the personal representative of the deceased, and therefore, when in a suit by the widow the facts are shown to be such that the Act of Congress applies, such suit cannot be maintained by her because she has, in her own right, no cause of action. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1917) 62 Colo. 492, 163 Pac. 857; Hardy v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 303, 93 S. E. 18; Giersch v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 98 Kan. 452, 158 Pac. 54.

As under the federal Act suit can be prosecuted only by the personal representative of the deceased, an action by the wife individually, based upon the authority of a state statute thus superseded, is brought by a person not a real party in interest, and without right to maintain it. Hein v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 34 N. D. 440, 159 N. W. 14.

If when injured the deceased was engaged in interstate commerce, the right of recovery depends on the federal Employers' Liability Act, which only permits suit by a personal representative for the benefit of surviving widow or husband and children if there be such, and it has been decided that it is error, in an action by a widow in behalf of herself, as next friend for her minor children and for the use and benefit of his parents, to refuse to direct the jury to return a verdict for the defendant on the special plea that if deceased was engaged in interstate commerce, the plaintiff has no right to maintain the suit. Pecos, etc., R. Co. v. Rosenbloom, (1916) 240 U. S. 439, 36 S. Ct. 390, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 730.

Widow suing individually may amend by making herself personal representative.—"It has been held that a plaintiff suing in her individual capacity under the state law may amend her complaint by making herself a party plaintiff as the personal representative of deceased, and alleging the cause of action under both the state and federal statutes." Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson (1917) 60 Colo. 492, 163 Pac. 857. And such amendment does not constitute a new action so as to make the statute of limitations a bar to the continuance of the suit. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, (Tex. Civ. App. 1914) 171 S. W. 512.

Effect of abandonment of wife.—Although it appears in evidence that after a husband had abandoned his wife and child, the wife had lived with another man and that she had another child, such facts do not warrant the court in holding, as matter of law, that she had forfeited her right of support by her conduct. Gilham v. Southern Ry. Co., (S. C. 1917) 93 S. E. 865.

Parents.—The right of a parent under the Act to recover for the death of a child is subordinated to the right of the widow or child of the person killed to recover for such death, i. e., if there be a surviving widow or surviving child or children, the action shall be maintained exclusively for their benefit, and to the exclusion of the other classes of beneficiaries named therein. Davis v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1916) 172 Ky. 55, 188 S. W. 1061.

Where, under a state statute, a father is entitled to his son's earnings during minority he has a right of action suing as administrator under the federal Act to recover damages in case of his son's death due to the carrier's negligence. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Gotschall, (1917) 244 U. S. 66, 37 S. Ct. 598, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 995.

Pecuniary loss to a mother will not support recovery by her where the son left a widow, and although they had lived apart, no claim was made that rights and liabilities consequent upon marriage had disappeared under the local law. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, (1918) 247 U. S. 367, 38 S. Ct. 535, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167, reversing (Miss. 1916) 71 So. 913.

"Next of kin dependent upon such employee."—It is said that grammatically construed, the word "dependent" refers only to the next of kin. Berg v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (S. C. 1917) 93 S. E. 390.

Who are next of kin is to be determined by the legislation of the various states to whose authority that subject is normally committed. The absence of a definition in the Act plainly indicates the purpose of Congress to leave the determination of that question to state law. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Kenney, (1916) 240 U. S. 489, 36 S. Ct. 458, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 762.

Where it was suggested that if the state law be held applicable to determine next of kin, the right should have been recognized to seek to trace the paternity of an illegitimate child so as to make the asserted father the parent under the statute it was said that this contention might well be disposed of by saying that no such contention seemed to have been urged in either of the courts below and the court further declared: "But aside from this, the entire want of merit of the proposition is at once demonstrable from a two-fold point of view: (a) because it was necessarily foreclosed by the ruling of the court below as to the state law concerning the next of kin and the right of the brothers and sister of the illegitimate child to inherit from him solely because of a common motherhood, a ruling which excluded by necessary implication the right now contended for. (b) Because as no provision, either of the state law or of the common law, supporting the asserted right is referred to, the suggestion may be taken as simply a typical illustration of the confusion of thought involved in the main proposition relied upon which we have previously adversely disposed of." Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Kenney, (1916) 240 U. S. 489, 36 S. Ct. 458, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 762.

"A person is dependent upon another when he has the moral right to rely and does rely upon such other for support either, in whole or in part. Murphy v. Nowak, [1906] 223 Ill. 301, 307, 79 N. E. 112, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 398. Now the mere fact that deceased had at different times sent her an occasional sum does not establish dependency." Smith v. Pryor, (1916) 195 Mo. App. 259, 190 S. W. 69.

"Where it is necessary to show only pecuniary loss in the case of a husband, wife, children, or parents, yet, in the case of one, who is not in the above category, dependency must also be shown and be proved like any other fact." Smith v. Pryor, (1916) 195 Mo. App. 259, 190 S. W. 69.

"Mere occasional gifts do not make recipient 'dependent' upon the giver within the meaning of the statute. True, the act does not require that the dependency must be complete or entire. A partial dependency will be sufficient to furnish the basis of an award in some amount. But dependency, either in whole or in part, must exist." Smith v. Pryor, (1916) 195 Mo. App. 259, 190 S. W. 69.

The financial condition of the deceased and of members of his family is of value as tending to show whether they depended on him for support, and for the purpose of establishing such a condition of dependency evidence has been received that he left no insurance or practically none and that neither he nor his wife or children had any property. Dutton v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1916) 104 S. C. 16, 88 S. E. 263.

In a case in which it was suggested in the United States Supreme Court that there was no proof tending to show a dependent relation between the next of kin who were recognized and the deceased so as to justify recovery under the statute that court declared: "It suffices to say that it was expressly foreclosed by the finding of the jury sanctioned by the trial court and was not questioned in the court below, and at all events involves but a controversy as to the tendencies of all the proof foreclosed by the action of both courts which we would not reverse without a clear conviction of error, which after an examination of the record on the subject we do not entertain." Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Kenney, (1916) 240 U. S. 489, 36 S. Ct. 458, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 762.

A half brother of a person killed while in the employ of a carrier engaged in interstate commerce is not within the terms of this Act. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Jones, (1916) 111 Miss. 852, 72 So. 681.

Joinder of carrier and employee as defendants—An employee of a railway company engaged in interstate commerce cannot maintain a joint action against the company and its engineer under this Act, where concurring negligence of both defendants is alleged and also a violation of the federal Safety Appliance Act. Lee v. Central of Georgia R. Co., (Ga. 1917) 94 S. E. 558.

Procedure in general.—"Ordinary incidents of state procedure" are not excluded by this Act. Dickinson v. Stiles, (1918) 246 U. S. 631, 38 S. Ct. 415, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 908, affirming (1917) 137 Minn. 410, 163 N. W. 791, and holding that a Minnesota statute giving an attorney a lien for his fees upon his client's cause of action which is not defeated by the latter's settlement of the case, may be applied to a cause of action arising under this Act.

The federal Employers' Liability Act having conferred on state courts a jurisdiction concurrent with that of the federal courts in actions under the statute, and having made no regulation of the practice in those actions, the practice in an action in a state court under the statute is regulated by the law of the forum. Chesapeake, etc., Ry. Co. v. De Atley, (1916) 241 U. S. 310, 36 S. Ct. 564, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1016.

In a case founded on the Act of Congress, constructions given the Act, and of proceedings thereunder, by the federal courts, are controlling. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Bird, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 196 S. W. 597.

When Congress gave the state courts co-ordinate jurisdiction in this class of cases with the federal courts, by necessary implication it adopted the procedure and practice of the state courts for the trial of such cases. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Meadows, (1916) 119 Va. 33, 89 S. E. 244.

State courts may, in an action under the federal Act, apply the rules of procedure which obtain in the administration of state laws, as for instance in respect to the sufficiency of evidence. Mulligan v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1916) 104 S. C. 173, 88 S. E. 445; Howell v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1914) 99 S. C. 417, 83 S. E. 639.

And where a state statute deals only with a rule of evidence it is proper to charge the jury in accordance therewith, in an action under this Act. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Scarlet, (1917) 115 Miss. 285, 76 So. 265.

In another case it is said: "Whether the difficulty should be met by admitting the testimony of expert witnesses, or by receiving in evidence the standard interest and annuity tables in which present values are worked out at various rates of interest and for various periods covering the ordinary expectancies of life, it is not for us in this case to say. Like other questions of procedure and evidence, it is to be determined according to the law of the forum. But the question of the proper measure of damages is inseparably connected with the right of action, and in cases arising under the Federal Employers' Liability Act it must be settled according to general principles of law as administered in the federal courts." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 241 U. S. 485, 36 S. Ct. 630, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1016.

A decision that the plaintiff has no remedy under this Act does not preclude him from seeking his remedy under the state law, if he has any. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Harmon, (1917) 174 Ky. 850, 192 S. W. 817; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 167 Ky. 745, 181 S. W. 375.

"It is now settled that, where the complaint declares under the federal law, failure to sustain it under such law is not fatal, but recovery may still be had under the state law, if the pleadings and proof are sufficient under the state law." Alexander v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 51 Mont. 565, 154 Pac. 914.

Election.—Where, under the pleading, a plaintiff may proceed either under this Act or at common law, it has been held to be error to refuse a motion requiring him to elect which he will proceed under, but it is also declared that it is not reversible error if not prejudicial to the substantial rights of the defendant. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, (1916) 169 Ky. 662, 185 S. W. 94.

Pleadings.—In general.—It is essential to a case under the statutes of the United States, not only that the defendant was at the time engaged in interstate commerce, but also (as the fact might be the defendant was likewise engaged in transportation within the state) that the plaintiff was, at the time the cause of action arose, employed in interstate commerce work. This is settled beyond the necessity of the citation of authorities laying down the ruling. Lucchetti v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 137.

And the pleadings must show a case within the federal statute. Hogarty v. Philadelphia, etc., Ry. Co., (1916) 255 Pa. St. 236, 99 Atl. 741.

So to authorize the recovery, under the federal statute known as the "Employers' Liability Act," of damages by an employee for an injury sustained through the negligence of a common carrier, it must be alleged and proved that the injury was suffered while the employee was engaged in interstate commerce. It is not sufficient that the carrier in whose service the injury is sustained is engaged in interstate commerce. The true test is, is the work or service, in performing which the employee is injured, a part of the interstate commerce in which the carrier is engaged? Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 167 Ky. 745, 181 S. W. 375. See also Walker v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1917) 241 Fed. 395; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Gross, (Ind. App. 1916) 111 N. E. 653.

The plaintiff's pleading must allege that the defendant was a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce or state facts from which such conclusion may reasonably be inferred. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Tucker, (1916) 168 Ky. 144, 181 S. W. 940.

The complaint must allege that the employee was engaged in interstate commerce. Walker v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1917) 241 Fed. 395.

Statute need not be expressly referred to.—It is not necessary, in order to entitle a plaintiff to a recovery under the federal Employers' Liability Act, that the statute should be expressly referred to in the complaint, as the court is presumed to be cognizant of the enactment, and where the facts alleged bring the case within the Act, full effect must be given to it. Wagner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1917) 277 Ill. 114, 115 N. E. 201; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 411; Hogarty v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 255 Pa. St. 236, 99 Atl. 741.

Because good faith is presumed, it has been held that a single count, which states facts sufficient to make a case either under the Act of Congress or under the state statutes and common law, states a case arising under the Act of Congress. Flas v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (D. C. Neb. 1916) 229 Fed. 319.

The general laws, whether state or federal, must be considered. It is not necessary that these laws be mentioned or in any way identified in the pleading. It is only required to state the facts which bring the case within them. Pipes v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1916) 267 Mo. 385, 184 S. W. 79.

Where a declaration was attacked because of the failure of the pleader to allege a duty on the part of the conductor to the brakeman and its violation, it was held that as the plaintiff alleged facts to show that the carrier was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of the injury, and the Act referred to unquestionably applied and governed the rights of the parties to this action, it was therefore unnecessary to assert in the declaration the particular duty which the conductor owed to the brakeman, for Congress by this Act, imposed a liability on the railroad in case injury resulted to one employee through the negligence of another. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Norris, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 926, 158 C. C. A. 214.

So it is not necessary for a defendant in such an action to plead affirmatively either the federal Employers' Liability Act or its engagement in interstate commerce in order to raise the bar of the exclusive application of the federal Employers' Liability Act against the maintenance of an action under the state Employers' Liability Act. Chrosziel v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1916) 174 App. Div. 175, 159 N. Y. S. 924; Gear v. St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co., (Tex. 1917) 194 S. W. 939.

Where the case made by the evidence is within this Act, the defendant is entitled to the benefit of its provisions, though neither party has pleaded the Act. Hein v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 34 N. D. 440, 159 N. W. 14.

Joinder of causes of action.—A complaint against two defendants, alleging that their concurrent negligence caused an injury to the plaintiff, is good against a demurrer for misjoinder of causes, though the liability of one defendant rests upon the federal Employers' Liability Act, and that of the other upon the common law. Doyle v. St. Paul Union Depot Co., (1916) 134 Minn. 461, 159 N. W. 1081.

A party may have two causes of action, which, although growing out of the same fact occurrences, are distinct, separate, and different. One of them, for illustration, may arise out of the general principles of the law of negligence, and the other out of the provisions of a statute, state or federal. He may have the right to assert either or both. If he asserts one or both, and makes a slip in pleading his averments of facts, he may amend. If, however, he brings his action for the one cause, and wishes to change to the other, it is clear he is not amending the pleadings in the action brought, but is bringing in a new cause of action. Lucchetti v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 137.

Sufficiency of complaint generally.—Where a complaint alleged that plaintiff was a towerman, and as part of his duties was required to pump water by means of a gasoline engine into a water tank for use on locomotive engines engaged in interstate commerce, it was declared that the inference might be drawn from such allegations that the water was being pumped into the tank for the immediate use of locomotives engaged in interstate commerce, and that such use was not dependent upon any remote possibilities. Collins v. Erie R. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1917) 245 Fed. 811.

Where a petition showed that appellant was a carrier railroad operating a line of road from Texas to New Mexico, and that appellee was injured while employed in maintaining this line of road in repair, and the appellant answered that it was so operating the road as an interstate commerce carrier, and admitted plaintiff was so at work, it was said: "The allegation that a line of road runs from one state to another is prima facie, we think, an allegation that the road was engaged in interstate transportation. The fact that he was employed in repairing that line of road when injured, as a section hand thereon, will be sufficient to show such injury 'while' employed in interstate commerce, if the law attached to such labor the character of interstate commerce." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Cosio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 182 S. W. 83.

Answer.—While a plaintiff pleading only a common-law right of action against a railroad company may not invoke the federal Employers' Liability Act, the company in its defense may, of course, to defeat the action rely upon the Act of Congress, if it can show, or the testimony offered by the plaintiff shows, that it was engaged in interstate commerce at the time the plaintiff was injured. Hogarty v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 255 Pa. St. 236, 99 Atl. 741.

But where the defendant alleged in his answer that the plaintiff "was engaged in handling engines and cars used and engaged in interstate commerce and that the rights of the plaintiff and the liability of the defendant are controlled by the acts of Congress known as the Employers' Liability Act," it was declared that these allegations did not deny plaintiff's right to recover, and, at most, only stated a proposition of law dependent upon the evidence, that they did not controvert any allegations in plaintiff's petition, and hence no issue was thereby joined by the pleadings. Wichita Falls, etc., R. Co. v. Puckett, (1916) 53 Okla. 463, 157 Pac. 112.

Particular allegations.—Negligence.—In an action under this section it has been held that negligence may be averred in a very general way and that the quo modo of negligence need not be defined. Western Ry. v. Mays, (1916) 197 Ala. 367, 72 So. 641.

Pecuniary loss.—There should, in suits founded on this Act, be pleadings averring the pecuniary losses which plaintiffs expect to prove. Nashville, etc., R. v. Anderson, (1915) 134 Tenn. 666, 185 S. W. 677.

As the law does not presume financial loss to a parent from the death of an adult son it must be alleged. But it seems that it is not necessary to allege that the parents were dependent on the son. Berg v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (S. C. 1917) 93 S. E. 390.

When the petition shows the relation of the dependent to the deceased, a general averment that the person for whose benefit the action was brought was dependent upon the deceased and had a pecuniary interest in his life and suffered a pecuniary loss by his death, is sufficient without setting out in detail the reasons showing the dependency or the pecuniary loss. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Holloway, (1916) 168 Ky. 262, 181 S. W. 1126.

In Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Steward, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 30, 138 C. C. A. 444, the allegations were held sufficient to show a cause of action in favor of next of kin, within the federal Act.

Amendments.—If an amendment merely expands or amplifies what was alleged in support of the cause of action already asserted, it relates back to the commencement of the action and is not affected by the intervening lapse of time. But if it introduces a new or different cause of action, it was the equivalent of a new suit, as to which the running of the limitation was not theretofore arrested. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Renn, (1916) 241 U. S. 290, 36 S. Ct. 57, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1006.

The rule is well settled that an amendment to meet the proofs is within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Waters v. Guile, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 532, 148 C. C. A. 298.

A refusal to allow an amendment, for the purpose of bringing a case under the federal Act, has been held proper where, if allowed and the case had proceeded under that Act, there would have been no presumption of negligence against the railroad company arising upon proof of injury to the employee; and, as there was no substantive proof that the defendant was guilty of any act of negligence, the nonsuit was proper. Williams v. Western, etc., R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 726, 93 S. E. 555.

If the declaration brings the case within the Employers' Liability Act the fact that it appeared as an amendment to one that alleged the same facts with the exception of the plaintiff's coming from beyond the state raises no federal question. Kansas City Western R. Co. v. McAdow, (1916) 240 U. S. 51, 36 S. Ct. 252, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 520.

It has been held that in an action for death brought under a state statute an amendment may be allowed so as to bring the case under this Act and will relate back to the time of the filing of the original petition. Lanis v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 140 La. 1, 72 So. 788.

Where an action was brought against a railroad to recover damages for death under a state law alleging the defendant to be an intrastate railroad and two years after death the plaintiff was allowed by the court to amend the declaration by alleging that the deceased and defendant were engaged in intrastate commerce, such amendment was held to have been properly allowed and it was declared that a demurrer to a plea of the statute of limitations should have been sustained. The court said: "The only question presented for our review and decision is whether the cause of action under the amended declaration was barred by the two-year statute of limitations under the federal Employers' Liability Act. It will be observed here that the only amendment made to the original declaration was the allegation that the injury occurred while the parties were engaged in interstate commerce, instead of intrastate commerce. This amendment did not present a new or different statement of facts upon which the action was based, but merely amended the declaration, so as to come within the operation of the federal Employers' Liability Act, instead of the state law. The allegations contained in the original declaration did not support a cause of action under the federal law, but the amendment is not inconsistent with the purpose and relief originally sought by the declaration.

It appears, therefore, that the amendment did not constitute a new cause of action, inconsistent with that set forth in the original declaration." Broom v. Southern R. Co., (1917) 115 Miss. 493, 76 So. 525.

Where the declaration as amended contained two counts, one under the common law of the state and the other charging negligence under the Employers' Liability Act, it was decided by the United States Supreme Court that if it had been shown that the injury had been received in interstate commerce, the defendants would have been entitled to insist upon the applicable federal law as the exclusive measure of their liability, and they would not have lost this right merely because the plaintiff had seen fit to present the claim "in an alternative way" by means of separate counts. Osborne v. Gray, (1915) 241 U. S. 16, 36 S. Ct. 486, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 865.

And where an action is brought under a state statute to recover damages for the death of a husband it has been held that the provisions of this section operate as a bar to the allowance of an amendment filed more than two years after the commencement of the action, it appearing that the amended pleadings and the previous pleadings are not subject to the same defenses. Ft. Worth, etc., Ry. Co. v. Bird, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 196 S. W. 597.

And where the original petition did not allege facts from which it could be fairly inferred that a cause of action was stated under the federal Act and the cause has been finally determined by the Circuit Court of Appeals, the filing of an amended petition so as to state a cause of action under that Act will not be permitted, as the bar of the statute then applies. Walker v. Iowa Cent. Ry. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1916) 241 Fed. 395.

Where the defendant objects that the original complaint did not state a cause of action under the Act of Congress, that with the amendment the complaint would state a new cause of action under that Act, and that, as more than two years had elapsed since the right of action accrued, the amendment could not be made the medium of introducing this new cause of action consistently with the provision in section 6 that "no action shall be maintained under this act unless commenced within two years from the day the cause of action accrued," whether in what was done this restriction was in effect disregarded is a federal question and subject to re-examination in the United States Supreme Court, however much the allowance of the amendment otherwise might have rested in discretion or been a matter of local procedure. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Renn, (1916) 241 U. S. 290, 36 S. Ct. 567, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1006.

An amendment to a petition alleging as an additional ground for recovery the negligence of a fellow servant does not introduce a new cause of action, so as to come within the operation of the bar of the statute. Ft. Worth Belt Ry. Co. v. Jones, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 182 S. W. 1184.

Permitting plaintiff to amend her declaration more than two years after the accident, to include a claim for damages for the pain and suffering sustained by the decedent prior to his death as the result of the injuries received has been held no error. Washington, etc., Co. v. Scala, (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 484.

Where the declaration alleged that the injuries received caused the deceased to suffer "intense pain" and it was subsequently amended by an added allegation that the injuries caused him "conscious pain and suffering" it was held that the difference between the two, if there was any difference, was too elusive in the practical administration of justice, and the claim that the amendment added a new cause of action to the declaration was too fanciful for discussion, being at most only a slight elaboration of a probably sufficiently claimed element of damage. Washington Ry., etc., Co. v. Scala, (1917) 244 U. S. 630, 37 S. Ct. 654, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1360.

The intervention of a temporary administratrix more than two years after the death of the deceased does not amount to the introduction of a new cause of action. Ft. Worth Belt Ry. Co. v. Jones, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 182 S. W. 1184.

So a change from a widow as party plaintiff to the administrator as party plaintiff is held not to be a change of the cause of action. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson, (1916) 134 Tenn. 666, 185 S. W. 677, Ann. Cas. 1917D 902.

Where a complaint alleges one of the essential facts to show a cause of action under this Act but by mistake omits the other, an amendment may properly be allowed to supply the omission. Lucchetti v. Philadelphia, etc., Ry. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 137.

Amendment on appeal.—Where the plaintiff has proceeded in the trial court on the theory of an action on the case for personal injuries, he will not be allowed to amend his declaration on appeal so as to make it a declaration under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Rowley v. Shepardson, (1916) 90 Vt. 25, 96 Atl. 374.

Evidence.—In general.—Where the allegations of the complaint stamp the case as brought under the provisions of the federal Employers' Liability Act to maintain it as such, evidence that at the time concerned the company was engaged and the decedent was employed in interstate commerce is indispensable. Alexander v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 51 Mont. 565, 154 Pac. 914.

And where in an action brought by a widow to recover for the death of her husband who was killed while engaged in the work of switching, the answer consisted of a general denial and the averments of contributory negligence and assumption of risk, and in the defendant's testimony it appeared that the car against which the deceased was crushed was at the time an interstate car, which evidence was first received over objection and afterwards stricken out, it was held that it was properly received and erroneously stricken out. Giersch v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 98 Kan. 452, 158 Pac. 54.

Variance between pleadings and proof.—The evidence must correspond to the allegations and be confined to the point in issue. St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal Co. v. Schuerman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 1, 150 C. C. A. 203.

And where the plaintiff's petition in a suit for damages for personal injuries, against a railroad company, was drawn under the state law, and the plaintiff's proof showed that he was injured while engaged in interstate commerce, it was held that the plaintiff should have amended his petition to conform to the proof; but, having failed to so amend his petition, the defendant's motion for a peremptory instruction should have been sustained. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Tucker, (1916) 168 Ky. 144, 181 S. W. 940.

But it is held that a variance between pleading and proofs is immaterial unless such as to mislead the opposite party. Waters v. Guile, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 532, 148 C. C. A. 298.

Proof of negligence may be either by direct or circumstantial evidence. Mulligan v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1916) 104 S. C. 173, 88 S. E. 445.

In an action to recover damages for injuries alleged to be due to a defective roadbed, evidence as to the condition of the tracks at the time of the injury and of its repair subsequent thereto has been held admissible, not as an implied admission of negligence on the part of the defendant but as tending to corroborate the plaintiff, as a witness in his own behalf, as to the condition at the time of the accident. West v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1917) 174 N. C. 125, 93 S. E. 479.

The fact that plaintiff's signed account of the accident given defendants' representative expressed the opinion that no one was to blame for the accident, and that the negligence alleged in his letter refusing defendants' offered adjustment was not that asserted here, while seriously discrediting plaintiff's testimony, as to the fact of the asserted negligence, does not legally estop him from such assertion. Waters v. Guile, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 532, 148 C. C. A. 298.

Evidence bearing on question of damages.—Evidence of the age, experience, habits, health, character and earning capacity of a deceased person is competent to show pecuniary loss sustained by his dependents, and the life tables may be introduced to show that the expectancy of the deceased covers that of his dependents, when the period of pecuniary loss is the life expectancies of the dependents. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840.

Similarly in estimating the pecuniary loss sustained by the widow, it was held to be competent to introduce evidence on the subject of the earning capacity, age, health, habits, character, expectancy of life and mental and physical disposition to labor of the deceased. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Holloway, (1916) 168 Ky. 262, 181 S. W. 1126.

Where the death of an injured employee is the basis of the action, any standard table of mortality reasonably authenticated, covering the class of persons to which deceased belonged, is admissible in evidence on the question of the quantum of damages recoverable. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840.

Declarations of the decedent that he intended to go to work and to contribute to the support of both his father and mother will support a finding of damages in their favor in an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Collard, (1916) 170 Ky. 239, 185 S. W. 1108.

Where there was evidence that the plaintiff lost his arm by reason of the injury complained of, and was unfitted for work of the character which he had previously done, and that he had done some work of different sorts, there was no error in admitting evidence that since the December preceding the trial he had had no active employment, coupled with the statement that he had attempted to get work during that period but had been unable to do so. Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Musgrove, (1916) 145 Ga. 647, 89 S. W. 767.

On the trial it was error, over objection, to allow the plaintiff to testify that he had a wife and child. Macon, etc., Co. v. Musgrove, (1916) 145 Ga. 647, 89 S. W. 767.

In an action for damages for death involving the question of the father's reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefits from his deceased son, an agreed judgment of divorce between the decedent's father and mother, by which the father surrendered the decedent to his mother during his minority was held not to be admissible. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Collard, (1916) 170 Ky. 239, 185 S. W. 1108.

And in an action by a personal representative to recover damages for the benefit of the father and mother of the decedent, the deposition of the decedent given in the action of divorce between his father and mother was held to be properly excluded, because it did not illustrate decedent's general attitude of mind towards his father, but only his attitude of mind growing out of particular circumstances which had long since passed away. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Collard, (1916) 170 Ky. 239, 185 S. W. 1108.

Burden of proof—In general.—"It is incumbent upon the plaintiff to show affirmatively all the elements of the right to recover. Unless the court can see that there is such evidence in the cause as will thoroughly support a verdict, if the jury should find it to be credible and proper to be made the basis of their finding, it becomes an imperative duty of the court to instruct the jury to find their verdict for the defendant." Western Maryland R. Co. v. Sanner, (1917) 130 Md. 581, 101 Atl. 587.

The only burden, however, upon the plaintiff to entitle him to a verdict is one to support his material allegations by a fair preponderance of proof. Hubert v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1916) 90 Conn. 261, 96 Atl. 967.

Again, instruction that the jury could not find for plaintiff in an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act unless they believed the preponderance of the evidence was in his favor, offered by the defendant, was properly refused. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840.

Where the facts show the case may well have been within the statute, the initial burden is satisfied, and it is for the defendant to show the contrary. Erie R. Co. v. Krysienski, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 142, 151 C. C. A. 218.

Employee engaged in interstate commerce.—A plaintiff bringing an action under this statute assumes the burden of pleading and proving that at the time he was injured he was engaged in interstate commerce. McBain v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., (1916) 52 Mont. 578, 160 Pac. 654.

Negligence.—The burden of proving negligence is on the plaintiff. Southern Ry. Co. v. Derr, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 73, 153 C. C. A. 109; Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. Thompson, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 353, 146 C. C. A. 401; Canadian Pac. Ry. Co. v. Thompson, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 353, 146 C. C. A. 401; Douvall v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1915) 43 App. Cas. (D. C.) 395; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Rhoda, (Fla. 1917) 74 So. 19; Savannah, etc., Ry. v. McCoy (1917) 20 Ga. App. 544, 93 S. E. 257.

Effect of state statutes.—As to the effect of a state statute as to the presumption of negligence and burden of proof in cases of injury or death caused in the operation of railroads it has been said: "A contract between the master and servant involves certain reciprocal duties which, if not expressed, are clearly implied, and grow out of the relation between them. Among others on the part of the master is to exercise ordinary care to furnish his servant with a safe place to work, and to this end the master may adopt reasonable rules and regulations for the protection of the employees while in the performance of their duties. And it is the duty of the servant to exercise ordinary care for his own protection, and in so doing to obey the rules which the master has adopted and promulgated to insure the safety of the employee. . . . From the trend of these decisions, we believe the correct doctrine under the federal Employers' Liability Act is to hold that a prima facie case of negligence against a railway company is not established merely by proof of an injury in the operation of trains, and that such proof does not shift the burden upon the railway company to show that it was not negligent; but, on the contrary, plaintiff must show the actual existence of negligence on the part of the agents or employees of the carrier. Under the state statute, as construed by us, negligence is presumed upon proof of the injury which occurred in the operation or running of trains. . . . But such is not the case, as we understand it, under the federal Employers' Liability Act, since that Act contains no provision to that effect. . . . It is clear that in the absence of our statutes the burden of proof in this case would be the same as in all other cases, requiring a person who alleges damages on account of negligence to prove it. As these statutes have no application under the Employers' Liability Act, it follows that the instructions of the court applying the state statutes to the facts of this record were erroneous." St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Steel, (Ark. 1917) 197 S. W. 288.

Presumptions.—Under this Act there is no presumption of negligence against the carrier arising upon proof of injury to or death of an employee. Southern Ry. Co. v. Derr, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 73, 153 C. C. A. 109; Williams v. Western, etc., R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 726, 93 S. E. 555; Southern Ry. Co. v. Blackwell, (1917) 20 Ga. App. 630, 93 S. E. 321; Ivey v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1916) 18 Ga. App. 434, 89 S. E. 629; Landrum v. Western, etc., R. Co., (1916) 146 Ga. 88, 90 S. E. 710.

But in the case of a yard switchman who had been in the employ of the company for twenty-five years and was killed on one of the company's tracks it was said: "He must have been thoroughly acquainted with the situation and familiar with the location of the tracks, the movement of trains and all the customs of the yard. That such a man should be run down and killed at a place where he knew every detail of the premises and of the methods employed raises a presumption that some abnormal condition prevailed which was not to be expected, which he could not have foreseen and which he was not required to guard against by taking extraordinary precautions. That such a man would have remained on the track if an adequate warning had been given is contrary to all the impulses which govern the conduct of men of ordinary intelligence." Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 941, 153 C. C. A. 627. As to the presumption of care arising from the instinct of self-preservation, see Moore on Facts, § 529 et seq.

In another case it was said that running a northbound train on the southbound track is not evidence of negligence, and all the employees of the railroad must take notice of the occasional necessity to make the change. Nevertheless, as that is not the usual method of running, the railroad company must take notice that their employees will naturally be somewhat less on guard against a northbound train running on a southbound track, and due care requires greater precautions. The case is thus distinguished from the cases holding that under ordinary conditions an engineer may assume that a man in the apparent possession of his faculties will get out of the way of an approaching train. Therefore it was held not to be unreasonable to hold a railroad company guilty of negligence where it could well be inferred from the testimony that the engineer, running a northbound train around a curve on a southbound track, saw the deceased on or very near the southbound track, and gave him no signal till it was too late. Southern Ry. Co. v. McGuin, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 649, 153 C. C. A. 447.

A statute in substance making proof of an injury prima facie proof of negligence on the part of the defendant is a rule of evidence, and since the lex fori governs in all matters of procedure, the court commits no error in charging the jury in accordance therewith. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Scarlet, (1917) 115 Miss. 285, 76 So. 265.

The presumption of negligence arising under a state statute from the act of employing a minor in violation thereof has been said to have no application to an action under this section. Maijala v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 133 Minn. 301, 158 N. W. 430.

Damages in action by employee — Measure of damages in general.—The plaintiff, in an action for personal injuries, is entitled to recover for his expenses incurred for medical attendance, a reasonable sum for his pain and suffering, and also a fair recompense for the loss of what he would otherwise have earned in his trade or profession and has been deprived of his capac-

So an instruction to the jury that if they found for the plaintiff, they would find such "an amount of damages as will fully compensate him for all suffering of mind and body inflicted upon him by his injury and for the personal inconvenience and the loss of time and expense of care that naturally and proximately resulted from the injury," and which applied the same rule in case they should find that the plaintiff's injuries are permanent, is not erroneous. Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. Bryan, (1916) 18 Ariz. 106, 157 Pac. 376.

Suffering in mind and body.—"No direct evidence of pain of mind was offered, but mental anguish is presumed to follow physical pain and injury such as plaintiff sustained." Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Brooks, (Tex. App. Civ. 1917) 199 S. W. 665, affirming judgment for plaintiff.

Damages for pain and suffering are recoverable by the employee. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Tomlinson, (Ga. App. 1918) 94 S. E. 909.

Decreased ability to earn money.—It has been held proper to instruct the jury that they may include in their award of damages "proper compensation for his being unable because of his injury to follow such a calling or business as he could otherwise have followed." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Meadows, (1916) 119 Va. 33, 89 S. E. 244.

In an action by an employee against a railroad company for damages on account of permanent injuries, where there is evidence to authorize a finding that the plaintiff sustained permanent injuries and by reason thereof his earning capacity was impaired, it is proper for the jury, in passing upon the amount of his damages, to estimate his loss by reason of decreased earning capacity reduced to its present cash value. While instructing the jury as to the amount of damages to be allowed on account of decreased earning capacity, it is inaccurate to charge that "the value of the earning capacity of plaintiff would have to be reduced to its present cash value." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Paschal, (1916) 145 Ga. 521, 89 S. E. 620.

Time when allowance for impaired earning power begins.—In instructing the jury the court should explain that an allowance, if any, for permanent impairment of power to earn money should begin when allowance, if any, for time lost ended. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Patrick, (1915) 167 Ky. 118, 180 S. W. 55; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Shaw, (1916) 168 Ky. 537, 182 S. W. 653.

But if the instruction fails to limit the plaintiff's recovery to the impairment of the plaintiff's power to earn money in the future, and the defendant should desire a more specific instruction to that effect, he should ask the court to make it so, and upon his failure to call the court's attention to the immaterial error he will not be permitted to complain upon appeal. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Shaw, (1916) 168 Ky. 537, 182 S. W. 653.

Instruction as to future effects of injury.—"The principle is established that when the evidence in a case shows that there will be future effects from an injury an instruction which justifies an inclusion of them in an award of damages is not error." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Carnahan, (1916) 241 U. S. 241, 36 S. Ct. 594, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 979.

Effect of payment by defendant of medical expenses.—The fact that defendant provided "medical and hospital services and medicines" for the plaintiff subsequent to his injury has been held not to estop him from suing under this Act, since if plaintiff had paid such expenses defendant's liability as found by the verdict would include such payments, and theoretically recovery has been lessened to that extent. Waters v. Guile, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 532, 148 C. C. A. 298.

Damages in actions for death in general—Measure of damages generally.—Under the federal Employers' Liability Act, as interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States, a new and distinct right of action is given for the benefit of the dependent relatives named in the statute, and the damages recoverable are limited to such loss as results because they have been deprived of a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefits by the wrongful death of the injured employee. The damage is limited strictly to the financial loss sustained. If there is no reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefits, or no financial loss sustained, then there can be no recovery under this Act. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Gainey, (1916) 241 U. S. 494, 33 S. Ct. 633, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1124; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 241 U. S. 485, 36 S. Ct. 630, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1117; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Harland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840.

Where the deceased endured no conscious suffering, possible recovery is limited to pecuniary loss sustained by the designated beneficiary. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, (1918) 247 U. S. 367, 38 S. Ct. 535, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167, reversing (Miss. 1916) 71 So. 913.

In an action for the widow an instruction, in substance, that the damages should be equivalent to compensation for the deprivation of the reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefits that would have resulted from the continued life of the deceased, was correct. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Holloway, (1918) 246 U. S. 525, 39 S. Ct. 370, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 867, affirming (1916) 168 Ky. 262, 181 S. W. 1126.

Excessiveness of verdict generally.—In an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act to recover for dependent parents the pecuniary loss sustained by wrongful death of a son, the instructions being correct, a verdict will not be held excessive simply because it is not the result of a calculation based upon the earning capacity of deceased at the time of his death, when it is warranted upon consideration of the reasonable expectation of benefits from the continuance of his life as it appears from all of the evidence. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840.

The court may require a remittitur from a verdict if it thinks the verdict excessive. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hadley, (1918) 246 U. S. 330, 38 S. Ct. 318, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 751, affirming (1916) 99 Neb. 349, 156 N. W. 765.

Duty to lessen damages.—"Ordinarily a person seeking to recover damages for the wrongful act of another must do that which a reasonable man would do under the circumstances to limit the amount of the damages." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 241 U. S. 485, 36 S. Ct. 630, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1117. She also Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Gainey, (1916) 241 U. S. 494, 36 S. Ct. 633, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1124.

Pecuniary loss.—There must be evidence of pecuniary damage before damages can be allowed. Nashville, etc., Ry. v. Anderson, (1915) 134 Tenn. 666, 185 S. W. 677.

In this connection the following instruction has been held correct: "If you find in favor of the plaintiff, then in estimating damages you cannot presume that the next of kin have suffered pecuniary loss because of the death of Griffith, but the pecuniary loss, if any has been sustained, must be proven. If you find for the plaintiff, you must allow the plaintiff in your verdict for the use and benefit of herself, as wife, and her minor children, if you find that she has such children, such sum as in your judgment under the proof will be just compensation for the pecuniary loss they have sustained by reason of the death of said deceased. In estimating such sum, you should consider the age of the deceased, together with his capacity for earning money, his disposition to contribute, to care for, and to furnish his wife money as shown by the evidence, the ages of the children, and the probable expectation of the life of the parties concerned. . . ." Griffith v. Midland Valley R. Co., (1917) 100 Kan. 500, 166 Pac. 467.

The approved measure of recovery is the present cash value of the future benefits of which the beneficiaries were deprived by the death, making adequate allowance according to the circumstances, for the earning power of money. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 241 U. S. 485, 36 S. Ct. 630, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1117; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Gainey, (1916) 241 U. S. 494, 36 S. Ct. 633, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1124.

"So far as a verdict is based upon the deprivation of future benefits, it will afford more than compensation if it be made up by aggregating the benefits without taking account of the earning power of the money that is presently to be awarded. It is self-evident that a given sum of money in hand is worth more than the like sum of money payable in the future." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, (1916) 241 U. S. 485, 36 S. Ct. 630, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1117.

The pecuniary loss cannot be more than the loss which they have sustained by reason of the deprivation of the pecuniary benefits which they might reasonably have received from the deceased if he had lived. Chafin v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Va. 1917) 93 S. E. 822.

It has been held that the pecuniary loss recoverable under the federal Employers' Liability Act by one dependent upon the employee wrongfully killed, must be a loss which can be measured by some standard, and does not include an inestimable loss such as that of society and companionship of the deceased. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51; Cain v. Southern R. Co., (E. D. Tenn. 1911) 199 Fed. 211.

Funeral expenses.—This Act makes no provision for the recovery by next of kin of funeral expenses and an allowance therefor is error. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 941, 153 C. C. A. 627; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51.

Medical expenses.—Whether defendant was entitled to have the payment of hospital and medical bills taken into account in the assessment of damages is unimportant, where no request to that effect was made, and presumably the recovery was less than it would have been but for such payment. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Knapp, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 950, 147 C. C. A. 624.

In another case, however, it is held that a recovery will not be allowed to a father, in addition to a son's recovery, on account of expenses incurred for medical attention to his son and loss of the latter's services. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Tonsellito, (1917) 244 U. S. 360, 37 S. Ct. 620, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1194.

Addition of per centum damages.—Ten per cent. damages may be added by a state court of last resort in affirming a judgment for the plaintiff where the defendant obtained a supersedeas, and the local law makes 10 per cent. the cost of it to all persons if the judgment is affirmed. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, (1916) 241 U. S. 261, 36 S. Ct. 586, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 989.

Damages in recovery by widow and children—Measure of damages generally.—The measure of damages in an action to recover for the death of a husband or father is such as will reasonably compensate for "loss of pecuniary benefits" and must be based on financial loss. Newkirk v. Pryor, (Mo. App. 1916) 183 S. W. 682.

An instruction telling the jury that the measure of recovery is such an amount in damages as would fairly and reasonably compensate the widow, who was the sole beneficiary, for the loss of pecuniary benefits she might reasonably have received if the deceased had not been killed, is correct. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Holloway, (1916) 168 Ky. 262, 181 S. W. 1126.

The damages sustained by the widow and children are the benefit which might be reasonably expected from the husband and father in a pecuniary way had he lived. Davis v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1916) 172 Ky. 55, 188 S. W. 1061.

Mode of determining damages.—The pecuniary loss of a widow and minor child is not what the deceased might have earned, but what part of his earnings they might reasonably have expected to receive. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson, (1916) 134 Tenn. 666, 185 S. W. 677, Ann. Cas. 1917D 902.

"Excepting as enlarged by statute, the pecuniary loss of a widow and children resulting from death can be no more than from the nature of their relation to the deceased they can sustain. The widow and children cannot sustain loss for funeral expenses of the husband and father because they are in no sense liable for them. Liability for funeral expenses rests upon his estate, for loss to which a right of action is otherwise afforded. As the widow and children cannot sustain such a loss, damages for such a loss cannot be included in damages awarded exclusively for their benefit." Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51.

The damages awarded in favor of a widow and minor child should include such sum as the widow might reasonably expect to receive from her husband for support, and such a sum as the child might reasonably expect to receive from his father for support during minority. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson, (1916) 134 Tenn. 666, 185 S. W. 677, Ann. Cas. 1917D 902.

It has been held that a plaintiff is not entitled to recover a greater sum than will produce annually, for the wife during the 38 years' life expectancy of her husband, and also for the child during a period of 21 years, the time it could reasonably expect pecuniary benefits from its father, what both would reasonably expect from the deceased had he lived, the principal sum so provided for the two beneficiaries to be exhausted by such annual payments at the expiration of the deceased's life expectancy. In other words, such a sum as will purchase annuities equal to what they reasonably expected to receive from deceased for the periods of 38 and 21 years, respectively. Chafin v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (W. Va. 1917) 93 S. E. 822.

Presumption as to pecuniary loss.—"When the relation between deceased and the beneficial plaintiff is that of husband and wife or parent and minor child, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, actual pecuniary loss will be presumed from the death." Gilliam v. Southern R. Co., (1917) 108 S. C. 195, 93 S. E. 865.

Effect of abandonment of wife.—Although a man may have abandoned his wife and child and failed to support them, which act is by statute a misdemeanor, they still have a legal pecuniary interest in the continuance of his life. The fact that he had abandoned them and had failed to perform the duty imposed upon him by the law does not absolve him from the obligation, nor deprive them of the right to have it enforced. Gilliam v. Southern R. Co., (S. C. 1917) 93 S. E. 865.

Where it appears from the undisputed evidence that deceased had not supported his wife and child, recovery, if at all, should be limited to the prospective loss which the widow and daughter have actually sustained by reason of the deprivation of their right of support. Gilliam v. Southern R. Co., (S. C. 1917) 93 S. E. 865.

Effect of wife's forfeiture of right to support.—In view of evidence tending to show that the wife had forfeited her right of support, it was held that the court should have given defendant's request, to wit: "I charge you the measure of damages is the amount which will compensate the surviving beneficiaries for the actual pecuniary loss, and the jury should apportion the amount among them according to the loss of each." Gilliam v. Southern R. Co., (S. C. 1917) 93 S. E. 865.

Effect of divorce judgment ordering payments to support child.—In an action for the benefit of the wife and child of an employee who has been killed in the service of a carrier it has been held to be error to admit evidence of a judgment of divorce in which the deceased was ordered to pay a certain sum to the wife in support of the child. In this connection it was said: "There is nothing said in the judgment indicating that this is the only sum which he will ever be called upon to pay in support of his child, and it is a well-known rule of law in this state that such judgments may be opened up at any time, by appropriate proceedings, and additional allowances made, if the proof on such proceedings justifies it. Moreover, the child was not a party to that proceeding, and the judgment ordering the allowance is by no means binding on it." Davis v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1916) 172 Ky. 55, 188 S. W. 1061.

Right of child to support not question for jury.—A minor child has the right to expect such pecuniary assistance from the father, during the period of minority, as the father is financially able to furnish. It is therefore improper to submit to the jury the question whether the infant child has a right to expect financial assistance from the continued life of the father. Davis v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1916) 172 Ky. 55, 188 S. W. 1061.

Apportionment of damages.—"The federal statute makes no provision for the apportionment of the fund, and therefore the state statute controls. The source of the recovery is the United States statute, and that indicates only the different classes of the beneficiaries, and the manner of ascertaining the amount due. But when the amount and class are ascertained, the sum paid or recovered must be distributed in that class according to the requirement of the state law. In this case there being a widow and a child, the amount is to be divided between them according to our statute, two-thirds to the child and one-third to the widow. That matter is regulated by the state statute of distribution." In re Stone, (1917) 173 N. C. 208, 91 S. E. 852.

It is not error to direct the jury to apportion the damages in an action for death of an employee where award is not excessive as to any of the several dependents or as a whole. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skinner, (1917) 177 Ky. 62, 197 S. W. 552.

A verdict in solido in favor of the personal representatives is not objectionable because it does not apportion the amount of the recovery between the wife and child of the deceased. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Clappitt, (Okla. 1916) 154 Pac. 40.

Where, in an action brought by an injured employee for damages under the federal Employers' Liability Act, the employee dies and the action is revived in the name of his administrator for the benefit of his widow and child, a general verdict for the benefit of the widow and minor child may be returned by the jury without apportioning the damages between the beneficiaries. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Claybourne, (1916) 169 Ky. 315, 183 S. W. 903.

Where instructions to the jury were such that they must have inferred that a verdict in an action for death must be in a lump sum and no suggestion was made that the amount of the verdict should be apportioned the widow and children it has been held that the question of the informality of the verdict cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Doichinoff v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 51 Mont. 582, 154 Pac. 924.

The defendant cannot object to a verdict on the ground that there was an error in the apportionment of the damages. Anest v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 89 Wash. 609, 154 Pac. 1100.

"It is well settled that the amount allotted to each party entitled is of no concern to the defendant unless such allotment increased the amount of the total recovery." In re Stone, (1917) 173 N. C. 208, 91 S. E. 852.

Where, in an action for damages for death brought under the federal Employers' Liability Act, the verdict is excessive because of the excessive apportionment to one of the beneficiaries, the entire judgment will be reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial, even though the damages apportioned to another beneficiary are not excessive. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Collard, (1916) 170 Ky. 239, 185 S. W. 1108.

Jury of less than twelve.—The Seventh Amendment to the United States Constitution securing the right of trial by jury deals only with federal, and is not concerned with state, action. It applies only to proceedings in the courts of the United States and does not in any manner whatever govern or regulate trials by jury in state courts or the standards which must be applied concerning the same. The court said: "The proposition that, as the Seventh Amendment is controlling upon Congress, its provisions must therefore be applicable to every right of a federal character created by Congress and regulate the enforcement of such right, but in substance creates a confusion by which the true significance of the Amendment is obscured. That is, it shuts out of view the fact that the limitations of the Amendment are applicable only to the mode in which power or jurisdiction shall be exercised in tribunals of the United States, and therefore that its terms have no relation whatever to the enforcement of rights in other forums merely because the right enforced is one conferred by the laws of the United States. And of course it is apparent that to apply the constitutional provision to a condition to which it is not applicable would be not to interpret and enforce the Constitution, but to distort and destroy it." This principle applies in actions under this Act. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Bombolis, (1916) 241 U. S. 211, 36 S. Ct. 595, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 961, Ann. Cas. 1916E 505, L. R. A. 1917A 86. Hughes*, (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 411; Donaldson v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 89 Wash. 161, 154 Pac. 133.

Where in an action in a state court under this Act the Constitution and laws of the state provide that in civil causes, after a case has been under submission to a jury for a period of twelve hours without a unanimous verdict, five-sixths of the jury are authorized to reach a verdict which is entitled to the legal effect of a unanimous verdict at common law, a verdict in conformity to such provisions is proper. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Bombolis, (1916) 241 U. S. 211, 36 S. Ct. 595, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 961; Ann. Cas. 1916E 505, L. R. A. 1917A 86; Bombolis v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1914) 128 Minn. 112, 150 N. W. 385.

In an action in a state court based on the federal Employers' Liability Act a state statute permitting a valid verdict to be rendered by three-fourths of the jury is applicable. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, (1914) 161 Ky. 655, 171 S. W. 185. See also Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, (1916) 169 Ky. 662, 185 S. Shaw*, (1916) 168 Ky. 537, 182 S. W. 653; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 411.

Questions for court and jury—In general.—Where the question is one upon which reasonable men might honestly draw different conclusions, it should be submitted to the jury. Carolina, etc., Ry. Co. v. Stroup, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 75, 152 C. C. A. 125.

It is only when the facts are such that reasonable men must draw the same conclusion from them that the question of negligence is considered one of law for the court. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Felder, (Okla. 1916) 155 Pac. 529.

Defect in appliances.—Where considering conflicting testimony in the aspect least favorable to the company, it results that there is evidence tending to show that, while the engineer did not see the man struck while walking on the track, he was notified almost instantly by a call to stop from the one witness who says he saw him struck, and that if the power brake had been working the engineer could have stopped his engine, running three or four miles an hour, "almost instantly,"—"in eight to ten feet," but that in fact it ran for approximately one hundred and thirty-five feet after striking the deceased, with his body under the tender or engine almost the entire time, it was decided that there was sufficient evidence to justify the submission to the jury of the question whether the power brake on the engine was in working order at the time of the accident, and if it was not, did this defect contribute "in whole or in part" to cause the fatal result. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Huxoll, (1918) 245 U. S. 535, 38 S. Ct. 187, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 455.

Appliance reasonably safe.—In the application of the rule that the employer is under a duty to exercise ordinary care to supply machinery and appliances reasonably safe and suitable for the use of the employee, but is not required to furnish the latest, best, and safest appliances, or to discard standard appliances upon the discovery of later improvements, provided those in use are reasonably safe and suitable, it has been held to be proper to submit to the jury the question of whether an appliance was reasonably safe and suitable. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bower, (1916) 241 U. S. 470, 36 S. Ct. 624, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1107.

Negligence of carrier.—The question of negligence on the part of the carrier is one for the jury to determine. Marland v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 91, 158 C. C. A. 319. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Glas, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 256, 152 C. C. A. 244 (whether or not reasonable inspection would have discovered defect in arch bar); Carolina, etc., R. Co. v. Stroup, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 75, 152 C. C. A. 125 (failure of engineer to apply air brakes); Overstreet v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 565, 151 C. C. A. 501 (coupler or some part of it out of order); Hughes v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 118 (backing cars); Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Skotzy, (1916) 196 Ala. 25, 71 So. 335 (switching without warning, cars which ran over fireman on track next to his engine); St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Howard, (1916) 124 Ark. 588, 188 S. W. 14 (manner of fastening apron between engine and tender); St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Ingram, (1916) 124 Ark. 298, 187 S. W. 452 (use of defective skid); *Smithson v. Atchison, etc., R. W. 810 (lack of care as to providing and maintaining reasonably safe equipment for watering engines); Thomas v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1917) 101 Kan. 528, 168 Pac. 322 (train coasting without giving warning signal); *Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. S. 922 (reasonable warning by those in charge of approaching train to employee crossing tracks); St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Clappitt, (Okla. 1916) 154 Pac. 40 (defective station platform); Haas v. Erie R. Co., (1916) 254 Pa. St. 235, 98 Atl. 867 (escaping steam from locomotive); Ballenger v. Southern R. Co., (1916) 106 S. C. 200, 90 S. E. 1019 (handle on switch broken); Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Fitts, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 188 S. W. 528 (defective hammer and nails causing injury to eye); Robie v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (Vt. 1917) 100 Atl. 925 (leaving loose bolts on floor of hand car instead of in box or kegs); Aldread v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1916) 93 Wash. 209, 160 Pac. 429 (whether due and reasonable care required coupling of air brakes in switching cars).

Submitting case to jury.—The trial court was justified in submitting to the jury the general question of defendant's negligence if the defendant's conduct, viewed as a whole, warranted a finding of neglect, despite defendant's attempt to split up the charge of negligence into items mentioned in the declaration as constituent elements and to secure a ruling as to each. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hadley, (1918) 246 U. S. 330, 38 S. Ct. 318, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 751, affirming (1916) 99 Neb. 349, 156 N. W. 765.

Directing verdict or nonsuit.—Where, after the close of the testimony in an action based on both the Employers' Liability Act and the Safety Appliance Acts, the claim under the Safety Appliance Acts was withdrawn and it was insisted on appeal that the abandonment of the claim as to a violation of the Safety Appliance Acts necessarily withdrew all evidence tending to show that the couplers were defective and in the absence of such evidence the proof established as a matter of law that the plaintiff assumed the risk and the court should have directed a verdict in favor of the railroad, the United States Supreme Court declared the contention was without merit. St. Louis, etc., R. v. Brown, (1916) 241 U. S. 223, 36 S. Ct. 602, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 966.

Where there is no substantive proof that the carrier was guilty of any act of negligence, a nonsuit is proper. Williams v. Western, etc., & A. R. Co., (1917) 20 Ga. App. 726, 93 S. E. 555; Landrum v. Western, etc., R. Co., (1917) 146 Ga. 88, 90 S. E. 710.

A nonsuit is properly directed where the evidence is insufficient to carry the question of the negligence of the railroad to the jury. Reese v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1915) 239 U. S. 463, 36 S. Ct. 134, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 384, affirming (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 518, 140 C. C. A. 660.

Form of verdict.—It has been held no error for the court to refuse to grant a defendant's request that the court direct the jury to set out in its verdict all the facts which it regarded as proved upon five interrogatories propounded in the request. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Meadows, (1916) 119 Va. 33, 89 S. E. 244.

1909 Supp., p. 585, sec. 3.

Construction of section, in general.—Negligence under this Act must necessarily be contributory and therefore no defense, or the sole cause of the injury and therefore a defense in toto. Fletcher v. South Dakota Cent. R. Co., (1915) 36 S. D. 401, 155 N. W. 3.

"There is a well-recognized distinction between assumed risk and contributory negligence. Contributory negligence implies fault or breach of duty on the part of the injured party, either by doing or by failing to do something that a reasonably prudent man would not have done, or would not have failed to do, to avoid being injured under the same or similar circumstances. On the other hand, there is a certain amount of danger incident to many employments, which ordinary prudence cannot always avoid. Where these are known to the employee, they are assumed by him as an implied part of his contract of employment. An employee assumes the risk of those dangers known to him to be ordinarily incident to the labor which he has agreed to perform, or which are so obvious that a man of ordinary intelligence and prudence must necessarily be presumed to have learned of them in the ordinary course of his employment." Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 191 S. W. 579.

Conformity to state procedure, in general.—A defendant carrier has the federal right to a fair opportunity to show in diminution of damages any negligence attributable to the employee. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Jones, (1916) 241 U. S. 181, 36 S. Ct. 513, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 943.

The diminution of damages in case of plaintiff's contributory negligence should be in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to him; and this can only mean that where the causal negligence is partly attributable to him and partly attributable to the carrier, the statute applies, and does not apply to a case in which the injury is due solely to the negligence of the plaintiff. Southern R. Co. v. Peters, (1915) 194 Ala. 94, 69 So. 611.

Negligence of employee as sole proximate cause of injury.—If the negligence of the employee was the sole proximate cause of the injury there can be no recovery. Virginian R. Co. v. Linkous, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 88, 144 C. C. A. 386, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 49, 148 C. C. A. 543; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Steward, (1916) 124 Ark. 437, 187 S. W. 920; Swasey v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1916) 115 Me. 215, 98 Atl. 706; Gillis v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1916) 224 Mass. 541, 113 N. E. 212; Virginian R. Co. v. Andrews, (1916) 118 Va. 482, 87 S. E. 577; Hull v. Virginian R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 25, 88 S. E. 1060.

There is no justification for a comparison of negligences or the apportioning of their effect where there was nothing to confuse the employee's judgment or to cause hesitation or to in any way extenuate his negligence, and his duty was as clear as its performance was easy. Great Northern R. Co. v. Wiles, (1916) 240 U. S. 444, 36 S. Ct. 406, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 732.

Where a brakeman, who was sent to flag an approaching train, went to sleep within a short distance of a curve with his head on a cross tie near the track it was held, there being no evidence to explain his conduct, that the engineer of the approaching train was not guilty of negligence in not stopping his train in time to avoid striking him, it appearing that the distance from the curve to the place where the deceased was struck was not sufficient to have permitted him to have done so. Southern R. Co. v. Gray, (1916) 241 U. S. 333, 36 S. Ct. 558, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1030.

On the other hand the negligence of the employee must have been the sole cause of the injury in order to defeat a recovery. Southern R. Co. v. Mays, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 239 Fed. 41, 152 C. C. A. 91; Delano v. Roberts, (Mo. App. 1916) 182 S. W. 771.

Effect of disregard of rules.—Where there has been a habitual disregard of a rule amounting to an abrogation thereof this will be sufficient to relieve an employee of the charge of contributory negligence. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Steward, (1916) 124 Ark. 437, 187 S. W. 920.

Allegations of contributory negligence as a defense necessarily assume negligence on the part of defendant, and as a defense under the statute is a partial, not a complete defense. Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. Bryan, (1916) 18 Ariz. 106, 157 Pac. 376.

Effect of contributory negligence on damages—In general.—It may be stated generally that under this section the contributory negligence of an employee is not a bar to an action for an injury received by him, but only operates to diminish the amount of the damages recoverable. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skaggs, (1916) 240 U. S. 66, 36 S. Ct. 249, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 528; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, (1916) 241 U. S. 223, 36 S. Ct. 602, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 966; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 76, 155 C. C. A. 606; Southern R. Co. v. Mays, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 239 Fed. 41, 152 C. C. A. 91; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Blankenship, (Ala. 1917) 74 So. 960; Southern R. Co. v. Fisher, (Ala. 1917) 74 So. 580; Western R. v. Mays, (1916) 197 Ala. 367, 72 So. 641; Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. Bryan, (1916) 18 Ariz. 106, 157 Pac. 376; Hubert v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1916) 90 Conn. 261, 96 Atl. 967; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Paschal, (1916) 145 Ga. 521, 89 S. E. 620; *Warren v. Duty to diminish damages.—If the employee was guilty of contributory negligence the recovery must be diminished and the jury should be so instructed. Lincoln v. Pryor, (1916) 199 Ill. App. 228; Collins v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., (1916) 193 Mich. 303, 159 N. W. 535; Dowell v. Wabash R. Co., (Mo. App. 1916) 190 S. W. 939.

Remittitur of damages where no deduction for contributory negligence.—Where the jury have assessed the damages at a sum which must be deemed to be full compensation without deduction for the contributory negligence of the employee, as a condition to denying a motion for a new trial it has been held that the court may order a remission of a portion of the damages. Sain v. Southern R. Co., (E. D. Tenn. 1917) 199 Fed. 211 (reduction of verdict from $10,000 to $7,500); Hadley v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 99 Neb. 349, 156 N. W. 765.

"Whenever a court is convinced of an abuse of power on the part of the jury in dividing the blame where both sides had been guilty of negligence contributing to the accident, it should not hesitate to order a remittitur or grant a new trial." Waina v. Pennsylvania Co., (1915) 251 Pa. St. 213, 96 Atl. 461.

The jury should make a deduction for contributory negligence of the employee, and where it does not appear that this has been done it has been held that the verdict will be set aside (Pyles v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 97 Kan. 455, 155 Pac. 788) unless the plaintiff accepts a reduction (Saar v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 97 Kan. 441, 155 Pac. 954), in which case the judgment may be affirmed. Anest v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 89 Wash. 609, 154 Pac. 1100.

Effect of violation of Safety Appliance Acts—Construction generally.—The provision of the federal Employers' Liability Act that an employee of a common carrier who may be injured or killed shall not be held guilty of contributory negligence, where the violation by the carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death, applies only to violations of certain federal statutes, such as the Safety Appliance Acts, and not to violation of state laws. Gee v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (1914) 163 App. Div. 274, 148 N. Y. S. 882; Smithson v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1916) 174 Cal. 148, 162 Pac. 111.

A carrier is liable in damages where a violation of the Safety Appliance Acts is shown. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Huxoll, (1917) 245 U. S. 535, 38 S. Ct. 187, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 455; Atlantic City R. Co. v. Parker, (1916) 242 U. S. 56, 37 S. Ct. 69, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 150; St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. Schuerman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 1, 150 C. C. A. 203; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Layton, (1916) 145 Ga. 886, 90 S. E. 53; Davidson v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., (1916) 203 Ill. App. 498; Wagner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 200 Ill. App. 305; Clapper v. Dickinson, (1917) 137 Minn. 415, 163 N. W. 752; Cramer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 134 Minn. 61, 158 N. W. 796; McNaney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 132 Minn. 391; 157 N. W. 650; Moore v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., (1916) 268 Mo. 31, 186 S. W. 1035; Armitage v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Mont. 1917) 166 Pac. 301; Calhoun v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 162 Wis. 264, 156 N. W. 198. It being declared that a violation of the Safety Appliance Acts is negligence per se, in such a case contributory negligence is excluded from consideration. Lemee v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1917) 141 La. 769, 75 So. 676.

Therefore, where plaintiff's contributory negligence and defendant's violation of the Safety Appliance Acts are concurring proximate causes, the Employers' Liability Act requires the former to be disregarded. Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1916) 241 U. S. 497, 36 S. Ct. 683, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125.

Application of doctrine.—Where a person was injured by inhaling spray while using a painting machine in painting cars of which danger he had no knowledge, it was held that the company was guilty of negligence in failing to provide him with an appliance to be used to protect persons thus engaged from such danger where the company knew of the appliance. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, (1916) 128 Md. 678, 98 At. 225.

"When, . . . , the carrier has discharged his statutory duty to the engineer by turning over to him a locomotive engine and boiler and appurtenances in proper condition and safe to operate, it is not answerable to the engineer as an insurer of his safety throughout the run; and, in order for his personal representative to maintain an action for his death caused by the explosion of the boiler, the burden rests upon the plaintiff to show that the defendant has been guilty of the negligence charged in the declaration." Virginian R. Co. v. Andrews, (1916) 118 Va. 482, 87 S. E. 577.

Violation need not be sole cause.—The violation of the Safety Appliance Acts need not be the sole efficient cause in order that an action will lie. Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1916) 241 U. S. 497, 36 S. Ct. 683, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125.

So the liability of the carrier to employees for failure to comply with these acts springs from its being made unlawful to use cars not equipped as required, not from the position the employee may be in or the work which he may be doing at the moment when he is injured. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Layton, (1917) 243 U. S. 617, 37 S. Ct. 456, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 931.

And where there is a violation of the Safety Appliance Acts any improper management of the appliance can only be regarded as contributory negligence, consideration of which is excluded. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, (1916) 241 U. S. 476, 36 S. Ct. 626, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1110.

Element of proximate cause eliminated.

—The element of proximate cause is eliminated where a violation of the Safety Appliance Acts is shown. Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1916) 241 U. S. 497, 36 S. Ct. 683, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125.

Pleading.—A complaint alleging as negligence that the defendant carrier had a car equipped with an automatic coupler which was broken, defective and inoperative states a cause of action within the express terms of the statute, although it does not in express terms allege that the negligence charged was a violation of the Act as to having the cars equipped with automatic couplers. Wagner v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., (1917) 277 Ill. 114, 115 N. E. 201.

Evidence.—"To sustain a finding that a defective appliance caused an accident, it is necessary that some circumstances be shown which establish, not only that the accident may have happened from the cause alleged, but which indicate, to some extent at least, that such was the cause." Hurley v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 133 Minn. 101, 157 N. W. 1005.

Evidence.—Burden of proof.—The defendant has the burden of proving contributory negligence. Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Thrift Trust Co., (Ind. App. 1917) 115 N. E. 685.

Instructions.—It has been held proper to instruct the jury that if they found certain facts their verdict should be for the plaintiff, even if they should find him guilty of negligence contributing to the injury, but that in that event the damages should be diminished by them in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the injured employee. Kippenbrock v. Wabash R. Co., (1917) 270 Mo. 479, 194 S. W. 50.

In an action for damages by a railroad conductor against his employer, while engaged in interstate commerce upon one of the trains of his employer, under the federal Employers' Liability Act, where it appears that the negligence of the defendant and that of the plaintiff concurred in producing the injury, the negligence of both parties is to be deemed the proximate cause of the injury; and it is not error for the judge, in referring to causal negligence of the parties, to instruct the jury that if it should be found that the plaintiff was injured as alleged, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover, if the defendant was negligent in the manner alleged, and if such negligence "contributed in whole or in part to the injury." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Paschal, (1916) 145 Ga. 521, 89 S. E. 620.

A charge to the jury that if they find plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence they should "reduce his damages in proportion to the amount of negligence which is attributable to him" has been held not to be erroneous because of a failure to define the word proportion. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, (1916) 241 U. S. 223, 36 S. Ct. 602, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 966. See also Waina v. Pennsylvania Co., (1915) 251 Pa. 213, 96 Atl. 461.

Where there is no proof of any fact or circumstance tending to show contributory negligence on the part of the employee it is prejudicial error to give an instruction on the question from which the jury may infer a right to diminish the damages recoverable. Davis v. Cincinnati, etc., Ry. Co., (1916) 172 Ky. 55, 188 S. W. 1061.

Where the testimony is uncontradicted that an employee knew nothing of special damages attending his work or that he was at all informed by his employers on the subject there is no ground for any charge as to contributory negligence on his part in reduction of damages. Norton v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1917) 116 Me. 147, 100 Atl. 598.

Where the instructions which applied the statutory rule that contributory negligence, under the federal Act, operates to diminish the amount of recovery rather than to defeat the action were correct in principle, if incomplete, appellant should have requested a more specific charge in order to make the error, if any, available on appeal. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Gross, (Ind. 1917) 114 N. E. 962.

If the defendant desires to have the damages reduced on account of plaintiff's failure to properly care for himself, it should ask an instruction to that effect. Delano v. Roberts, (Mo. App. 1916) 182 S. W. 771.

Although there is no evidence to support an instruction upon the question of contributory negligence yet a defendant has no ground of complaint where the jury were told that the negligence of deceased, if any, should diminish the damages "in proportion to his negligence as compared with the combined negligence of himself and defendant." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840.

Questions for jury.—The question of contributory negligence is one for the jury to determine. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Blankenship, (Ala. 1917) 74 So. 960; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Steel, (Ark. 1917) 197 S. W. 288; Lusk v. Osborne, (1917) 127 Ark. 170, 191 S. W. 944; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, (1916) 124 Ark. 437, 187 S. W. 920; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Coatney, (1917) 20 Ga. App. 713, 93 S. E. 228; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Meadows, (1916) 119 Va. 33, 89 S. E. 244; Bolch v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 90 Wash. 47, 155 Pac. 422.

The question of the reduction of damages for contributory negligence is one for the jury. Thomas v. Atchison, etc., Ry. Co., (1917) 101 Kan. 528, 168 Pac. 322.

Whether the act of an injured employee was negligence which was the sole cause of the injury is a question for the jury. Lusk v. Osborne, (1917) 127 Ark. 170, 191 S. W. 944.

The question of comparative negligence where both parties are negligent is one for the jury. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Blankenship, (1917) 74 So. 960.

1909 Supp., p. 585, sec. 4.

Construction and application in general.—There is no assumption of risk where the injury is caused by a violation of the Safety Appliance Acts. Wagner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 200 Ill. App. 305; Christy v. Wabash R. Co., (1916) 195 Mo. App. 232, 191 S. W. 241; Sorenson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 53 Mont. 268, 163 Pac. 560.

"The rule as to the assumption of risk remains, except in those cases where the defendant has been guilty of violating some statute enacted for the safety of employees, and by such violation contributed to the injury complained of." Gaines v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (1916) 193 Mich. 398, 159 N. W. 542.

The Boiler Inspection Act of Feb. 17, 1911, ch. 103, § 2, 1912 Supp., p. 339, was "enacted for the safety of employees" within this section. Great Northern R. Co. v. Donaldson, (1918) 246 U. S. 121, 30 S. Ct. 230, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 616, affirming (1916) 89 Wash. 161, 154 Pac.

133, holding that there was no error in refusing to give, in an action for death of an engineer, an instruction to the effect that if he was familiar with the type of construction used for the particular form of negligence involved, and knew the danger likely to arise therefrom, or, in the exercise of reasonable care, should have known of such things, he should be deemed to have assumed the risk.

Effect limited to terms of Act.—By the Employers' Liability Act the defense of assumption of risk remains as at common law, saving in the cases mentioned in this section, that is to say: "any case where the violation by such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee." Jacobs v. Southern R. Co., (1916) 241 U. S. 229, 36 S. Ct. 588, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 970; Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 192; Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Musgrove, (1916) 145 Ga. 647, 89 S. E. 767; Southern R. Co. v. Blackwell, (1917) 20 Ga. App. 630, 93 S. E. 321; Carlson v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., (1917) 205 Ill. App. 156; Duran v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1917) 100 Kan. 189, 165 Pac. 653; McFarland v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 177 Ky. 551, 197 S. W. 944; Harris v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1917) 176 Ky. 846, 197 S. W. 464; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. York, (1917) 176 Ky. 9, 194 S. W. 1034; Jones v. Southern Ry., (1917) 175 Ky. 455, 194 S. W. 558; Young v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (1916) 171 Ky. 510, 188 S. W. 621; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, (Ky. 1916) 185 S. W. 861; Norton v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1917) 116 Me. 147, 100 Atl. 598; Sims v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1917) 196 Mich. 114, 162 N. W. 988; Gainey v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (1916) 193 Mich. 398, 159 N. W. 542; Elliott v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 111 Miss. 426, 71 So. 741; Sorenson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 53 Mont. 268, 163 Pac. 560; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, (Okla. 1916) 160 Pac. 736; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 191 S. W. 579; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Tucker, (1917) 120 Va. 540, 91 S. E. 614; Hull v. Virginian R. Co., (1916) 78 W. Va. 25, 88 S. E. 1060; Hovaneck v. Great Northern R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 511, 162 N. W. 927; Smiegl v. Great Northern R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 57, 160 N. W. 1057.

"At common law the rule is well settled that a servant assumes extraordinary risks incident to his employment, or risks caused by the master's negligence which are obvious or fully known and appreciated by him;" and the risks which the employee still assumes in other cases, notwithstanding the elimination of the defense of assumed risk by this section, include those incident to the negligence of the carriers, officers, agents, or employees which are obvious or fully known to and appreciated by him. Boldt v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1918) 245 U. S. 441, 38 S. Ct. 139, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 385, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 367, 134 C. C. A. 175.

Where if it had not been for the defective condition of a coupling, the plaintiff would not have been compelled to go between the cars to make a coupling and therefore would not have been injured, the company cannot avail itself of the defense of assumption of risk. St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. Schuerman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 1, 150 C. C. A. 203.

Handholds.—Where there is a violation of the Safety Appliance Act in regard to handholds on car, an employee by continuing to work with knowledge of the defective condition of a handhold is not to be regarded as having assumed any of the risk which flows from the act of the company in failing to perform its statutory duty. Cook v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 178 Ia. 1030, 158 N. W. 521.

Violation of Hours of Service Act.—The question of assumption of risk is eliminated when a violation of the Hours of Service Act is shown. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, (1916) 242 U. S. 295, 37 S. Ct. 123, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 312.

The statutory law of the state has no application and the question of assumed risk is to be determined by the provisions of the Act itself and the common law, as recognized by the federal courts. Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Brooks, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 199 S. W. 665.

Decisions of the federal courts control the question whether there was an assumption of risk by an employee. Roberts v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (1916) 202 Ill. App. 480.

But it has been held that where a state Supreme Court holds that the issue of assumption of risk was not made or submitted to the trial court (a conclusion fully supported by the record) and therefore under the state practice no question concerning that subject was presented on appeal, the conclusion of the state Supreme Court denied no right of a federal character. Southern R. Co. v. Lloyd, (1916) 239 U. S. 496, 36 S. Ct. 210, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, affirming (1914) 166 N. C. 24, 81 S. E. 1003.

Defective appliance not embraced in terms of Act.—"The fact that the action was brought under the federal Employers' Liability Act does not prevent the appellee from relying upon the defense of assumption of risk. That statute only abolishes the assumption of risk as a bar to an action against a railroad company by an employee for an injury attributable to defective appliances upon or connected with the trains of the railroad company; and neither a station water tank, rope, nor scaffold is an appliance within the meaning thereof. Hence the common-law rule with respect to the employee's assumption of risk of injury from a defective appliance governs an action under the Employers' Liability Act where such appliance is not embraced by the terms thereof." McFarland v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (1917) 177 Ky. 551, 197 S. W. 944.

Pleading.—The plea of assumption of risk is affirmative in character and the plaintiff is not required to negative it in order to make a prima facie case. Kenyon v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 173 Ia. 484, 155 N. W. 810. Compare Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Gross, (Ind. App. 1916) 111 N. E. 653.

A defense that the plaintiff assumed the risks of defendant's negligence should be specially pleaded. Phillips v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 100 Neb. 157, 158 N. W. 966.

Assumed risk when set up as a defense is subject matter for a special plea. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Skotzy, (1916) 196 Ala. 25, 71 So. 335.

Principles generally as to assumption of risk.—It is a general rule that an employee assumes the usual and ordinary risks of his employment. Lincoln v. Pryor, (1916) 199 Ill. App. 228; Koepke v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 200 Ill. App. 247; Jones v. Southern Ry., (1917) 175 Ky. 455, 194 S. W. 558; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, (Ky. 1916) 185 S. W. 861; Chapman v. Ann Arbor R. Co., (1917) 196 Mich. 671, 163 N. W. 107; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Finke, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 190 S. W. 1143. And see title Master and Servant, 18 R. C. L. 671 et seq.

And, one is only barred from recovery when it appears that he assumed the risk incident to his employment. Southern R. Co. v. Mays, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 239 Fed. 41, 152 C. C. A. 91.

"The true rule of law deducible from the authorities is that the servant assumes all the ordinary, usual and normal risks of the business after the master has used reasonable care for his protection, and also all such other risks as he knows of, or which were so unquestionably plain and clear that he must have known of their existence and their danger to him." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Meadows, (1916) 119 Va. 33, 89 S. E. 244. To the same point see Harris v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (1917) 176 Ky. 846, 197 S. W. 464; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, (Ky. 1916) 185 S. W. 861; Sorenson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 53 Mont. 268, 163 Pac. 560; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 411; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Finke, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 190 S. W. 1143.

Unusual or extraordinary risks.—It may be stated generally that in the absence of notice or knowledge an employee does not assume those risks which are unusual or extraordinary in character. Koepke v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 200 Ill. App. 247.

Distinction between assumed risk and contributory negligence.—"There is a well-recognized distinction between assumed risk and contributory negligence. Contributory negligence implies fault or a breach of duty on the part of the injured party, either by doing or by failing to do something that a reasonably prudent man would not have done, or would not have failed to do, to avoid being injured under the same or similar circumstances. On the other hand, there is a certain amount of danger incident to many employments, which ordinary prudence cannot always avoid. Where these are known to the employee, they are assumed by him as an implied part of his contract of employment. An employee assumes the risk of those dangers known to him to be ordinarily incident to the labor which he has agreed to perform, or which are so obvious that a man of ordinary intelligence and prudence must necessarily be presumed to have learned of them in the ordinary course of his employment." Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 191 S. W. 579. And see title Master and Servant, 18 R. C. L., sec. 165, p. 673.

Actual knowledge or obvious risk.—There is no rule more firmly fixed in this state than the one which says that if the servant knows the danger, and appreciates it, it being obvious, and yet continues in the work, he assumes the risk. Jones v. Southern Ry., (1917) 175 Ky. 455, 114 S. W. 558. See also Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, (1916) 128 Md. 678, 98 Atl. 225.

Appliances or place of work not safe.—"The law is that although it is the duty of the master to furnish safe places in which their servants may perform their work, and safe tools and appliances with which the work may be done, still, if the places or appliances are not safe, and the servant knows it and appreciates the danger in attempting to use them, he assumes the risk incident to their use under the circumstances, and if injured the master is not liable." Young v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (1916) 171 Ky. 510, 188 S. W. 621.

The recognized general rule is that workmen engaged to diagnose, repair, and make safe a tool, piece of machinery, appliance, or place to work, which is defective, out of repair, or dangerous, assume the added risk incident to the existing condition of the work or place. Gaines v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (1916) 193 Mich. 398, 159 N. W. 542.

And if the servant continues in the service with knowledge of defective appliances, he is deemed to have waived the master's negligence, and to have assumed the risk in spite of master's negligence. Lorick v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., (1915) 102 S. C. 276, 86 S. E. 675, Ann. Cas. 1917D 920.

Remaining at work in ignorance of known danger.—While most courts agree that an employee cannot, without impairing his right to recover from the employer, remain at work in the presence of a known danger so imminent that no reasonably prudent man would confront it, even where the employer has promised reparation, they differ as to whether this is to be placed upon the ground of assumption of risk or of contributory negligence. The distinction, which was of little consequence when assumption of risk and contributory negligence led to the same result, becomes important in actions founded upon the federal Employers' Liability Act, which in ordinary cases recognizes assumption of risk as a complete bar to the action, while contributory negligence merely mitigates the damages. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Horton, (1916) 239 U. S. 595, 36 S. Ct. 180, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 458, affirming (1915) 169 N. C. 108, 85 S. E. 218, which also held that to relieve the employer from responsibility for injuries that may befall the employee while remaining at his work in reliance upon a promise of reparation, there must be something more than knowledge by the employee that danger confronts him, or that it is constant. The danger must be imminent—immediately threatening—so as to render it clearly imprudent for him to confront it, even in the line of duty pending the promise.

Effect of want of knowledge.—An employee does not assume risks of which he has no knowledge. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Skinner, (1917) 177 Ky. 62, 197 S. W. 552; Winslow v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (Mo. App. 1916) 192 S. W. 121.

"Knowledge of the risk is the watchword of the defense of assumption of risks." Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 1, 149 C. C. A. 211.

So a railway employee does not assume the risk arising from unknown defects in engines, machinery, or appliances. Central Vermont R. Co. v. White, (1915) 238 U. S. 507, 35 S. Ct. 865, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1433, Ann. Cas. 1916B 252.

Assurance of superior as to safety.—An employee does not assume a risk that his superior assures him does not exist. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, (1916) 170 Ky. 145, 185 S. W. 840. And see title Master and Servant, 18 R. C. L., sec. 186, p. 703.

"Where the question as to the safety of appliances is in doubt, the servant is not bound to set up his judgment against that of the master." Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 397, 100 Atl. 961. See also Coal, etc., R. Co. v.

Deal, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 604, 145 C. C. A. 490; Jones v. Southern Ry., (1917) 175 Ky. 455, 194 S. W. 558.

Acting in obedience to orders of superior.—Where the complaint showed that appellee's decedent was inexperienced in railroading, and that he had been employed as a freight brakeman but a few days, all of which was known to appellant; that he did not see or know of the proximity of the car on the passing track to the entrance of the back track; that when injured he was obeying the orders of his foreman, whose orders he was required to obey; and that he had no warning, etc., it was held that these averments made the complaint sufficient as against the charge that it showed that decedent assumed the risk of the injury which resulted in his death. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Freightner, (Ind. App. 1916) 114 N. E. 659. And see title Master and Servant, 18 R. C. L., sec. 185, p. 701.

And where an order given called for quick action upon the part of the men, and did not afford them an opportunity to consider whether they could do so safely or not, the doctrine of assumption of risk has no application. Topore v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (N. H. 1916) 100 Atl. 153. See also Duran v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1917) 100 Kan. 189, 165 Pac. 653.

"The employee has the right to assume that the master has used due diligence to perform all the primary duties incumbent upon him when he assigns a duty to be performed." Sorenson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 53 Mont. 268, 163 Pac. 560.

Even though an employee is ordered to do a certain act, as for instance to cross a track in front of an approaching train, yet if the danger is so obvious and imminent that an ordinarily prudent person would have refused to encounter it, he will be held to have assumed the risk. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Williams, (1917) 175 Ky. 679, 194 S. W. 920.

Discontinuance of precautionary measures.—"The discontinuance of a precautionary measure amounts to an assertion of the master's judgment that it is unnecessary, while the failure to originally establish such precaution may have resulted from oversight." Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 397, 100 Atl. 961.

Negligence of employer.—It is a general rule, except as modified in the federal and in some state courts, that the employee does not assume the risk of the employer's negligence. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Shaw, (1916) 168 Ky. 537, 182 S. W. 653; Winslow v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., (Mo. App. 1916) 192 S. W. 121; Young v. Lusk, (1916) 268 Mo. 625, 187 S. W. 849; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. De

Bord, (Tex. 1917) 192 S. W. 767; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Finke, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 190 S. W. 1143; Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Fitts, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 188 S. W. 528. And see title Master and Servant, 18 R. C. L., sec. 168, p. 677.

Risks arising from the employer's negligence are not ordinary but extraordinary. Phillips v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 100 Neb. 157, 158 N. W. 966.

"He does not assume the risks which arise out of the failure of the employer to exercise due care with respect to providing a safe place of work, provided he does not know of such failure, or be charged with knowledge thereof." Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Finke, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 190 S. W. 1143. See also Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Claybourne, (1916) 169 Ky. 315, 183 S. W. 903; Sorenson v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 53 Mont. 268, 163 Pac. 560; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 411.

Rule in federal courts.—"The rule that the servant never assumes the risk of the negligence of the master is not recognized in the federal courts." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes, (Okla. 1917) 166 Pac. 411.

"While an employee assumes the risks and dangers ordinarily incident to the employment in which he voluntarily engages, so far as these are not attributable to the negligence of the employer or of those for whose conduct the employer is responsible, the employee has a right to assume that the employer has exercised proper care with respect to providing a reasonably safe place of work (and this includes care in establishing a reasonably safe system or method of work) and is not to be treated as assuming a risk that is attributable to the employer's negligence until he becomes aware of it, or it is so plainly observable that he must be presumed to have known of it. The employee is not obliged to exercise care to discover dangers not ordinarily incident to the employment, but which result from the employer's negligence." Chesapeake, etc., Co. v. Proffitt, (1916) 241 U. S. 462, 36 S. Ct. 620, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1102. See also Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 76, 155 C. C. A. 606.

Appliances furnished.—The servant assumes the ordinary risk incident to his labor, but he does not assume such risks as may be caused by the master negligently failing to furnish suitable appliances to perform his work. Lorick v. Seaboard Air Line-Ry., (1915) 102 S. C. 276, 86 S. E. 675, Ann. Cas. 1917D 920.

Negligence of fellow servant.—It is a general rule that an employee does not assume the risks of negligence on the part of fellow servants. Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. Bryan, (1916) 18 Ariz. 106, 157 Pac. 376; Chapman v. United States Express Co., (1916) 192 Mich. 654, 159 N.

W. 308; Thompson v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1916) 133 Minn. 203, 158 N. W. 42; Koukouris v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 193 Mo. App. 495, 186 S. W. 545; Willever v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1916) 89 N. J. L. 697, 99 Atl. 321; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 196 S. W. 613; Anest v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., (1916) 89 Wash. 609, 154 Pac. 1100; Hovaneck v. Gt. Northern R. Co., (1917) 165 Wis. 511, 162 N. W. 927.

An employee will not be considered to have assumed a risk incident to a situation over which he has no control and which has been created by the negligence of a fellow servant. Southern R. Co. v. Mays, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 239 Fed. 41, 152 C. C. A. 91.

"Before an employee will be held to have assumed the risk arising out of the negligent conduct of his fellow, it must be shown that such negligent conduct was known to the employee or so customary that he should be charged therewith, and that he appreciated, or was bound to appreciate, the danger." Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Fitts, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 188 S. W. 528.

"The federal authorities seem to hold that in order to make the negligence of the fellow servant one of the assumed risks under this act, the injured employee must actually know of the fact of the negligence of his fellow servant, or that such negligence was so customary that he would be charged with knowledge thereof." Chapman v. U. S. Express Co., (1916) 192 Mich. 654, 159 N. W. 308.

Pleading.—If any defect exists in the language of the complaint failing to set forth the fact that the man who kicked the car was acting in the scope of his employment, the answer cures such defect, where the defendant admitted that the injury was inflicted at a time the plaintiff, together with other employees, was in the performance of his duty in defendant's employment. Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. Byran, (1916) 18 Ariz. 106, 157 Pac. 376.

Particular employees—Brakeman.—He assumes those risks which are patent and obvious and incidentally occurring in the course of his employment as brakeman but not those of hidden or latent dangers of which he is ignorant or with knowledge of which he is not charged and with respect to which it is the duty of the company to warn him. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51.

A brakeman cannot be said to assume the risks arising from the negligent acts of the conductor. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Norris, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 926, 158 C. C. A. 214.

Section men, trackwalkers and repairmen.—A person engaged in the usual track work done by section men assumes the risk of the occasional necessity to run trains on tracks intended for trains going in the opposite direction, but the risk assumed is subject to the limitation that such trains shall be run with the care to be reasonably expected under such conditions. Southern R. Co. v. McGuin, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 649, 153 C. C. A. 447.

In Carnahan v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Neb. 1917) 165 N. W. 956, it was held that the evidence did not justify holding as matter of law that the plaintiff, a section hand had assumed the risk of injury from a defective hand car, especially as he had complained of its unsafe condition to his foreman, who had promised speedily to replace it.

Where a person undertakes work in a carrier's repair yard he assumes the risks naturally incident to the work. Sims v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1917) 196 Mich. 114, 162 N. W. 988.

"It is obvious that, even where a railroad operates its trains and moves its switch drafts in a proper and careful manner, trackwalkers and repairmen are necessarily subjected to great risks. Their very occupation is one of constant peril. Indeed, it follows from the nature of such employment that the duty of self-preservation has to rest on them, for no adequate protection, other than self-protection, can be afforded them. And such has been the reasonable holding of the law." Connelley v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 322, 142 C. C. A. 614.

Burden of proof—Assumption of risk.—The burden of proof on the issue of assumption of risk is on the employer. Kanawha, etc., R. Co. v. Kerse, (1916) 239 U. S. 576, 36 S. Ct. 174, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 448; Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 397, 100 Atl. 961; Robie v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (Vt. 1917) 100 Atl. 925. See also title Master and Servant, 18 R. C. L., sec. 126, p. 631.

Questions for court and jury—general rule.—It is proper to submit to the jury the question of assumption of risk if there is evidence on the subject, otherwise it is one of law. Southern R. Co. v. Mays, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 239 Fed. 41, 152 C. C. A. 91; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Coatney, (1917) 20 Ga. App. 713, 93 S. E. 228; Lincoln v. Pryor, (1916) 199 Ill. App. 228; Norton v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1917) 116 Me. 147, 100 Atl. 598; Chapman v. Ann Arbor R. Co., (1917) 196 Mich. 671, 163 N. W. 107; Armbrrecht v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1917) 90 N. J. L. 529, 101 Atl. 203; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Finke, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 190 S. W. 1143; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Meadows, (1916) 119 Va. 33, 89 S. E. 244.

"In a clear case the question of assumption of a risk by the employee is one of law for the court, but where there is doubt as to the facts or as to the inferences to be drawn from them, it becomes a question for the jury." Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 397, 100 Atl. 961. See also Falyk v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1917) 256 Pa. St. 397, 100 Atl. 961; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Marland, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 1, 152 C. C. A. 51.

1909 Supp., p. 585, sec. 5.

A contract requiring notice of the injury as a condition precedent to recovery even though valid at common law, is invalid as a defense to an action under this Act. Panhandle, etc., R. Co. v. Brooks, (Tex. Civ. 1917) 199 S. W. 665.

Independent contractor agreeing to assume all liability.—An agreement between an independent contractor and a railway company, by which he assumed all liability for injuries to or death of himself and persons in his employ, is not violative of this section. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bond, (1915) 240 U. S. 449, 36 S. Ct. 403, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 735.

A release after injury for a good consideration, and in the absence of proof that it was not fairly entered into, is binding upon the parties, and a bar to an action for damages. Mitchell v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1915) 194 Ill. App. 77; Ballenger v. Southern Ry. Co., (1916) 106 S. C. 200, 90 S. E. 1019; Panhandle, etc., Ry. Co. v. Fitts, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 188 S. W. 528. See also Anderson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., (1916) 47 Utah 614, 155 Pac. 446; Patton v. Atchison, etc., Ry. Co., (Okla. 1916) 158 Pac. 576.

Releases given to persons not employees.—"This provision applies only to the exemption of the interstate carrier from the liability imposed by the act. It does not attempt to regulate contracts between the employee and the insurance company, by the terms of which the insurance is forfeited. The agreement between the society and the employee of the railway was that if he or his representative brought suit against the railway such action would work a forfeiture of the insurance. No good reason appears why the parties might not make such an agreement. The employee still retained all his rights to pursue his remedy against the railway under the federal statute. The right to the insurance was not one created by the statute. It arose from the agreement of the parties; and there is neither justice nor logic in the proposition that the employee or his beneficiary may claim the benefits of the contract and at the same time repudiate its burdens." Wilson v. Grand Trunk R., etc., Soc., (N. H. 1916) 98 Atl. 478.

Set-off.—"As we construe the statute, the proviso applies only to contracts which enable the carrier to relieve itself of further liability. Besides, the contract in this case was one of insurance pure and simple, by which the company in consideration of the payment by plaintiff of a premium each month guaranteed to pay plaintiff for loss of time for a certain period upon certain conditions. It did not provide that plaintiff should accept his insurance in case of injury in lieu of his right to hold defendant for liability for the same injuries on the ground of defendant's negligence. . . . For these reasons we conclude that defendant cannot urge the set-off, and that there was no error in refusing the instructions asked upon that branch of the case." McAdow v. Kansas City Western R. Co., (1917) 100 Kan-309, L. R. A. 1917E 539, 164 Pac. 177.

1912 Supp., p. 335, sec. 1. [Act of April 5, 1910.]

I. LIMITATION OF ACTION

Necessity of bringing suit within period.

—In order for a plaintiff to recover for injuries received by him, suit must be commenced within two years from the date they were received. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Branson, (1916) 128 Md. 678, 98 Atl. 225; Bement v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., (1916) 194 Mich. 64, 160 N. W. 424, L. R. A. 1917E 322.

"The limitation relates, not merely to the remedy, but to the right." American R. Co. v. Coronas, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 545, 144 C. C. A. 599, L. R. A. 1916C 1095.

"There being no exception in the federal act, extending the time within which a suit for a personal injury by an employee of a railroad engaged in interstate commerce can be brought, in the event of his insanity, courts are not at liberty to apply state statutes extending or tolling the time for filing suit, or extending the time for bringing the suit by judicial construction." Alvarado v. Southern Pac. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 193 S. W. 1108.

Time of accrual of cause of action.—The statute commences to run as against a recovery by the injured employee from the date of the accident. Alvarado v. Southern Pac. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 193 S. W. 1108.

There is, however, some conflict as to when the period commences to run in case of death. Thus, in this connection, it has been said: "It is a general rule of law that where a cause of action arises, as in this case, after death, it is considered as accruing, for the purpose of the running of the statute, only from the time when there is some one in existence capable of suing, and, if no one but the administrator can sue, that the statute does not begin to run until administration is granted. This principle was announced at an early day." American R. Co. v. Coronas, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 545, 144 C. C. A. 599, L. R. A. 1916C 1095.

On the other hand there are cases holding that where the action is one for death the cause of action accrues at the time of death. Lindsay v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Okla. 1916) 155 Pac. 1173.

Necessity of plaintiff showing action within statute.—It is incumbent upon the plaintiff to allege and prove that his cause of action was brought within the time limited. American R. Co. v. Coronas, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 545, 144 C. C. A. 599, L. R. A. 1916C 1095; Morrison v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1913) 40 App. Cas. (D. C.) 391, Ann. Cas. 1914C 1026 and note.

Necessity of pleading act to obtain benefit of it.—"It is unnecessary to plead the act to obtain the benefit of it, because it is generally held that when neither declaration nor the plea shows that the injury occurred while the employee was engaged in interstate commerce, yet if during the taking of evidence the fact develops, the federal law controls the cause." Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Hess, (Fla. 1917) 74 So. 500.

Although not pleaded the limitation may be relied on where the record shows that the action was brought too late and the defendant insists on that point, it being apparent in the allegations of the declaration and the admissions of the answer. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Burnette, (1915) 239 U. S. 199, 36 S. Ct. 75, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 227, reversing (1913) 163 N. C. 186, 79 S. E. 414.

"Where a petition upon its face does not show that the cause of action is barred by the statutes of limitations, a demurrer thereto, urged specially upon that ground, should be overruled." Lindsay v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Okla. 1916) 155 Pac. 1173.

Determining question when action was commenced.—Under R. S. sec. 721 in JUDICIARY, vol. IV, p. 517, providing that matters respecting procedure shall be governed by the laws of the jurisdiction in which the action is brought, and section 6 of the Employers' Liability Act barring all actions under the Act not commenced within two years after the cause of action arose, whether an action in the state courts was commenced by the service of a summons and complaint without filing the complaint must be determined by the laws of this state. Murker v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1917) 95 Wash. 280, 163 Pac. 756.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

Construction and operation generally.—It may well be that instances may arise where inconvenience may result from bringing the action in a district where neither party resides and where the cause of action did not arise; but questions of convenience or of the work which shall be allotted to the various districts of the United States are, within constitutional limitations, entirely questions for the legislative branch. As the Congress has deemed it proper and desirable to confer jurisdiction as provided for in section 6 of this Act, that provision is not to be defeated by an effort at refined distinction. Connelly v. Central R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 238 Fed. 932.

Circuit Courts were given jurisdiction of cases to recover damages under the federal Employers' Liability Act. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Holloway, (1916) 168 Ky. 262, 181 S. W. 1126.

Concurrent jurisdiction of state and federal courts.—This Act is remedial in character, and should be so construed as to prevent the mischief and advance the remedy, and an action based thereon may be maintained either in the state or federal courts. Farrugia v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1914) 233 U. S. 352, 34 S. Ct. 591, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 996.

"In view of the powers of the federal government and the states and in the light of the uniform decisions relating to the subject, this provision can only mean that when the jurisdiction of the courts of a state as fixed by local laws empowers them to hear and determine a certain class of actions, an action of that class arising under federal law may be enforced as of right in the state court. The federal act has superseded state laws regulating the relations of employers and employees engaged in interstate commerce by railroad." Walton v. Pryor, (1916) 276 Ill. 563, 115 N. E. 2. See also Pipes v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1916) 267 Mo. 385, 184 S. W. 79.

Jurisdiction of United States Supreme Court to review.—The United States Supreme Court has jurisdiction on a writ of error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment of that court in a case arising under this Act. Washington Ry., etc., Co. v. Scala, (1917) 244 U. S. 630, 37 S. Ct. 654, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1360.

Effect of instituting action in particular jurisdiction.—Where a person under state law can sue in any county of the state in which defendant operates a line of railway, if a suit is commenced in a certain county, the cause of action thereafter will not be regarded as transitory and, as the institution of the suit has located it, it should also be held that the administrator, to whom it survives, has the right to continue the suit in the tribunal where it is pending. St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co. v. Smitha, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 190 S. W. 237.

III. REMOVAL TO FEDERAL COURT

See notes to JUDICIARY, 1912 Supp., p. 144, § 28, ante, this volume, at p. 1314.

1912 Supp., p. 335, sec. 2.

Construction and operation generally.—See Great Northern R. Co. v. Capital Trust Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 144, 37 S. Ct. 41, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 208, L. R. A. 1917E 1050; Washington Ry., etc., Co. v. Scala, (1916) 45 App. Cas. (D. C.) 484.

Under this Act the liability in favor of a person injured is property belonging to him in his lifetime and when he dies intestate the administrator of his estate may enforce, for the benefit of his wife and children, the liability created by the statute. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Smitha, (Tex. Civ. App. 1916) 190 S. W. 237.

Survival of actions.—The administrator of a fatally injured employee might recover the beneficiary's pecuniary loss and also for pain and suffering endured by deceased between the moment of injury and final dissolution. Great Northern R. Co. v. Capital Trust Co., (1916) 242 U. S. 144, 37 S. Ct. 41, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 208, L. R. A. 1917E 1050.

Under the federal Act providing for the survival of any right of action given by the Act to a person suffering injury, a cause of action for pain and suffering of a deceased railway employee, survived to his mother, the sole beneficiary, and a recovery of the amount of her pecuniary loss resulting from his death and also of damages for his pain and suffering between the time of injury and death was not a double recovery for the same injury. Calhoun v. Great Northern R. Co., (1916) 162 Wis. 264, 156 N. W. 198.

Where no time intervened between the fatal accident and the death of deceased, there could have been no conscious suffering and no cause of action to survive. Hence a plaintiff can recover only pecuniary damages, which can be measured by some reasonable standard. Chafin v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (W. Va. 1917) 93 S. E. 822.

"Such pain and suffering as are substantially contemporaneous with death or mere incidents to it, as also the short periods of insensibility which sometimes intervene between fatal injuries and death, afford no basis for a separate estimation or award of damages under statutes like that which is controlling here." Great Northern R. Co. v. Capital Trust Co.,

"It has been held that the administrator may recover in the same action not only for the pecuniary loss sustained by the beneficiaries, but also damages on account of conscious pain and suffering of deceased, in case the fatal accident did not produce immediate death. . . . In such a case there is an element of damages which cannot be ascertained by any fixed rule of measurement, and which must therefore be left very largely to the judgment of the jury." Chafin v. Norfolk, etc., R. Co., (W. Va. 1917) 93 S. W. 822.

1912 Supp., p. 336, sec. 2.

"The congressional purpose in enacting § 2 of the act is very plain. At the time the act was passed railroad carriers had in service many box cars, requiring for their proper use secure ladders and secure handholds or grabirons on their roofs at the tops of such ladders, and the purpose of this section clearly is to convert the general legal duty of exercising ordinary care to provide such safety appliances and to keep them in repair, into a statutory, an absolute and imperative duty, of making them 'secure' and to enforce the duty by appropriately severe penalties. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., [1911] 220 U. S. 559, [31 S. Ct. 612, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 582]." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Williams, (1917) 242 U. S. 462, 37 S. Ct. 128, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 437, affirming (Miss. 1916) 72 So. 158.

When section became effective.—In Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Williams, (1917) 242 U. S. 462, 37 S. Ct. 128, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 437, affirming (Miss. 1916) 72 So. 158, it was held that section 2 took effect July 1, 1911, and that it could not, by virtue of anything in section 3, be changed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

This section as affected by following section.—Section 3 of the Safety Appliance Act provides for a uniform standard of such car equipment applicable to all interstate roads; and an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, fixing a time for compliance with its order prescribing such uniform standard, did not affect the provisions of section 2, or suspend the operation thereof. Coleman v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 132 Minn. 22, 155 N. W. 763. See also Cook v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 178 Ia. 1030, 158 N. W. 521.

In Coleman v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1916) 132 Minn. 22, 155 N. W. 763, section 2 was construed in connection with section 3 of the same Act, and it was held that it imposed the absolute duty upon interstate railroad companies of maintaining the appliances and equipment of their cars in secure and safe condition for use, and that the statute became and remained in full force and operation after July 1, 1911.

Secure ladder.—A box car having a handbrake operated from the roof requires also a secure ladder to enable the employee to safely ascend and descend, and a switchman injured by virtue of a defect in one of the handholds or grabirons that form the rungs of the ladder is within the provisions of section 2. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rigby, (1916) 241 U. S. 33, 36 S. Ct. 482, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 874, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 221, 138 C. C. A. 51.

"Efficient handbrakes."—It is now settled beyond controversy that these Safety Appliance Acts impose upon the carrier an absolute duty (1) to equip its cars with the prescribed appliances, and (2) to maintain such appliances in a secure condition. Armitage v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1917) 54 Mont. 38, 166 Pac. 301; Thayer v. Denver, etc., R. Co., (1916) 21 N. M. 330, 154 Pac. 691.

Grabirons.—The federal Safety Appliance Acts require secure grabirons upon a car or caboose in an interstate commerce train; and if a brakeman, while using such a grabiron in the ordinary mode, is injured because it is insecurely fastened, the railway company is liable. McNaney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1916) 132 Minn. 391, 157 N. W. 650.

1912 Supp., p. 336, sec. 3.

Purpose of Act.—"This law requires that ultimately the location of these ladders and hand holds shall be absolutely fixed so that the employee will know certainly that night or day he will find them in like place and of like size and usefulness on all cars, from whatever line or railway or section of the country they may come. This highly important and humane purpose must not be defeated by finesse of construction." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Williams, (1917) 242 U. S. 462, 37 S. Ct. 128, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 437, affirming (Miss. 1916) 72 So. 158.

Car in actual use.—Where the carrier is sued for injuries caused by failure to comply with this section a defense that the car on which injury occurred was one in actual use at the time of the taking effect of the Act, and therefore excepted from the requirements thereof by order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, must be pleaded and proved. Cook v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1916) 178 Ia. 1030, 158 N. W. 521.

1912 Supp., p. 336, sec. 4.

The purpose and scope of the Act are discussed at considerable length in Erie R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917)

240 Fed. 28, 153 C. C. A. 64; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 683, 141 C. C. A. 439.

The general rule of statutory construction is that a proviso carves special exceptions only out of a general enacting clause; and that those who set up any such exception must establish it as being within the words as well as the reason thereof. This rule is applicable to the proviso in this section. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 420, 155 C. C. A. 196.

Withdrawn from interstate commerce.

—A loaded car is not withdrawn from interstate commerce pending a delay in getting it to its destination. Great Northern R. Co. v. Otos, (1915) 239 U. S. 349, 13 S. Ct. 124, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 322, affirming (1915) 128 Minn. 283, 150 N. W. 922.

Hauling defective car before discovery of defect as violation of section.—Under the original Act, any hauling of a defectively equipped car is a violation thereof, and the amendment of 1910 only permits hauling of such a car after the discovery to the nearest repair point for repairs. Any other hauling and hence a hauling before discovery, though without fault in not discovering, is a violation thereof. U. S. v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Ky. 1916) 242 Fed. 151.

"Any car."—"It is said that, because the permission of the proviso of section 4 extends only to 'any car,' it should not be thought of as reaching a train or an association of cars, or, in other words, that general permission to haul a car does not extend to hauling it in a train or in any way except alone. This construction is fatal to the whole purpose of the act, because the original prohibition of section 2 and the penalties of section 4 are not directed against hauling trains having defective cars, but are against hauling 'any car.' Consequently, if a car alone and a car in a train are essentially different things, and if the language 'any car' reaches the former and not the latter, sections 2 and 4, the main sections of the act, do not reach trains including defective cars, but only such a car as a separate unit; and, of course, this construction is not right." Erie R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 28, 153 C. C. A. 64.

"Upon its line of railroad."—"We are of opinion that the necessary effect of the clause, 'and such equipment shall have become defective or insecure while such car is being used by such carrier upon its line of railroad,' as used in this proviso, is to limit the right of hauling a defective car for repairs, without penalty, to the carrier upon whose line of railroad the car was being used when the equipment became defective." Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 420, 155 C. C. A. 196.

"Nearest available point."—"Availability obviously depends, under the statute, on other considerations besides that of mere distance. Whether Fitchburg was, under all the circumstances, the 'nearest available' point for the repair of this car, was a matter of business judgment. Upon such a question, involving as it does many elements, the decision of those in charge of the business, if made in good faith, is entitled to serious consideration. It is not shown to have been wrong in this instance." U. S. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1916) 243 Fed. 795.

In Pennsylvania Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 824, 154 C. C. A. 526, affirming, (N. D. Ohio 1915) 237 Fed. 471, it was held that the defendant had not sustained the burden of showing that, under the circumstances, the hauling of a "hospital" train containing a large number of chained-up cars, a distance of about 100 miles to a repair shop passing on the way other repair shops unjustified by the conjecturally possible (and apparently improbable) saving of a few days' time in effecting the repairs.

"If such movement is necessary."—Under this section repairs to defective couplers must be made on the spot; it is unlawful to move the car. Lorick v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., (S. C. 1916) 93 S. E. 322.

"Remedial action."—"Although § 4 of the act of 1910 relieves the carrier from the statutory penalties while a car is being hauled to the nearest available point for repairs, it expressly provides that it shall not be construed to relieve a carrier from liability in a remedial action for the death or injury of an employee caused by or in connection with the movement of a car with defective equipment. . . . The statute imposes an absolute and unqualified duty to maintain the appliance in secure condition." Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rigsby, (1916) 241 U. S. 33, 36 S. Ct. 482, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 874, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 221, 138 C. C. A. 51, and following Great Northern R. Co. v. Otos, (1915) 239 U. S. 349, 36 S. Ct. 124, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 322.

Hauling "by means of chains."—In Erie R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 28, 153 C. C. A. 64, with reference to the subproviso the court said: "This exception or proviso is capable of more than one construction. It may refer only to cars where the coupling devices are so defective that the cars must be hauled by chains instead of drawbars. This we call the first construction. . . . We are convinced that the first construction is the right one; and several considerations persuade us to this end." See also Pennsylvania Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 824, 154 C. C. A. 526, affirming (N. D. Ohio 1915) 237 Fed. 471.

In association with cars "commercially used."—The fact that a car is being hauled for repair in connection with cars in commercial use does not take such movement out of the proviso if otherwise coming within its terms. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 420, 155 C. C. A. 196, following Erie R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 28, 153 C. C. A. 64.

1912 Supp., p. 337, sec. 5.

Construction.—"Section 5 of the act of 1910 expressly forbids the movement of such defective cars otherwise than within the express limitations of section 4 (Great Northern R. Co. v. Otos, [1915] 239 U. S. 349, 36 S. Ct. 124, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 322). The fact that the cars were hauled in the condition in which they admittedly were shows prima facie a violation of the provisions of the sections mentioned. The burden is thus cast upon defendant to show affirmatively that its act is within the proviso of section 4 of the Act of 1910. Schlemmer v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., [1907] 205 U. S. 1, 10, 27 S. Ct. 407, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 681, [685]; U. S. v. Trinity, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. [1913]), 211 Fed. 448, 453, 128 C. C. A. 120." Pennsylvania Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 824, 154 C. C. A. 526, affirming (N. D. Ohio 1915), 237 Fed. 471.

1916 Supp., p. 215, sec. 1.

Headlights.—In a case concerning the validity of a state statute regulating headlights on locomotives used in interstate commerce passed at a time prior to the passage of the Act of March 4, 1915, but after the Act of February 17, 1911, or in other words in 1909, the court said: "So far as the attack upon the Act of 1909 and the order made pursuant to it is based upon interference with interstate commerce, it very properly is conceded that, but for a recent Act of Congress, the case would be controlled by Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Georgia, [1914] 234 U. S. 280, 290, [34 S. Ct. 829, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1312, 1317], where it was held that in the absence of federal legislation the states are at liberty, in the exercise of their police power, to establish regulations for securing safety in the physical operation of railroad trains within their territory, even though such trains are used in interstate commerce, and that (p. 293) the Safety Appliance Act of Congress, since they provided no regulations for locomotive headlights, showed no intent to supersede the exercise of state power with respect to this subject. But it is insisted that this decision is no longer controlling, because Congress has since then 'exercised its power as to equipment over the entire locomotive and tender and all parts and appurtenances thereof.' The reference is to the Act of March 4, 1915, c. 169, 38 Stat. 1192, amendatory of the Act of Feb. 17, 1911 [1912 Supp. p. 839], requiring common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto, c. 103, 36 Stat. 913. The latter act was among those referred to in the Georgia case, and held not to oust the authority of the state because it did not appear either that Congress had acted, or that the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the authority of Congress, had established any regulations concerning headlights.

"The amendment of 1915 extends the provisions respecting inspection, etc., to the entire locomotive and all its appurtenances. Whether those provisions authorize the Interstate Commerce Commission to prescribe any particular type of headlight, or other appliance, is a question upon which we need not now pass." Vandalia R. Co. v. Public Service Commission, [1916] 242 U. S. 255, 37 S. Ct. 93, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 276, (affirming (1914) 182 Ind. 382, 101 N. E. 85)."

"When the amendatory act of Congress approved March 4, 1915, is read in connection with the Safe Locomotive Boilers Act of Feb. 17, 1911 [1912 Supp., p. 339], we cannot escape the conclusion that the intention of Congress is plain that the states must be excluded from the right to legislate within the field to which the several original acts, and the amendatory act extended the federal authority." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. State, (Ala. App. 1917) 76 So. 505.

Prior to this Act of March 4, 1915, a state statute regulating locomotive headlights was not repugnant to any Act of Congress on the subject of safety appliances for railroads as no such Act had attempted to regulate headlights, and in the absence of such regulation by Congress states could in the exercise of their police power legislate on the subject. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Georgia, (1914) 234 U. S. 280, 34 S. Ct. 829, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1312, affirming (1910) 135 Ga. 545, 69 S. E. 725, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 20; Randall v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (1916) 162 Wis. 507, 156 N. W. 629.

RIVERS, HARBORS AND CANALS

Vol. VI, p. 787, sec. 2476.

What are navigable waters.—The fact that Congress passed an Act authorizing the construction of a bridge does not of itself establish the navigability of a stream. National Surety Co. v. Lincoln County, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 705, 151 C. C. A. 555, affirming (D. C. Mont. 1916) 231 Fed. 468.

Vol. VI, p. 793, sec. 5.

Closing drawbridge for repairs.—Where a railroad closes its drawbridge for the purpose of making necessary repairs, complies with the statutes of a state and performs the work of repair without unreasonable delay, it is not liable for the penalty imposed by this section. The statute is silent as to obstructions caused for the purpose of making necessary repairs and has no application to such a case. Newark Exp., etc., Co. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (1916) 89 N. J. L. 494, 98 Atl. 472.

Unusual danger.—The refusal of a railway company to open the draw of its bridge during the Galveston storms of 1915, when, as shown by undisputed evidence, an attempt on the part of those in charge of the bridge to open the draw therein, under the prevailing conditions, would have imperiled the lives of those making such attempt as well as the lives of passengers on the trains using such bridge, who were fleeing from the city to avoid the dangers of the storm, was not a violation of this section. West v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 196 S. W. 343.

Construction of regulation.—Under this section and the regulations of Aug. 4, 1910, promulgated thereunder, which require a vessel when approaching a draw to sound a prescribed signal "when said vessel shall be at a distance of not less than 1000 feet," such vessel must give the signal when approximately 1000 feet distant. The regulation fixes the minimum distance but prescribes no maximum. "A signal given at a distance of 2 or 3 miles from the bridge would be a literal compliance with the regulations. This however would be an unreasonable construction of the regulation. The right of navigation does not take away the right to cross the river. The two rights co-exist, and each must be exercised with reference to the other. The navigator must yield something to the foot passenger, just as the latter must yield something to the navigator." The Yucatan, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 437, 141 C. C. A. 267.

Vol. VI, p. 796, sec. 1.

Constitutionality.—The necessities of commerce required the protection and preservation of the harbor of the chief commercial city of the country, and an Act to protect the waters of the harbor for the purposes of navigation was within the constitutional power of Congress. Randall v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 935, 47 C. C. A. 80; U. S. v. Various Tugs, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 505.

Single penalty.—The Act imposes a single penalty. While all parties concerned are liable, there is but one wrongful act and but one penalty to be imposed. "Any other construction would frequently lead to a grotesque result. If, for example, there should be several tugs with different owners and masters, the wrongful discharge of his load by a single scowman would cause the amount of the penalty to be determined by the accidental number of owners and masters of tugs rather than by the gravity of the offense of the culpable scowman." U. S. v. Various Tugs, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 505.

Vol. VI, p. 798, sec. 3.

Defective machinery.—Defective machinery, which, by the terms of the statute, is no excuse, means machinery unsuited for the purpose or out of repair, and does not refer to a sudden breaking down of properly installed and inspected machinery. U. S. v. Various Tugs, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 505.

Vol. VI, p. 805, sec. 9.

Concurrent authority.—In general.—This statute is a specific recognition by Congress itself that, notwithstanding its paramount jurisdiction of the means and instrumentalities of interstate commerce, the bridging of navigable waters is likewise one of vital interest to the states and that they also have a governmental concern as to proper bridging of such waterways. The effect of the statute is that the general and exclusive control of interstate commerce vested in Congress is specifically modified in the matter of bridges over navigable streams located in a single state, and concurrent power over such bridges is vested in the state. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1916) 99 Kan. 188, 161 Pac. 937.

Removal of bridge.—So it has been held that a bridge which is an integral part of an interstate railroad highway may be demolished and removed from a stream by the state if it constitutes such an obstruction as to cause the river to overflow and imperil the lives and inundate the homes of the people residing near by. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1916) 99 Kan. 188, 161 Pac. 937, distinguishing Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist., (1914) 233 U. S. 75, 34 S. Ct. 564, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 857, wherein it was held that the destruction of a bridge, necessarily used by an interstate railroad line, could not be justified by the fact that it helped the drainage of a district.

Approval of War Department.—Permission and approval by the federal government for the construction of a bridge is not required before the procedural steps providing for the construction and for the payment of the bridge have been taken. Where the state legislature has authorized the construction of a bridge, it devolves on the state highway commission to obtain the approval of the federal authorities of the location and of the plans of the bridge before construction is commenced. Although this can be done at any time before construction is commenced, it would seem most desirable that such approval be obtained at an early stage of the proceeding, to avoid the taking of any further steps on the part of all interested parties in case such approval is refused. State v. Stevenson, (1917) 161 Wis. 569, 161 N. W. 1.

Vol. VI, p. 816, sec. 13.

Refuse matter.—Where a pile driver was engaged in repairing a ferry rack in the Hudson river and some of the piles were longer than required, and thereupon a member of the pile-driving crew cut off their ends and let the discarded pieces float out into the river, it was held that the unwanted ends of the piles were refuse matter, a dangerous menace to navigation and that the action of a member of the crew in permitting them to float off was a violation of this section for which the pile driver was liable. The Pile Driver No. 2, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 239 Fed. 489, 152 C. C. A. 367.

Depositing refuse on bank of stream.—If the refuse is deposited on the banks of a stream the offense is not complete until it is washed into the river and obstructs navigation. Myrtle Point Transp. Co. v. Coquille River, (1917) 86 Ore. 311, 168 Pac. 625.

Vol. VI, p. 817, sec. 15.

Scope and application of section.—The question whether the statute has been violated depends upon the facts of the particular case and each case must be judged by its own circumstances. If a vessel anchors at a point in a channel where, notwithstanding such anchorage, other vessels navigated with care can safely pass, she does not violate the statute or render herself liable under the general rules of navigation, although she obstructs the channel to a certain extent. On the other hand, if the anchored vessels occupies so much of the channel as to practically impede its navigation or make the effort to pass her a dangerous manoeuvre, she has placed herself in a position which the statute forbids. Strathleven Steamship Co. v. Baulch, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 412, 157 C. C. A. 38.

The owner of a sunken vessel is charged with the statutory duty of lighting or marking the place where the vessel sank, and navigators fulfill their duty when they look for lights at night to mark obstructions in the pathway of vessels. The Wissahickon, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 345.

The statutory requirement that the owner of such sunken craft immediately mark it, is a personal duty which cannot be delegated so as to relieve the owner from responsibility. The Drill Boat No. 4, (D. C. Mass. 1916) 233 Fed. 589.

But it has been held that the volunteer conduct of officials of the United States in placing a marking buoy at the request of the owners of a sunken vessel, which was not abandoned, relieves the latter from liability for injury to another vessel due to misplacement of the buoy. In other words, the owner complies with the requirements of the Act when he secures the services of the lighthouse department, and it makes no difference that the government makes a charge for its services. The Plymouth, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 483, 140 C. C. A. 1, reversing on this point Lehigh, etc., Coal Co. v. Hartford, etc., Transp. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 220 Fed. 348. There appears to be no previous American authority on this subject. The holding is predicated on the theory that in such case the government acts, not as the private agent of the owner, but in its sovereign capacity, as agent for the whole public; that in such circumstances the owner cannot order the buoy to be withdrawn or change its location, or control the lighthouse department in any way as a principal may control his agent.

Vol. VI, p. 818, sec. 18.

Constitutionality.—This section is not unconstitutional because it fails to make provision for compensation. Louisville Bridge Co. v. U. S., (1917) 242 U. S. 409, 37 S. Ct. 158, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 395, affirming (W. D. Ky. 1916) 233 Fed. 270.

Action for damages—pleading and proof.—In order to recover damages caused through an obstruction to navigation by a bridge across a navigable stream, it is not necessary for a plaintiff to plead or prove that the Secretary of War has not proceeded under the statute to ascertain that the given bridge is an unreasonable obstruction to free navigation. Clew v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1916) 89 N. J. L. 171, 98 Atl. 319.

Compensation for alteration.—The government can enforce the provisions of this section authorizing the Secretary of War to require alterations in bridges, when such changes are demanded in the interest of navigation, without making compensation. Louisville Bridge Co. v. U. S., (1917) 242 U. S. 409, 37 S. Ct. 158, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 395, affirming (W. D. Ky. 1916) 233 Fed. 270, and overruling U. S. v. Parkersburg Branch R. Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1905) 134 Fed. 969, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 224, 74 C. C. A. 354, and distinguishing Monongahela Nav. Co. v. U. S., (1893) 148 U. S. 312, 13 S. Ct. 622, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 463; U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1913) 229 U. S. 244, 33 S. Ct. 850, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1169.

1909 Supp., p. 600, sec. 1.

Navigable waters.—The fact that Congress passed an Act authorizing the construction of a bridge does not of itself establish the navigability of the stream. National Surety Co. v. Lincoln County, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 238 Fed. 705, 151 C. C. A. 555, affirming (D. C. Mont. 1916) 231 Fed. 468.

1909 Supp., p. 601, sec. 4.

Presumption of negligence.—Upon receiving or being reasonably chargeable with notice of the approach of a vessel, failure either promptly to open the draw or the lift of a bridge maintained across a navigable river, or if the facts justify seasonably to notify the approaching vessel that failure to open or delay in doing so is unavoidable, raises a presumption of negligence which the owner or operator of the bridge must overcome. Great Lakes Towing Co. v. Masoba Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 577, 150 C. C. A. 459.

1912 Supp., p. 347, sec. 3.

Liability for flowage.—The statute recognizes the fact that damage to private property may ensue from an authorized dam and preserves liability therefor. Erickson v. Minnesota, etc., Power Co. (1916) 134 Minn. 209, 158 N. W. 979.

1912 Supp., p. 378, sec. 11.

Ownership by railroad in any common carrier by water.—Extension of time.—A court of equity is without jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission refusing, on the ground of real or possible competition, to grant an extension of time for compliance with the provisions of the second paragraph of this section, which prohibited after July 1, 1914, any ownership by a railroad in any common carrier by water when the railroad might compete for traffic with the water carrier, and empowered the Commission to determine questions of fact as to such competition, and to extend the time if the extension would not exclude or reduce competition on the water route, since the order or the Commission was negative in substance as well as form, and the risk to which the railway company was left subject did not come from the order, but from the statute. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. U. S., (1917) 243 U. S. 412, 37 S. Ct. 397, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 819, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1916) 234 Fed. 682.

1914 Supp., p. 377, sec. 9.

Mode of review.—In Panama R. Co. v. Beckford, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 436, 145 C. C. A. 430, which was in error to and appeal from the District Court of the Canal Zone, the court, in affirming judgment on writ of error and dismissing the appeal, said: "Under this section it is clear that the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of Appeals is to be exercised in the same manner and under the same regulations and by the same procedure, as nearly as practicable, as is done in reviewing the final judgments and decrees of the District Courts of the United States. In the procedure of the Circuit Court of Appeals in reviewing final judgments and decrees of the District Courts, the distinction between cases at law and cases in equity is fully recognized and it is well settled that cases at law can only be reviewed on writs of error, and cases in equity on an appeal."

Jurisdiction on appeal.—Amount in controversy.—In an action in the District Court of the United States for the Canal Zone, the amount sued for was over $14,000. The verdict of the jury in favor of the plaintiff was $930.60. The defendant made a counterclaim of $421.95 which apparently was not passed upon by the jury. The record showed that the plaintiff in error submitted in the court below an affidavit that "the amount in controversy in said cause is in excess of $1,000." On motion to dismiss it was held that the amount involved was sufficient to give the Circuit Court of Appeals jurisdiction. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. Balderach, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 562, 144 C. C. A. 22.

Criminal cause.—Contempt of court.—In Smith v. Government of Canal Zone, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 133, the record showed that petitioner and appellant was tried and convicted in the District Court of the Canal Zone for contempt of court and sentenced to the payment of a fine of $25. He thereupon sued out a writ of error assigning as errors the denial of the right of a trial by jury and that under the proceedings he was deprived of due process of law. The court in granting the appellee's motion to dismiss the writ of error on the ground that the Circuit Court of Appeals was without jurisdiction to review said: "It is conceded that the case sought to be reviewed is a criminal cause. Our jurisdiction to review cases from the District Court of the Canal Zone is to be found in an 'Act to provide for the opening, maintenance and protection and operation of the Panama Canal, and the sanitation and government of the Canal Zone, approved August 24, 1912,' 37 Stat. 560. By the ninth section of that act jurisdiction is given to this court to review, revise, modify, reverse or affirm final judgments or decrees of the District Court of the Canal Zone, and to render such judgment as in the opinion of the court should have been rendered by the trial court, only where (a) the Constitution, or any statute, treaty, title, right or privilege of the United States is involved and a right thereunder is denied; or (b) in cases in which the value in controversy exceeds $1,000; or (c) in criminal cases wherein the offense charged is punishable as a felony. Certainly, this is not a case in which the value in controversy exceeds $1,000, nor it is a criminal case wherein the offense charged is punishable as a felony."

SALVAGE

Salvage service defined.—A salvage service is a service which is voluntarily rendered to a vessel in need of assistance and is designed to relieve her from distress or danger either present or to be reasonably apprehended. The Neshaming, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 285, 142 C. C. A. 577.

The elements to be considered in a case of salvage are the danger to the ship, actual or apprehended, the degree of danger from which the property was rescued, the labor expended and the promptitude, energy and skill displayed by the salvors in saving the property, the volume of the property they employed in the service and the risks and danger to which it was exposed. The Neshaming, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 285, 142 C. C. A. 577, following The Pleasure Bay, (S. D. Ala. 1915) 226 Fed. 55.

SEAMEN

Vol. VI, p. 853, sec. 4511.

Construction.—The legislation embraced in these sections, designed for the amelioration of American maritime commerce, providing as it does for the avoidance of shipping articles and for penalties for its neglect, must be strictly construed. The Elswick Tower, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 241 Fed. 706.

American vessels.—These sections apply only to American vessels, and do not apply to foreign seamen who, in a port in the United States, sign articles before a British consul for service on a British vessel. The Elswick Tower, (S. D. Ga. 1917) 241 Fed. 706.

Vol. VI, p. 865, sec. 4528.

"Seamen" does not include a deckhand on a barge whose duty it is to clean and load the same and who is employed under an ordinary contract of hiring. The J. P. Schuh, (S. D. Ala. 1915) 223 Fed. 455.

Vol. VI, p. 866, sec. 4529.

Sufficient cause—Claim of offset.—A claim of offset for articles intrusted to a seaman as chief steward when he shipped, and not accounted for by him at the end of the trip, with no proof of negligence on his part, does not furnish the sufficient cause required by this section to relieve for the penalties therein provided. Schmidt v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., (N. D. Cal. 1913) 209 Fed. 264, decree affirmed (1916) 241 U. S. 245, 36 S. Ct. 581, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 982, which reversed (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 214 Fed. 513, 130 C. C. A. 657, which reversed the decree of the District Court.

Appeal to Court of Appeals.—The penalty imposed by this section is not incurred during the delay caused by a reasonable attempt to secure a revision of doubtful questions of law and fact in a federal Court of Appeals. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. Schmidt, (1916) 241 U.

S. 245, 36 S. Ct. 581, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 982, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 214 Fed. 513, 130 C. C. A. 657, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1913) 209 Fed. 264.

Penalty remitted.—It has been uniformly held that the penalty will not be imposed in any case where there is a fair ground of dispute, and if imposed nevertheless, will be remitted. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. Schmidt, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 214 Fed. 513, 130 C. C. A. 657, reserved on other grounds (1916) 241 U. S. 245, 36 S. Ct. 581, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 982.

Vol. VI, p. 867, sec. 4530.

Purpose of statute.—Congress in the passage of this statute intended that the master of the ship should at all times have in his hands to the credit of the seaman a sum equal to that which has been paid to him out of the wages earned until the end of the voyage. The Jacob N. Haskell, (N. D. Fla. 1916) 235 Fed. 914.

Construction.—The La Follette Act, amending this section, "has a general police and remedial purpose, which makes a strong appeal for a liberal construction in advancement of the ends in view." The London, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 238 Fed. 645, appeal dismissed (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 863, 154 C. C. A. 565.

Right to one-half wages.—Generally.—This Act gives to every seaman the right to demand from the vessel at each port where such vessel, during her voyage, loads or delivers cargo, one-half of such wages as the seaman shall, at the time of such demand, have earned. He cannot demand any wages until at least five days' services have been rendered, and he cannot thereafter demand the half part of such wages as may be subsequently earned until five days have elapsed from the last or prior payment of one-half of his wages. The Talus, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 242 Fed. 955.

Necessity of demand.—This section expressly requires that there shall be a demand made upon the master for the partial payment provided for in order to put the latter or his vessel in default and release the seaman from his contract. In re Ivertsen, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 237 Fed. 498.

Time of demand.—In The Strathearn, (N. D. Fla. 1917) 239 Fed. 583, it was held that no demand could be made for payment under this section until at least five days after the vessel had put into port. However, in The Talus, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 242 Fed. 954, this holding was disapproved, the court saying: "I do not think that the vessel must be in port five days before the seaman can make his demand provided there has been five days or more of service by the sailor since he signed. I think the words 'Provided, such demand shall not be made before the expiration of, nor oftener than once in, five days,' mean shall not be made before the expiration of five days' service, during which wages were earned, and not oftener than once in each five days thereafter."

Amount.—The real intent of this section is that, deducting previous advances, the seaman shall be entitled to receive one-half the balance of any wages earned and remaining unpaid at the date of demand. In re Ivertsen, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 237 Fed. 498; The London, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 238 Fed. 645, appeal dismissed (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 863, 154 C. C. A. 565; The Clematis, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 484; The Delagoa, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 835.

Under this section a seaman is not entitled to one-half of his wages earned since a previous payment, where it appeared that such previous payment exceeded one-half of the wages already earned by him. The Meteor, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 241 Fed. 735.

Under this section as amended, where a vessel remains in port five days after the seamen have demanded and received one payment, they are entitled to demand and receive a second payment, which should be only one-half the wages earned since the last payment. The Jacob N. Haskell, (N. D. Fla. 1916) 235 Fed. 914.

Effect of advances.—In view of the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, § 10(a), which absolutely prohibits advance payments of wages to seamen, payments so made cannot be considered in determining the one-half of a seaman's wages due him under this section, even though they were made in a foreign country where they were not unlawful. The Imberhorne, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 240 Fed. 830.

Foreign seamen.—The rights of a seaman in this country are controlled by the Act amending this section, and not by the flag of the vessel on which he is serving. The Ixion, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 237 Fed. 142; The Talus, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 242 Fed. 954; The Imberhorne, (S. D. Ala. 1917) 240 Fed. 830.

Since by express provision this section applies to seamen engaged on foreign vessels while in ports of the United States, a libel showing that a foreign seaman had earned wages while in a port of the United States, that demand was made in accordance with this section, and payment refused, states a cause of action. The Ixion, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 237 Fed. 142.

Vol. VI, p. 878, sec. 4543.

Expenses of shipping commissioner.—Under this section the court is authorized to allow expenses to shipping commissioners for attending to the effects of deceased seamen, notwithstanding R. S. sec. 4545. U. S. v. Grant, (D. C. Mass. 1914) 224 Fed. 644.

Vol. VI, p. 893, sec. 4568.

Construction.—This section is clearly mandatory and is designed to secure for each seaman a timely and suitable quantity, quality and variety of food for the service for which he has been employed. Nelson v. Patsel, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 682, 146 C. C. A. 608.

Shortage of single articles.—The allowance to which seamen are entitled for a reduction of the provisions mentioned in the scale from the quantities provided, attaches to each article of food required and not to an aggregate reduction. Nelson v. Patsel, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 682, 146 C. C. A. 608.

It is only on some one of the grounds contained in this section that a shipowner can be relieved from liability for failing to provide provisions in accordance with the shipping articles and R. S. sec. 4612, vol. 6, p. 930. Nelson v. Patsel, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 682, 146 C. C. A. 608.

A provision in shipping articles that the crew are to be furnished provisions in accordance with R. S. sec. 4612, vol. 6, p. 930, is valid and enforceable, and for a violation thereof the seamen are entitled to recover under this section. Nelson v. Patsel, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 682, 146 C. C. A. 608.

Vol. VI, p. 915, sec. 4599.

The repeal of these sections indicates plainly the intent of the federal government to control the subject and to prevent the arrest and imprisonment of deserting seamen on foreign owned vessels. Eæ p. Larsen, (E. D. Va. 1916) 233 Fed. 708.

1916 Supp., p. 231, sec. 9.

Joinder of parties.—The word "or" in the last sentence of this section relating to the liability of the "master or vessel or the owner" is to be construed to mean "and," and in a suit for damages for injuries a seaman may join all the parties, the master, the vessel and the owner. The Blakeley, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 234 Fed. 959.

1916 Supp., p. 231, sec. 10.

Advances in domestic ports.—The intent of Congress was that no advancements could be made upon wages earned on foreign vessels while in the harbors of the United States or within the jurisdiction of the waters of the United States. The Ixion, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 237 Fed. 142.

Advances in foreign port.—In The Rhine, (E. D. N. Y. 1917) 244 Fed. 833, it was held that this section applied to advances made by an American vessel while in a foreign port, the court reviewed and refused to follow the contrary decision rendered in The State of Maine, (S. D. N. Y. 1884) 22 Fed. 734.

1916 Supp., p. 233, sec. 12.

Application.—Coastwise voyages.—Subsequent legislation excludes seamen engaged in coastwise trade from the exemption contained in this section. Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co. v. Byrne, (1915) 239 U. S. 459, 36 S. Ct. 132, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 382, affirming (1914) 22 Hawaii 160.

1916 Supp., p. 251, sec. 20.

Effect on measure of damages.—By virtue of the inherent nature of a seaman's contract, it is quite immaterial whether the master and seaman are fellow servants in the case of a suit for injuries resulting from an improvident order of the master, for the measure of recovery is only wages to the end of the voyage and the expenses of maintenance and care for a reasonable time, regardless of the question of contributory negligence, and this rule is not affected by the text section. Chelentis v. Luckenbach Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 536, 156 C. C. A. 234.

"Seaman having command."—Where it appeared that the work of lashing a deck load of lumber was directed by the boatswain, who made an improper adjustment, whereby the seaman who was lashing the lumber was injured, it was held that he was a "seaman having command" within the meaning of this section. The Colusa, (N. D. Cal. 1917) 241 Fed. 968.

SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION

Vol. VII, p. 21, R. S. 4153.

State laws imposing charges for wharves, etc., based on tonnage.—"It is not here open to question, and it is not questioned, that, in the absence of inconsistent congressional action on the subject, it is competent for the local authorities to impose reasonable charges for the use by vessels of wharves and other facilities furnished. . . . And . . . the mode of rating such charges made, whether according to the size or capacity of the vessel, or otherwise, is a matter for the determination of the local authorities. It is not a valid ground of objection to such charges that they are to be computed with reference to the vessel's gross tonnage, and not upon its net tonnage, which is made the subject of the United States tonnage duties." The Cestrian, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 929, 153 C. C. A. 615.

1912 Supp., p. 352, sec. 1.

Purpose and scope.—"Obviously the act was passed in restriction of the rights of vessel owners and in the aid of those who furnish repairs, supplies, and other necessities. It wiped out all difference between foreign and domestic vessels, and between repairs, supplies, and other necessities furnished in the home port, as distinguished from those furnished in foreign ports; and between such as were ordered by the master and such as were ordered by the owners. It created a presumption of law of the vessel's liability for all repairs, supplies, and other necessities ordered by the master, managing owner, ship's husband, charterer, any person to whom the management of the vessel is intrusted at the port of supply, owner pro hac vice, and conditional vendee." The Oceana, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 80, 156 C. C. A. 508. See to the same effect, The Oceana, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 139.

"Being relieved of the necessity of proving credit to the vessel and being clothed with the presumption of the validity of the order, the libellant, upon proving delivery to the vessel, enters court with a prima facie right to a maritime lien." The Yankee, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 919, 147 C. C. A. 593.

A maritime lien is a jus in re, and, as it may operate to the prejudice of general creditors, it will not be extended by analogy or by inference. The Cora P. White, (D. C. N. J. 1917) 243 Fed. 246.

"Marine railway."—"Whatever may have been the rule prior to Act June 23, 1910 [this Act], in reference to the use of marine railways, as that act gives a maritime lien to one who furnishes a dry dock or marine railway for the repair of a vessel, I am of the opinion that a contract regarding the use of such dock or railway for such repairs is a contract cognizable in the admiralty." The Alliance, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 236 Fed. 361.

Lien confined to particular vessel furnished.—This section gives no authority for the creation of a maritime lien on vessels to which supplies were not to be furnished. And an agreement that certain vessels should be charged with a lien for coal furnished to other vessels can have no effect to create a maritime lien which shall take precedence of an existing mortgage. The William B. Murray, (D. C. R. I. 1917) 240 Fed. 147.

"A supply man who furnished supplies ready for any vessel of a fleet that may call for it should not be deprived of the same right to a lien as a supply man who is told the name of the vessel which is to require the supplies. The appropriation of the coal to a particular vessel, though made by the owner, yet if done in pursuance of the course of business contemplated by the parties, must be regarded as completing a 'furnishing' by the libellant to 'a vessel,' which is identified by the act of the owner in placing the coal aboard." The William B. Murray, (D. C. R. I. 1917) 240 Fed. 147.

What constitutes delivery to vessel.—"A materialman may make actual delivery of supplies to a vessel in the maritime sense, by causing them to be transported by rail and water carriers by interrupted stages from their point of origin to the vessel side, when the transaction is begun by a valid order indicating that the supplies are for the vessel and are to be delivered to her, and is completed by an actual delivery to the vessel consistent with the instructions of the order and the intentions of the parties giving and accepting it." The Yankee, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 919, 147 C. C. A. 593, explaining and distinguishing Vigilancia, (S. D. N. Y. 1893) 58 Fed. 698, and Cimbria, (D. C. Mass. 1907) 156 Fed. 378.

On sole credit of vendee.—"By this act, when the supplies are furnished to the vessel on the order of the owner or his authorized agent, . . . a prima facie lien is given. When, however, as in the instant case, the evidence discloses that no vessel was mentioned in the ordering, shipping, or billing of the goods; that they did not reach the libeled vessel as a part of the transportation begun by the vendor; that the circumstances attending said furnishing in no respect differed from the course of dealing between these libellants and the Fertilizer Company carried on for many years; that the said company was carrying on a business in which vessels were but one kind or class of instrumentalities used in its promotion; that at no time was a vessel named as the recipient of said supplies by either said company or the shipper, and that the vendor had theretofore always looked to that company for payment—the furnishing of the supplies embraced in these libels must be held to be common-law sales and deliveries, made on the sole credit of the vendor, and not maritime contracts, for which a lien is given by the act of 1910." The Cora P. White, (D. C. N. J. 1917) 243 Fed. 246.

Facts not showing want of jurisdiction.—Where a libel is filed in the District Court claiming a lien for repairs to a vessel and the court decides that the alleged "repairs" were really new construction, its decision is not one that it had no jurisdiction of the case but goes to the merits, and not only has it power to award costs but an appeal should be to the Circuit Court of Appeals and not to the Supreme Court. Hazelwood Dock Co. v. Palmer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 325, 142 C. C. A. 617.

1912 Supp., p. 353, sec. 2.

Intrusted with management.—"The word 'management' is used in the Act in its primary sense of physical or manual control. Congress intended to make the basis of the presumptive authority from the owner such visible control in some authorized person as would probably influence materialmen to the opinion that they were dealing with one having authority over the vessel." The Oceana, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 139. In this case it was held that the vendee of a vessel was intrusted with its management although in accordance with the agreement of sale the bill was deposited in escrow to be delivered only upon the performance by the vendee of certain of the covenants in the agreement. Supplies, etc., were furnished on the order of the vendee, and subsequently the vessel was retaken by the vendor for failure of the vendee to perform the said covenants, there having been in consequence no delivery of the bill of sale. It was held that a lien was created.

1912 Supp., p. 353, sec. 3.

Agent of agreed purchaser of ship.—"It is clear, . . . , that under the Act any person to whom an owner intrusts the management of his ship may create liens, but that an agreed purchaser of a ship can only appoint such an agent when he is in possession of the ship. Where there is nothing to limit the term, possession may be either actual or constructive; and I incline to the opinion that it is so employed in this Act. From this point of view, and with respect to the matter of supplies and equipment here involved, it would be quite in accord with the evidence to regard the vessel as having been legally in the possession of the vendee from the date of the first payment on the purchase price. That is, possession might well be construed to mean the intended right to enjoy the property." The Oceana, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 139.

Proviso — Generally.—"This proviso is nothing more than a statutory declaration of a principle long recognized in maritime jurisprudence and repeatedly announced by the Supreme Court of the United States. The Kate, [1896] 164 U. S. 458, 17 S. Ct. 135, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 512; The Valencia, [1897] 165 U. S. 264, 17 S. Ct. 323, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 710. It is in effect that no lien shall be afforded and no presumption given in aid of a materialman who furnishes supplies under circumstances which put him on inquiry as to the authority of the one giving the order to bind the vessel. That is, no one with knowledge that supplies are ordered by one without authority to pledge the vessel, or no one awake to circumstances which suggest inquiry as to that authority, may shut his eyes to what he sees or to what he could see by looking, and avail himself of the remedies or the presumptions of the law." The Yankee, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 919, 147 C. C. A. 593.

"The act does not mean that the furnisher shall not have the right to rely upon the authority to bind the vessel presumed to exist in the officers and agents specified in the second section. It is only when he knows that such officers or agents do not have the requisite authority, or under the circumstances is put upon inquiry as to their powers, that the presumption becomes inoperative." The Oceana, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 139.

In The South Coast, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 233 Fed. 327, it was held that the furnisher of supplies to a vessel on the order of the charterer was entitled to a lien as there was nothing in the provisions of the charter depriving the charterer of authority to bind the vessel.

"There was, of course, no constructive notice by virtue of the filing of the contract of conditional sale in conformity with the state statute. The act of June 23, 1910, expressly supersedes state statutes conferring liens on vessels, and under Rev. St. § 4192 [vol. 7, p. 42], there is no constructive notice to anybody unless the bill of sale of conveyance is recorded in the office of the collector of the customs where such vessel is registered or enrolled. Since this conveyance was not so recorded, we have to deal, under the proviso of the third section of the act, not with constructive but with actual knowledge on the part of lienors, or the actual bringing to their attention of some circumstances that would naturally put them upon inquiry." The Oceana, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 139.

Due diligence is mainly a question of fact depending on the particular circumstances of each case. The Louis Dolive, (E. D. La. 1916) 236 Fed. 279; The Malola, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 214 Fed. 308.

Mistaken belief by a person furnishing repairs to a vessel at the request of charterers that he had a right to look to the vessel for the payment of the bill is not sufficient to give him a lien when reasonable diligence would have enabled him to learn that the charterer was without authority to pledge the vessel. The Sylvan Glen, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 241 Fed. 731.

Vessel being sailed on "lay."—In The Francis J. O'Hara, Jr., (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 312, it was held that the furnisher of salt to a fishing schooner being sailed on "one-quarter lay," under which the master and crew and not the vessel was liable for it, was not entitled to a lien.

1912 Supp., p. 353, sec. 4.

Giving credit to owner.—A defense that the lien has been waived to be successful must be supported by satisfactory and definite proof and such proof is not furnished by evidence that bills were made out and charges made to owners or that notes were given. The William B. Murray, (D. C. R. I. 1917) 240 Fed. 147.

"The terms of the mortgage in this case do not indicate an intention to waive the lien. Nothing whatever is said about the maritime lien, but the credit is only for four months, well within the term of prescription of the lien under the local law, which the parties probably had in mind when the mortgage was executed, and the Act provides for the instant maturity of the note in the event of a libel being filed against the boat. Such testimony as is in the record tends to show that the supplies and repairs were furnished on the credit of the vessel, and there is nothing to indicate that the lien was waived. It is insisted, however, that the claim cannot be allowed because the note has not been surrendered. In several cases the Supreme Court has adverted to the fact that the note has, or has not, been surrendered, and more or less significance attached to the fact, but, so far as I am advised, the question has never been fully discussed by that court. However, in the case of The Theodore Perry, supra, Mr. Justice Brown, when on the district bench, held that the objection was personal to the maker of the note. This is in accord with sound reason, and is consistent with the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of The Kalorama, [1870] 10 Wall. at page [204], 218, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) [941], 945, wherein it was held that the pendency of a common-law action against the owner did not prevent the assertion of the lien against the ship." The Fairhope, (E. D. La. 1916) 235 Fed. 1007.

Insurance money.—Where a vessel burned and the owner got insurance money it was held that libelants were at liberty by reason of this section and Admiralty Rules 12 and 13, to proceed against the owner in personam. Henslee v. West Kentucky Coal Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 609, 154 C. C. A. 367.

1912 Supp., p. 353, sec. 5.

Scope of section in general.—State laws.—This statute supersedes all state laws regarding maritime liens and controls all cases whether relating to foreign or domestic vessels. The Ha Ha, (S. D. Ala. 1912) 195 Fed. 1013; Stephens v. Weyl-Zuckerman, (1917) 34 Cal. App. 219, 167 Pac. 171.

STEAM VESSELS

Vol. X, p. 398, sec. 4499.

Departing from port without a licensed mate in violation of R. S. sec. 4463, as amended by Act of April 2, 1908, 1909 Supp., p. 653, was held to make the owner liable under this section notwithstanding that the libel of information did not point out the particular section of the statute under which the penalty sought in the libel was claimed. U. S. v. Independent Packet Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 721, 141 C. C. A. 477, affirmed (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 673, 143 C. C. A. 195.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In The Seneca, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 234 Fed. 312, 148 C. C. A. 214, it was held that the evidence was insufficient to establish that The Seneca violated the statute by carrying an excess of passengers.

1909 Supp., p. 655, sec. 14.

A tug with a tow of barges was held in fault for collision with a schooner, because the length of the hawsers upon which the barges were being towed at the time far exceeded that which was permitted by the department regulations established under authority of this section. The Piedmont (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 385, 155 C. C. A. 161. To the same point in other collision cases see The Triton, (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 246 Fed. 318; The Teaser, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 246 Fed. 219, 158 C. C. A. 379.

Liability of tug violating statute to third vessel damaged by tow.—Where a tug at the request of a vessel in tow lengthened the hawser beyond the length made lawful by regulation promulgated by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor pursuant to this section, and the tow thereafter collided with a third vessel, it was held that the tug, in consequence of the violation of the section, was liable along with the tow, which was insufficiently manned, for damages sustained by the third vessel, which was not in fault, but that it was not liable for damages sustained by the tow. The Tearer, (E. D. Penn. 1915) 229 Fed. 476.

SURETY COMPANIES

Vol. VII, p. 200, sec. 1.

"Power to guarantee" required by this section is not the same thing as "authority under its charter" referred to in section 3. The existence of the former should be determined by the laws in force at the place of contract. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania, (1916) 240 U. S. 319, 36 S. Ct. 298, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 664.

State power to license and tax surety companies.—The Act of 1894 does not undertake to endow any corporation with power, but only to permit those complying with specified conditions to exercise their lawful powers, derived from other sources, by contracting with the government under official approval. Neither circumstances nor language of the Act indicate design or necessity to limit application by the several states of a well established system of licensing and taxing bonding companies not incorporated under their own statutes. The right to carry on business in a state depends upon a compliance with its laws. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania, (1916) 240 U. S. 319, 36 S. Ct. 298, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 664, affirming (1914) 244 Pa. St. 67, 90 Atl. 437.

TELEGRAPH, TELEPHONE, CABLE AND ELECTRIC LINES

Vol. VII, p. 205, sec. 5263.

Franchise tax.—In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Houston, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 192 S. W. 577, it was said that "the levy of a tax upon the value of a franchise in the public street and grounds of a municipiality granted to a telegraph company must be held to be a property tax and not a license or privilege tax upon the right of the company to conduct its business in the municipality."

TERRITORIES

Vol. VII, p. 254, sec. 1851.

Legislative powers—Generally.—As an organized political division, a territory possesses only the powers which Congress has conferred. Christianson v. King County, (1915) 239 U. S. 356, 36 S. Ct. 114, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 327.

Escheat.—Where a territory is given statutory powers to legislate on all rightful subjects of legislation, it may enact provisions for escheat for failure of heirs. Christianson v. King County, (1915) 239 U. S. 356, 36 S. Ct. 114, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 327.

Vol. VII, p. 267, sec. 4.

School district.—Under the provisions of this section a school district of a territory cannot become indebted in any manner or for any purpose to any amount which in the aggregate, including existing indebtedness, exceeds four per centum of the value of the taxable property within such school district, to be ascertained by the last assessment for territorial and county taxes previous to the incurring of such indebtedness; and any contract entered into by its officers in violation of this section is void. Caddo County School Dist. No. 89 v. Van Arsdale, (Okla. 1917) 162 Pac. 741.

TIMBER LANDS AND FOREST RESERVES

Vol. VII, p. 301, sec. 2.

Purchase on speculation.—The language of the statute negatives the conclusion that it confers the right to buy the kind of public land it specifies on one who, when he makes his application, has the purpose of acquiring the land on speculation, and with no intention of appropriating it to his own exclusive benefit. Taylor v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 938, 146 C. C. A. 134.

Rights of bona fide purchasers.—In a suit to recover the value of land patented by the United States under this Act the court said: "It was always held that no action would lie by the United States against bona fide purchasers from a patentee for value without notice of the fraud." U. S. v. Kolenos, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 180, 141 C. C. A. 178.

Vol. VII, p. 314. [Rights of settlers.]

Title to the base lands does not pass to the United States until the deed is accepted by the general land office. State v. Hyde, (Ore. 1918) 169 Pac. 757.

Vol. X, p. 405, sec. 4.

"While such rules and regulations could not defeat the grant, they obviously could operate to execute and condition it." Utah Power, etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 328, 144 C. C. A. 470.

TRADEMARKS

Vol. X, p. 408, sec. 1.

Character of property in.—Common-law trademarks and the right to their exclusive use are of course to be classed among property rights, but only in the sense that a man's rights to the continued enjoyment of his trade reputation and the good-will that flows from it, free from unwarranted interference by others, is a property right, for the protection of which a trademark is an instrumentality. The right grows out of use, not mere adoption. Hanover Star Milling Co. v. Metcalf, (1916) 240 U. S. 403, 36 S. Ct. 357, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 713, affirming (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 208 Fed. 513, 125 C. C. A. 515, L. R. A. 1916D 136.

Territorial extent of trademark rights.—That property in a trademark is not limited in its enjoyment by territorial bounds, but may be asserted and protected wherever the law affords a remedy for wrongs is true in a limited sense. Into whatever markets the use of a trademark has extended, or its meaning has become known, there will the manufacturer or trader whose trade is pirated by an infringing use be entitled to protection and redress. But this is not to say that the proprietor of a trademark, good in the markets where it has been employed, can monopolize markets that his trade has never reached and where the mark signifies not his goods but those of another. Hanover Star Milling Co. v. Metcalf, (1916) 240 U. S. 403, 36 S. Ct. 357, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 713, reversing (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 211, 122 C. C. A. 483, and affirming on certiorari (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 208 Fed. 513, 125 C. C. A. 515, L. R. A. 1916D 136.

Vol. X, p. 753, sec. 5.

A mere numeral must be combined with some other device, design or symbol in order to make it a vital part of a trademark. Thus where the number "108" was used as the trade name of a brand of cigars, it was held that there was no possibility of a dealer being deceived in the use of "208" by a rival manufacturer when the labels and boxes were unlike and there was a dissimilarity in general appearance, and that an action for infringement of such alleged trademark would not lie. Goldsmith Silver Co. v. Savage, (D. C. Me. 1914) 211 Fed. 751, affirmed (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 623, 144 C. C. A. 33.

Vol. X, p. 780, sec. 16.

Nature of redress.—The redress that is accorded in trademark cases is based upon the party's right to be protected in the good will of a trade or business. Where a party has been in the habit of labeling his goods with a distinctive mark, so that purchasers recognize goods thus marked as being of his production, others are debarred from applying the same mark to goods of the same description, because to do so would in effect represent their goods to be of his production and would tend to deprive him of the profit he might make through the sale of the goods which the purchaser intended to buy. Courts afford redress or relief upon the ground that a party has a valuable interest in the goodwill of his trade or business, and in the trademarks adopted to maintain and extend it. The essence of the wrong consists in the sale of the goods of one manufacturer or vendor for those of another. Hanover Star Milling Co. v. Metcalf, (1916) 240 U. S. 403, 36 S. Ct. 357, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 713, affirming (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 208 Fed. 513, 125 C. C. A. 515, L. R. A. 1916D 136.

Priority of appropriation.—In the ordinary case of parties competing under the same mark in the same market, it is correct to say that prior appropriation settles the question. But where two parties independently are employing the same mark upon goods of the same class, but in separate markets wholly remote to one from the other, the question of prior appropriation is legally insignificant, unless at least it appear that the second adopter has selected the mark with some design inimical to the interests of the first user, such as to take the benefit of the reputation of his goods to forestall the extension of his trade, or the like. Hanover Star Milling Co. v. Metcalf, (1916) 240 U. S. 403, 36 S. Ct. 357, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 713, affirming (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 208 Fed. 513, 125 C. C. A. 515, L. R. A. 1916D 136.

Loss of trademark rights.—Trademark rights, like others that rest in user, may be lost by abandonment, nonuser, laches or acquiescence. Abandonment, in the strict sense, rests upon an intent to abandon. As to laches and acquiescence, it has been repeatedly held, in cases where defendants acted fraudulently or with knowledge of plaintiff's rights, that relief by injunction would be accorded although an accounting of profits should be denied. Hanover Star Milling Co. v. Metcalf, (1916) 240 U. S. 403, 36 S. Ct. 357, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 713, affirming (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 208 Fed. 513, 125 C. C. A. 515, L. R. A. 1916D 136.

TRADE UNIONS AND COMBINATIONS AND TRUSTS

Vol. VII, p. 336, sec. 1.

The disintegration aimed at by the statute does not extend to reducing all manufacture to isolated units of the lowest degree. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 35 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968.

"Improvement of business and its efficiency can be striven for without offense to the law." U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968.

"The true test of legality is whether the restraint imposed is such as merely regulates and perhaps thereby promotes competition or whether it is such as may suppress or even destroy competition." Board of Trade v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 231, 38 S. Ct. 242, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 683.

"Not every joinder of competing businesses or acquisition of instrumentalities that have been used in competition is an undue restraint of trade or a creation of a monopoly. Each situation must be measured by the rule of reason. And a fundamental test is injury to the public." American Press Ass'n v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 91, 157 C. C. A. 287, L. R. A. 1918A 1039.

"Merely because they leave open some branches of the business to the enterprise of others" is not proof that a combination does not violate the statute. U. S. v.

United Shoe Machinery Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968.

Act not concerned with state laws.—This Act does not pick up the laws of the state for original enforcement. It deals only with actual conditions affecting interstate commerce whether they are authorized by state laws or not. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (D. C. Utah 1917) 239 Fed. 998.

No overt act is necessary in order to constitute a violation of this Act, the offense being complete when the conspiracy is entered into. U. S. v. Bopp, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 237 Fed. 283; Knauer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 237 Fed. 8, 150 C. C. A. 210; U. S. v. Rintelen, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 793.

"Contract, combination, * * * or conspiracy."—Under this section there must be a "contract, combination, or conspiracy in existence, in present force at the time the bill is filed. 'Contract, combination, or conspiracy'—the collocation of words, or course, is influential, under familiar canons of statutory interpretation, in clearing and restricting each of the words; in short, necessarily they are all of the same genus." U. S. v. Quaker Oats Co. (N. D. Ill. 1916) 232 Fed. 499.

"The intent is the touchstone not because we are concerned with moral delinquency, but with a test of the probable persistence of the combination's course of conduct." U. S. v. Corn Products Refining Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 964.

So a combination is not excused because it was induced by good motives or produced good results. Thomsen v. Cayser, (1917) 243 U. S. 66, 37 S. Ct. 353, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 597, Ann. Cas. 1917D 322, reversing Union Castle Mail Steamship Co. v. Thomsen, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 536, 111 C. C. A. 368.

"If, in the judgment of the law, a contract or co-operating agreement is such as to work an undue and unreasonable restraint of trade, and through such restraint to monopolize trade or any part of it, the judgment is one of condemnation, no matter how innocent or otherwise praiseworthy the motives of those who had part in it." U. S. v. Motion Picture Patents Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 800.

"The courts have held that so far as intent is involved (that is, intent either to violate the law or thereby to inflict injury) persons so combining or contracting are presumed to have intended the necessary, natural and probable consequences of their acts and agreements, and if their effect is to unduly restrain interstate trade with consequent injury, then the combination is illegal and the participants are chargeable with the consequences and are liable for the damages resulting." Bluefields Steamship Co. v. United Fruit Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 1, 155 C. C. A. 531.

"The effect upon the industry is a factor in determining the illegality of the combination, and perhaps it is yet an open question whether or not the test is to be found only in the combination of enough producing capacity to control supply, and fix prices, at least until new capital be induced into the field, or whether it must also be shown that the combination has injured the public in the exercise of that power. The opinions of the Supreme Court certainly seem to indicate that it is the power and not its exercise which is the test. * * * If the decisions of the Supreme Court are to be so understood, it is the mere possession of an economic power, acquired by some form of combination, and capable, by its own variation in production, of changing and controlling price, that is illegal." U. S. v. Corn Products Refining Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 964.

Question of violation for court.—The question whether there was a combination in violation of this Act is for the court to decide where there is no conflict in the evidence. Thomsen v. Cayser, (1917) 243 U. S. 66, 37 S. Ct. 353, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 597, Ann. Cas. 1917D 322, reversing Union Castle Mail Steamship Co. v. Thomsen, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 536, 111 C. C. A. 368.

Application of Act—In general.—

"Contracts which by reason of the intent, or the inherent nature of the contemplated acts, prejudice the public interest by unduly restricting competition or by unduly obstructing the course of trade are within the Act." Stewart v. W. T. Rawleigh Medical Co., (Okla. 1916) 159 Pac. 1187, L. R. A. 1917A 1276.

Defendants need not be engaged in interstate commerce.—"The Act in question does not require that the defendants should have been engaged in interstate commerce. If they were all engaged exclusively in intrastate commerce, and they formed a conspiracy to restrain the trade of the manufacturers and wholesalers who were engaged in interstate commerce, that would make them guilty." Knauer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 8, 150 C. C. A. 210.

Unfair business practices.—"An action does not lie under the Sherman Act for unfair business practices." American Steel Co. v. American Steel, etc., Co., (D. C. Mass. 1916) 244 Fed. 300.

Action of court in taking possession of combination.—The court violates no anti-trust law of the United States in taking possession of or in operating an insolvent railroad system which it is alleged was formed in violation of this Act. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Lusk, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 704, 140 C. C. A. 244.

Patents.—"Where an article has been sold it passes beyond the monopoly given by the patent, and conditions cannot be imposed upon it. Leases are not of this character; they do not convey the title." U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., [1918] 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968, holding that certain so-called "tying" clauses in leases by which the use of certain patented shoe making machinery was granted by the corporate owner of the patents, did not offend against the Anti-Trust Act."

Shoe-bottoming machinery.—A certain interchangeability in the patented shoe-bottoming machinery made by several corporations is not conclusive evidence of competition which would condemn the consolidation of such corporations into a single corporation organized for the purpose. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968, holding that a consolidation of a number of corporations engaged in making noncompetitive patented shoe-bottoming machinery principally in use by shoe manufacturers in the kinds of work to which they are respectively adapted is not a combination in restraint of trade or commerce, condemned by the statute.

A purpose unlawfully to suppress competition, cannot be imputed to a corporation formed by the consolidation of a number of corporations manufacturing non-competitive patented shoe-bottoming machinery by reason of its subsequent acquisition of the plant and machinery of a shoe-manufacturing corporation, and of the shoe-machinery interest of the principal stockholder in that corporation, where the inducements of the purchase were to enable the use in one machine, without any patent infringement, of both the underlying invention owned by the consolidated company, and a patent owned by such principal stockholder for a particular and subordinate form of operation, and to compose patent infringement suits, both pending and prospective. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968.

The Anti-Trust Act does not condemn a contract whereby a corporation formed by the consolidation of a number of corporations manufacturing noncompetitive patented shoe-bottoming machinery acquired the stock of another corporation making metallic fastening machines, merely by reason of a provision therein that the sellers should, for a limited term, assign to the purchaser any other inventions relating to shoe machinery which they should make. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968.

Acquisitions by a corporation formed by the consolidation of a number of corporations manufacturing noncompetitive patented shoe-bottoming machinery, of other patents, property, and business, must be judged separately, not in accumulation, for the purpose of determining whether there has been a violation of the Anti-Trust Act, where such acquisitions "were not coincident in time nor parts of the same transactions. . . . were scattered through a period of years and varied each from the other, had no dependency, were different and unrelated steps in the development of the business of defendants." U. S. v. United Shoe Mach. Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968.

Articles protected by patents or trademarks.—If the subject matter of a contract, which otherwise would be illegal because in restraint of trade, is a patented article, this takes away the illegality only to the extent to which the field of the trade, controlled through the combination, is coextensive with the field within which exclusive control has been granted by the law. U. S. v. Motion Picture Patents Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 800.

"The authorities are numerous that, when a manufacturer of only one article of food and drink, sells it in bulk, and also puts it up in bottles, the latter bearing a distinctive trademark, a purchaser of the article in bulk will be guilty of unfair competition, and enjoined, if bottling it and affixing the manufacturer's distinctive labels upon the goods bottled by him." Coca-Cola Co. v. Butler, (E. D. Ark. 1916) 229 Fed. 224.

"The trademark laws, like the patent laws, give the owner a monopoly which neither the Sherman Act nor any other act of Congress forbids. It would be a paradox to say that the exercise of a right, expressly granted by law, is unlawful." Coca-Cola Co. v. Butler, (E. D. Ark. 1916) 229 Fed. 224.

Combinations and contracts to affect prices and terms of sale.—"It is the general and well-settled rule that a system of contracts between a manufacturer and retail dealers, by which the manufacturer, in connection with absolute sales of his product, attempts to control the resale prices for all sales, by all dealers, eliminating all competition and fixing the amount which the ultimate purchaser shall pay, amounts to restraint of trade, and is invalid both at common law and, so far as it affects interstate commerce, under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act." Ford Motor Co. v. Union Motor Sales Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 156, 156 C. C. A. 584; Stewart v. W. T. Rawleigh Medical Co., (Okla. 1916) 159 Pac. 1187, L. R. A. 1917A 1276.

And a contract, providing that the principal obligor shall sell no other goods than those sold to him by the other party to the contract, to sell such goods at prices indicated by the latter and to have no other business or employment, being interstate in character, is subject to the inhibition of this Act. Rawleigh Medical Co. v. Mayberry, (Tex. Civ. App. 1917) 193 S. W. 199.

Coal companies and producers.—In the case cited at the end of this paragraph the situation was as follows: The Holding Company, already the owner of the capital stock of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company, became the majority stockholder in the Central Railroad Company, which owned nearly all the stock of the Wilkes-Barre Coal Company. The two railroads had been carrying the coal of these two large producers to many of the same markets, where the coal had been sold in competition. These carriers transported about one-third of the total tonnage of anthracite carried by all the railroads that reached the anthracite field, and the two coal companies disposed of more than 20 per cent of all the coal taken to the market. Together they operated 45 collieries out of 276, and 5 washeries out of 51. There were about 120 other producers, marketing about 50,000,000 tons. The court said: "Upon the facts thus stated we think the union of these interests in the Holding Company is condemned by the rules laid down in the Northern Securities v. U. S. [1904] 193 U. S. 197, 24 S. Ct. 436, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 679; and in U. S. v. Union Pac.

R. Co., [1912] 226 U. S. 61, 33 S. Ct. 53, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 124." U. S. v. Reading Co., [E. D. Pa. 1915] 226 Fed. 229.

Railroads.—The Act was not intended to create competition by destroying a proprietary relation formed long before its passage and by the means of which a railroad system has been brought into existence. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (D. C. Utah 1917) 239 Fed. 998.

Where there was prior to 1870 an existing continuous, common control of two railroads created by leases executed and observed by the parties and unquestioned by the state and there never was a time when there was in any real substantial sense "a natural and existing competition in interstate commerce, it was held that the acquisition by one company of the stock of the other in 1899 was not in violation of this Act. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (D. C. Utah 1917) 239 Fed. 998.

Vol. VII, p. 336, sec. 1.

Board of trade rule.—No unlawful restraint of commerce which may be enjoined as a violation of the Federal Anti-trust Law is imposed by a rule of the Chicago board of trade which prohibits its members from purchasing or offering to purchase, during the period between the close of its "Call" session and the opening of the session on the next business day, any grain "to arrive" at a price other than the closing bid at the Call. Board of Trade v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 231, 38 S. Ct. 242, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 683.

Miscellaneous cases.—The fact that an article is sold under a trade name, as for instance a proprietary medicine, does not protect it. Stewart v. W. T. Rawleigh Medical Co., (Okla. 1916) 159 Pac. 1187, L. R. A. 1917A 1276.

Where an organization was composed of bill posters owning billboards in several thousand of the most desirable cities and towns throughout the United States and its object was to control the business of national poster advertisements throughout the country, and to limit the display of national posters at prices fixed by the organization to the boards of members thereof, there being but one member in each city or town, it was held that such organization created a monopoly in violation of the Sherman Act warranting a decree in favor of the complainant although evidence was introduced showing a general improvement in, and development of, the whole bill-posting business during the existence of the organization. U. S. v. Associated Bill Posters, (N. D. Ill. 1916) 235 Fed. 540.

Where the defendants' association did not confine its activities to its own members and their relations to such persons as from time to time might be placed upon its black list, but went further, and contemplated that the black list, made by its executive committee, should be circulated among nonmembers as well as members, and that outsiders should be notified that they, too, must refrain from doing business with the persons who had been blacklisted by the association, or they, too, would be blacklisted, if done with the intent to restrain trade with the victim and thereby to coerce him, it is unlawful. U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 275.

In another case there was held to be a violation of the Act under the following facts: The plan was first to combine the defendants, who were manufacturers and importers of films, in an agreement to act as one man might have acted. Lists of exchanges and of theatres were prepared, and no exchange was permitted to have films, and no theatre to exhibit them, unless with the consent of all the defendants. The names of none appeared upon the list except such as bought all supplies from the defendants, and any who dealt otherwise were dropped. Every theatre was required to pay a royalty for the use of a projecting machine, even when the machine had been owned by the exhibitor before the combination was formed. The films passed into the possession of exchanges and exhibitors under an agreement which enabled the defendants to recall them at will. U. S. v. Motion Picture Patents Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 800.

Where the issues made by the pleadings were whether there was an unlawful combination to control the price of grape juice, or unlawful discrimination against the plaintiff in charging him a greater price than other jobbers, it was said that if there was such a combination to require all dealers to sell at the price fixed by the manufacturer upon the penalty of not being allowed to sell on an equality with other traders, and the plaintiff was the victim of it, it was no defense to show that the plaintiff was required to charge only an average profit, or that it was the custom of trade for manufacturers to violate the law. Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park, etc., Co., (1911) 220 U. S. 373, 31 S. Ct. 376, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 502. Nor would it avail the defendant, against the charges made by the plaintiff, to show that it had not violated the law by making a combination with manufacturers of other brands of grape juice. Frey v. Welch Grape Juice Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 114, 153 C. C. A. 150.

In a case where there was an association of lumber dealers it was held that the purpose was to prevent wholesalers and manufacturers from selling direct to customers, and that, under the facts, there was a violation of this Act. U. S. v. Hollis, (D. C. Minn. 1917) 246 Fed. 611.

When an association controlling 75 per cent. of a certain commodity refuses to do business with any given dealer in it, its action so clearly and naturally restrains his trade that an intent to do so must be presumed from the act itself. U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 275.

Before the Sherman Act it was the law that a trader might reject the offer of a proposing buyer, for any reason that appealed to him; it might be because he did not like the other's business methods, or because he had some personal difference with him, political, racial, or social. That was purely his own affair, with which nobody else had any concern. Neither the Sherman Act, nor any decision of the Supreme Court construing the same, nor the Clayton Act, has changed the law in this particular. We have not yet reached the stage where the selection of a trader's customers is made for him by the government. Great Atlantic, etc., Tea Co. v. Cream of Wheat Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 46, 141 C. C. A. 594. See also Great Atlantic, etc., Tea Co. v. Cream of Wheat Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 566.

Where a combination is not obnoxious to the Sherman Act its appointment of an exclusive selling agent is not violative of this Act. American Sea Green Slate Co. v. O'Halloran, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 77, 143 C. C. A. 353.

A motor car company has the right to determine that its agents shall sell its cars at its own price. So a contract entered into by such a company with an agent which contained a stipulation that cars were to be invoiced to him at a price to the purchaser fixed in advance by the company, giving him the privilege to sell in certain counties and no others and restricting him from selling the cars of any other motor company in the same counties and also providing for remittances in case of sales, it was held that this was a contract of consignment, not of sale, and, therefore, although interstate in character, not obnoxious to this Act. Cole Motor Car Co. v. Hurst, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 280, 142 C. C. A. 572.

Where a concern is going out of business, it is not a violation of this law to sell its plant to a sole competitor, as this Act does not require the stockholders of a corporation to sustain a loss if that loss can be prevented without injury to the public. American Press Ass'n v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 91, 157 C. C. A. 387.

The fact that a combination of steamship lines was formed in a foreign country does not relieve it from the operation of this Act where it affects foreign commerce of this country and is put into operation here. Thomsen v. Cayser, (1916) 243 U. S. 66, 37 S. Ct. 353, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 597, Ann. Cas. 1917D 322, reversing Union Castle Mail Steamship Co. v. Thomsen, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 536, 111 C. C. A. 368.

Proceedings under Act—Right of individual generally.—A private individual may not raise the question of the violation of the Act, unless he can show some special damage which he has suffered by that violation, which damage differs from the damage suffered by the general public. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Frank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 906, 141 C. C. A. 510.

Necessity of alleging facts and particulars.—“It is essential in a case like this to descend to particulars, and not to rely simply on the words of the statute in pleading.” U. S. v. Cowell, (D. C. Ore. 1917) 243 Fed. 730.

Sufficiency of indictment.—“If an intent to restrain trade is apparent from the indictment, it need not be explicitly alleged.” U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 275.

“In all charges of conspiracy, the conspiracy itself is the gist of the offense, and where a conspiracy is charged to violate the laws of the United States, if the conspiracy be specifically alleged, it is not necessary to allege the details of the law of the United States to be violated with the accuracy it would be if the charge were directly of the violation of the law of the United States, and not of the conspiracy to violate it.” Knauer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 8, 150 C. C. A. 210.

An indictment has been held to sufficiently charge a violation in restraint of trade under this Act where it alleges that the defendants unlawfully and knowingly entered into a conspiracy in unreasonable restraint of trade, which conspiracy was, in substance, that the defendants “should appoint” an executive committee, that such executive committee “should constitute” a listing committee, that said listing committee “should cause” a list of undesirable receivers to be prepared and published, that all the members of the association “should thereafter refuse to have any further business dealings” with the blacklisted persons, that the defendants constituted said listing committee, and, “in pursuance of said conspiracy and to effect the object thereof,” did blacklist a certain named person, and that the remaining members of the association refused to deal with him, thereby restraining him from carrying on interstate trade. U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 275.

“While the parties are engaged in the operation of the design, or in carrying the same into effect, they are transgressing the statute, they are still agreeing to the unlawful offense, and still cohering in the thing that the law condemns. Thus the offense becomes a continuing one, and it is only necessary to allege that the parties were engaged in the unlawful combination or contract between specified dates. By such allegation, the offenders are apprised of the time of their transgression." U. S. v. Cowell, (D. C. Ore. 1917) 243 Fed. 730.

Where the defendants were informed by the indictment that many persons, corporations, etc., throughout the United States were engaged in the manufacture of the different articles and supplies mentioned, and with those articles were engaged in foreign trade and commerce, and that to hinder and restrain such trade and commerce was the particular purpose and object of the alleged conspiracy, it was said: "The purpose of the indictment in the present case is . . . to charge a conspiracy in violation of the first section of the Sherman Act, namely, a conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce with foreign nations; the very gist of the offense being the conspiracy. When the conspiracy is once entered into, as under the common law, the offense is complete. The conspiracy does not go to the restraint in trade of any particular individual or corporation, or combination of men, but to the restraint of all foreign trade where munitions of war are the subject of commerce. So what more could be essential, when the defendants are informed that many persons, corporations, and combinations of men are engaged in the manufacture of such articles constituting munitions of war, and are also engaged in transporting the same in foreign trade and commerce, the alleged purpose and object of the conspiracy being in restraint of such trade and commerce? Can it be said that the defendants are not informed of the nature and cause of the accusation?" U. S. v. Rintelen, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 233 Fed. 793.

An indictment is not bad for duplicity on the ground that it charges both a conspiracy in restraint of trade and an actual restraint of trade where it is clear that what the indictment charges is a conspiracy and that the overt acts described in it are alleged in support of that charge and not as separate crimes. U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 275.

As to whether an indictment is duplicitous in charging more than one offense under this Act it has been said: "It is claimed that the indictment is duplicitous, in that it charges a conspiracy to violate more than one section of the Sherman Law in a single count. 'The court will never be keen to hold an indictment bad for duplicity.' 5 Ruling Case Law, 1081. Without intimating that we think such a thing possible under the Sherman Law as an indictment being duplicitous because it charges in one count a violation of two or more sections of the Act, we are satisfied that a charge in a single count of a conspiracy to violate two or more laws of the United States is not duplicitous." Knauer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 8, 150 C. C. A. 210.

In the case of an indictment under this statute, it is unnecessary to set out any overt act. Simply the combination or contract in any form in restraint of trade between the states or with foreign nations constitutes the offense, and it is only essential to charge the combination or contract. U. S. v. Cowell, (D. C. Ore. 1917) 243 Fed. 730.

Where the object of an association is nowhere described in the indictment, and there is no allegation of any purpose or intent by its members or by the defendants to restrain trade, and the reasons for which it blacklisted persons are not stated and they do not appear to have related to the sale or purchase of commodities or to interstate commerce, the object will, on demurrer, be presumed to have been legitimate. U. S. v. King, (D. C. Mass. 1915) 229 Fed. 275.

Motion to consolidate indictments.—Where the statement of the matters embraced in two indictments for conspiracy sufficiently showed that the charges contained in them are charges for acts and transactions connected together, they being against the same persons for the same acts or transactions, a motion that they be consolidated and tried together will be granted. U. S. v. Bopp, (N. D. Cal. 1916) 237 Fed. 283.

Violation of Acts as defense to suit on contract.—If the Sherman Act was violated by a combination in which the plaintiff company participated, and injury to that company was a natural consequence, then the case comes within the well-settled principle that where a criminal combination is made or a criminal enterprise is undertaken by two parties and either party violates the agreement with injury to the other, the law will afford the injured party no redress but will leave him as it finds him. In pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis. Bluefields Steamship Co. v. United Fruit Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 1, 155 C. C. A. 531.

So if upon evidence abundantly sufficient, the jury has found that all the stockholders of a plaintiff company joined in forming an alleged unlawful combination and in placing their company in it; acquiesced for a long term of years in the part their company played in that combination and in the manner it played it or was caused to play it; and accepted and enjoyed the profits which sprang from it, the corporation itself is bound by their acts and is precluded from asserting a right of action based upon them. Bluefields Steamship Co. v. United Fruit Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1917) 243 Fed. 1, 155 C. C. A. 531.

In an action by receivers of an insolvent railroad corporation to disaffirm a contract for the use of depots and terminals of another railroad company it was held that the court would not investigate the circumstances attending the acquirement by the insolvent corporation of another railroad, thereby rendering as alleged the use of the terminal facilities granted by the contract unnecessary, such investigation not being sought for the purpose of enforcing the Anti-Trust Law, but to enable it to decide whether it would as a matter of business assume the performance of the contract. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Lusk, (C. C. A. 8th Cir., 1915) 224 Fed. 704, 140 C. C. A. 244.

Vol. VII, p. 340, sec. 2.

"The statute prohibits only such monopolies as are unjust and unreasonable restraints of trade." U. S. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 62.

"There is no limit in this country to the extent to which a business may grow, and the acquisitions of property . . . standing alone would not be deemed an illegal monopoly; but when such acquisitions are accompanied by an intent to monopolize and restrain interstate trade by an arbitrary use of the power resulting from a large business to eliminate a weaker competitor, then they no doubt come within the meaning of the statute." U. S. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 62.

"It seems to me that the word 'control,' as used in the declaration, is the substantial equivalent of 'monopolize,' as used in the statute, and that by the contracts in question the defendant, upon the allegations of the declaration, obtained an illegal monopoly of the trade in lasts for rubber footwear. A cause of action is therefore stated under the second section of the statute." Hood Rubber Co. v. U. S. Rubber Co., (D. C. Mass. 1916) 229 Fed. 583.

Intent.—"If there is a monopoly in fact, . . . if there is an exclusion, the taking unto one's self, completely or so far near completion that it is effective, and a monopoly is created, then the intent is wholly immaterial. It would be the fact of monopoly that would be determinative, and not the purposes or intents of the people creating the monopoly; but if no monopoly exists, there may still be an offense for which the remedies—the civil and injunctive remedies—of the statute may be appropriate, if there are acts which constitute an attempt to create a monopoly. But in the matter attempted, . . . the element of intent becomes essential." U. S. v. Quaker Oats Co., (N. D. Ill. 1916) 232 Fed. 499.

Reduction of price of article no defense.
—Whatever reduction may be made in the price of an article does not compensate for the suppression of competition in the industry as a whole, and it is no justification of an illegal monopoly to assert that it has reduced the price of an article produced by it, as this may have been done simply to injure a rival. U. S. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 62.

Burden of proof.—Where an unlawful monopoly is alleged the burden rests upon the defendants to prove that this was accomplished by lawful methods, that is, that it resulted from normal processes of growth, from the mere acquisition of property, or from the superior merit of the products, assuming this to have been an important factor. U. S. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 62.

Particular instances.—The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company acquired control, mostly through the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, of a considerable portion of coal lands in Pennsylvania. The Lehigh Valley Coal Company owned or controlled rather less than 13 per cent. of the nearly contiguous mining regions in Pennsylvania known as the Wyoming, Lehigh, and Schuylkill. That acreage represented a little less than 27 per cent. of the coal lands naturally and conveniently tributary to the lines of the railroad company. Of all anthracite coal transported by all carriers, the Lehigh Railroad was then carrying about 18 per cent., and of that percentage approximately four-fifths came from mines owned or controlled by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company or was produced through such exclusive transportation contracts as had been made with another company. The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company did not own any shares in any company selling coal beyond the limits of Pennsylvania. It was held that a monopoly was not shown, it also appearing that there was a dissociation in good faith between the coal company and the railroad company. U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 225 Fed. 399.

The fact that the land holdings of a coal mining company are large and that the company ships and sells the largest percentage of all the coal that reaches the market is not enough to create a monopoly. Before such facts can be counted an offense under the statute it is necessary to go further and to show that harm has been done or is likely to be done. U. S. v. Reading Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 226 Fed. 229.

"A peculiarity of the rights of the owner of a patent, as distinguished from other property, is this: Each has the right to sell that which is his, but the owner of the patent has the exclusive right to sell his patented article. This is, in a very substantial sense, a monopoly. It must be, however, that the monopoly here meant is not the monopoly condemned by the act of 1890. To hold otherwise would clearly be . . . a logical absurdity, because there can be no such thing as restraint in a trade which has no existence, and a monopoly created by law, in pursuance of a policy of the law, cannot be said to result from such restraint." U. S. v. Motion Pictures Patents Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 225 Fed. 800.

But patent rights and sales price restrictions for a patented article cannot be used as a shield to nullify the Sherman Act. U. S. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 62.

Right to trial by jury.—In the case of an indictment for conspiring to monopolize commerce it has been said that it seems reasonable to hold that the practice as to misdemeanors and felonies may be so far assimilated as to allow one who, under indictment for a misdemeanor, interposes a special plea in bar which in its facts does not necessarily involve an admission of the crime charged, to plead over and to have the question of guilt on the merits tried by a jury. U. S. v. Rockefeller, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 328.

Vol. VII, p. 344, sec. 4.

"The jurisdiction conferred by the Sherman Act on the courts of the United States is 'for the purpose of making the relief to be afforded by a finding of illegal existence as broad as would be the necessities resulting from such finding.'" Delavan v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1915) 216 N. Y. 359, 110 N. E. 763.

Congress having drawn to the courts of the United States paramount jurisdiction and authority in cases involving a violation of this Act, the subject is then one of general law, in respect of which the courts of the United States are entitled to exercise their independent judgment in light of the settled principles that must always control the determination of the legal rights of parties. Skaggs v. Kansas City Terminal Ry. Co., (W. D. Mo. 1916) 233 Fed. 827.

Who may sue to enjoin.—If the facts show any violation of this Act a private person cannot maintain a suit for an injunction under this section. Paine Lumber Co. v. Neal, (1917) 244 U. S. 459, 37 S. Ct. 718, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1256.

Enforcement of the provisions of the federal Anti-Trust Act is by the terms of the Act itself committed to the Attorney-General of the United States, except in cases where an individual can show some special damage resulting to him from a violation of the provisions of the Act. State Public Utilities Commission v. Romberg, (1916) 275 Ill. 432, 114 N. E. 191.

Minority stockholders cannot maintain a suit to procure a decree annulling a deed of all the corporate property. Geddes v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co., (C. C. A.

9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 225, 157 C. C. A. 417.

In an answer filed in a suit to enjoin enforcement of a board of trade rule allegations concerning the history and purpose of the rule are relevant and should not be stricken out. Board of Trade v. U. S., (1918) 246 U. S. 231, 38 S. Ct. 242, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 683.

Burden of proof.—Where there is a denial of plaintiff's allegation of an assignment of the claim such denial puts upon him, in a suit at law, the burden of proving the assignment and he cannot well make such proof without the production of a written assignment, if it exists. And in this connection it is said that a defendant in a suit at law is not entitled to a discovery in equity of his adversary's evidence sustaining his action. General Film Co. v. Sampliner, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 95, 146 C. C. A. 287.

Evidence.—An avowal of monopoly, achieved or to be achieved, cannot reasonably be inferred from a circular which the directors of a corporation making patented shoe-bottoming machinery sent to its stockholders just after consolidation with several like corporations, setting forth that great advantages were to be secured by the control in one corporation of the most efficient types of shoe machinery, and that the directors and large stockholders had been in negotiation to accomplish that end, and that the new corporation would, from time to time, acquire other shoe-machinery properties either by direct ownership or by purchase of shares of their stock, or from a like declaration in a contract between the new corporation and its Australian agent, but such circular and agreement must be regarded as simply the business expression and foresight of the advantages which would result from the concentration in one management of instrumentalities which, however different, supplement one another in the creation of a shoe. U. S. v. United Show Machinery Co., (1918) 247 U. S. 32, 38 S. Ct. 473, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 968.

Dissolution of combination.—"Where a proposed plan for the abrogation of an illegal monopoly, which it has been found unduly and unreasonably restrains commerce, does not afford the relief to which the government is entitled, a decree for dissolution would seem proper even though some of the units may be noncompeting." U. S. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 522.

The court may, in a proper case, in addition to granting an injunction, make a decree of dissolution. U. S. v. Corn Products Refining Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 234 Fed. 964.

"A dissolution may not be decreed, unless there is reason to believe that more good than harm will come of it. As a matter of course, in weighing the probabilities for good or evil, the chancellor must put aside any individual opinion he may have as to whether the community gains or loses by unlimited competition. The Anti-Trust Acts voice the will of Congress that the competitive regime shall be maintained. In contemplation of the law, any restraint of competition unlawfully brought about does harm. It is the duty of the courts to give effect to the legislative will, but it is equally their duty so to shape their decrees as to bring about the result desired by Congress with the least possible waste of anybody's time or of anybody's money." U. S. v. American Can Co., (D. C. Md. 1916) 234 Fed. 1019. See also U. S. v. American Can Co., (D. C. Md. 1916) 230 Fed. 859.

Combination practically dissolved as result of war.—Where a combination against which a proceeding is directed is practically dissolved as a result of war between the nations of which the parties thereto are residents, the United States Supreme Court will not pass on the merits of the controversy. U. S. v. Hamburg, etc., Packetfahrt, etc., (1916) 239 U. S. 466, 36 S. Ct. 212, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 387, reversing U. S. v. Hamburg-American Steamship Line, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 216 Fed. 971. See also U. S. v. American-Asiatic Steamship Co., (1917) 242 U. S. 537, 37 S. Ct. 233, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 479.

Deposit may be required instead of injunction.—Where the plaintiff, the owner of a few shares of stock in a corporation, sought to enjoin the carrying out of a contemplated agreement of sale by a holding company on the ground that it violated this Act, it was held proper to refuse the injunction but to require a deposit to protect the plaintiff in case of loss. Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 407, 147 C. C. A. 343.

Vol. VII, p. 345, sec. 7.

Construction and application in general.—This section provides a penalty. It awards civil damages which are made exemplary by virtue of being trebled. United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 574, 146 C. C. A. 532.

When a penalty of triple damages is sought to be inflicted, the statute should not be read as attempting to authorize liability to be enforced otherwise than through the verdict of a jury in a court of common law. The statute plainly provides the latter remedy and it provides no other. Fleitmann v. Welsbach St. Lighting Co., (1916) 240 U. S. 27, 36 S. Ct. 233, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 505.

There is nothing in the Sherman Act confining the right to recover under this section to persons engaged in interstate commerce, or whose business or property injured is interstate commerce. United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 574, 146 C. C. A. 532.

Where it was contended that the restriction and control relied on by the plaintiff covered only the manufacture and sale of lasts by companies within a single state, Massachusetts; that the plaintiff was a citizen of Massachusetts, and manufactured only in that state; that the plaintiff was not a dealer in lasts, but only desired to buy them for its own use; that all purchases of lasts by the plaintiff would have been intrastate transactions; and that the alleged restraint, so far as it affected the plaintiff, was not of an interstate character, and was not within the Sherman Act, the court said: "Such a control the defendant had, upon the allegations of the declaration, no right to acquire, and, having done so intentionally and unlawfully, it is liable for the consequences of its illegal conduct." Hood Rubber Co. v. U. S. Rubber Co., (D. C. Mass. 1916) 229 Fed. 583.

Jurisdiction of a federal court, limited as it is by law, cannot be made to depend upon argument. The jurisdiction must not be a matter of mere inference, but must appear by distinct averments according to the rules of good pleading. Noyes v. Parsons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 689, 158 C. C. A. 91.

Nature of suit to recover treble damages.—Any cause of action properly brought under section 7 of the Sherman Act is certainly for a personal wrong, and therefore an action for tort. Imperial Film Exch. v. General Film Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 244 Fed. 985.

Where defendant is "found."—This section in providing that the defendant may be served where "found" did not intend to extend the scope of the process of this court. It meant to remove the existing limitations upon the venue of actions between diverse citizens and to permit the plaintiff to sue the defendant wherever he could catch him with a process good where it was executed. Thorburn v. Gates, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 613.

Foreign executor as defendant.—Without the aid of a statute a foreign executor cannot be sued under this Act outside of the territory of the sovereign who granted his letters. Thorburn v. Gates, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 225 Fed. 613. See also Thorburn v. Gates, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 922.

Theatrical booking companies.—If, in the carrying out of a combination of theatrical booking companies which violates this Act, a performer is injured, the resulting damages are within this section. Marienelli v. United Booking Offices of America, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 227 Fed. 165.

Who may sue.—"The law provides that any person who shall be injured in his business or property rights by reason of anything forbidden or declared unlawful by the act shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained. It is the source of the injury, and not the character of the property injured, which constitutes the test of recovery. Assuming that an unlawful conspiracy or combination in restraint of interstate commerce exists, then, if any person is injured by it in his business or property rights, he may recover." Dowd v. United Mine Workers of America, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 1, 148 C. C. A. 495.

As to the right of a stockholder to sue under this Act in behalf of the corporation for damages, it has been said: "Whether or not a corporation shall seek to enforce in the courts a cause of action for damages is, like other business questions, ordinarily a matter of internal management and is left to the discretion of the directors, in the absence of instruction by vote of the stockholders. Courts interfere seldom to control such discretion intra vires the corporation, except where the directors are guilty of misconduct equivalent to a breach of trust, or where they stand in a dual relation which prevents an unprejudiced exercise of judgment; and, as a rule, only after application to the stockholders, unless it appears that there was no opportunity for such application, that such application would be futile (as where the wrongdoers control the corporation), or that the delay involved would defeat recovery. . . . The fact that the cause of action is based on the Sherman Law does not limit the discretion of the directors or the power of the body of stockholders; nor does it give to individual shareholders the right to interfere with the internal management of the corporation." United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., (1917) 244 U. S. 261, 37 S. Ct. 509, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 1119.

Cause of action assignable.—The cause of action under this section is assignable. United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 574, 146 C. C. A. 532; Imperial Film Exch. v. General Film Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 244 Fed. 985.

Though a cause of action under this section is assignable, yet where such an assignment to a lawyer amounts to champerty, it will not be enforced by the courts. Sampliner v. Motion Picture Patents Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1917) 243 Fed. 277.

Effect of death or corporate dissolution.—It would seem to be most inequitable that the representatives of an individual or of a corporation whose business has been wrongfully destroyed shall be denied all remedy because of the death or corporate dissolution of the party they represent. United Copper Securities Co. v.

Amalgamated Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 574, 146 C. C. A. 532.

Pleading in general.—In an action to recover treble damages under this section for a conspiracy entered into by certain decedents in their lifetime and by their executors after their death it is proper to require the plaintiff to state the dates of death of the decedents and the date of the accomplishment of the conspiracy or conspiracies charged and the incorporation of the defendant. United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 574, 146 C. C. A. 532.

Where the complaint charged a conspiracy entered into by certain decedents in their lifetime and by their executors after their death, and the court directed the words charging the executors to be stricken out, wherever they occurred, it was held that this was right, so far as the charge against them was for their own acts, but not so far as it was attempted to hold the estate of their testators liable. The pleader should have charged the executors officially for the acts of their testators and individually for their own acts. United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 574, 146 C. C. A. 532.

Allegations of a conspiracy to injure certain corporations in which the plaintiffs were also stockholders are proper as proof of the conspiracy whereby the plaintiffs were injured individually, although such persons could not recover damages for the corporate injuries. United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 232 Fed. 574, 146 C. C. A. 532.

In an action to recover damages brought against the United States Rubber Company and six last companies, the latter being engaged separately in the manufacture of lasts and by whom it was agreed separately to sell no lasts until a certain date except to such persons as might be specified by the rubber company, the court discussed the allegations in the pleading and held that as to the last companies, no cause of action under the Sherman Act was stated. Hood Rubber Co. v. U. S. Rubber Co., (D. C. Mass. 1916) 229 Fed. 583.

Limitation.—The limitation of five years prescribed by R. S. sec. 1047 (see vol. III, p. 100), for any "suit or prosecution for any penalty or forfeiture, pecuniary or otherwise, accruing under the laws of the United States," does not apply to the action for the threefold damages for injury to "business or property," authorized by this section. Chattanooga Foundry, etc., Works v. Atlanta, (1906) 203 U. S. 390, 27 S. Ct. 65, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 241; Harvey v. Booth Fisheries Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 782.

Where a state statute provides that "an action upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture where an action is given to the party aggrieved, or to such party and the state" shall be commenced within three years, and the legislature in another section provides that "an action upon a statute for a forfeiture or penalty to the state" shall be commenced within two years, it has been said that the statute upon which recovery is predicated is final, but that the right of recovery under this section is private and remedial and that under any view of the provisions above referred to the two-year limitation does not apply. Harvey v. Booth Fisheries Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 782.

Evidence.—"To recover under the seventh section plaintiffs must show that, as a result of defendant's acts, actual damages were sustained—damages in some amount which is susceptible of expression in figures. These damages must be proved by facts from which their existence is logically and legally inferable—not by conjectures, or estimates. They must not be speculative, remote, or uncertain." American Sea Green Slate Co. v. O'Halloran, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 77, 143 C. C. A. 353.

Damages—In general.—"The jurisdiction of the court and the province of the jury in such a case is to inquire whether the complainant has been injured in his business and property by reason of any such unlawful act. If it appears from the complaint and as proven that the plaintiff has been so injured, the court has jurisdiction, and upon the verdict of a jury is required to award the damages provided in the act. But if, on the other hand, he has not been so injured, or if he has been injured, but not by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by the act, he cannot recover in the action." Noyes v. Parsons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 689, 158 C. C. A. 91.

This section "gives a cause of action to any person injured in his person or property by reason of anything forbidden by the Act and the right to recover threefold the damages by him sustained. The plaintiffs alleged a charge over a reasonable rate and the amount of it. If the charge be true that more than a reasonable rate was secured by the combination, the excess over what was reasonable was an element of injury." Thomsen v. Caysen, (1917) 243 U. S. 66, 37 S. Ct. 353, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 597, Ann. Cas. 1917D 322, reversing Union Castle Mail Steamship Co. v. Thomsen, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 536, 111 C. C. A. 368.

If a company is an unlawful combination, then damages directly caused by reason of its appointment of an exclusive agent might be shown, on the same theory that damages caused by other of its acts could be shown. American Sea Green Slate Co. v. O'Halloran, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 77, 143 C. C. A. 353.

Loss of business.—In an action for damages for the loss of business of former customers on the ground that they ceased buying from the plaintiffs because of defendants' acts, it is for the plaintiffs to show that the loss was because of defendants' combination. American Sea Green Slate Co. v. O'Halloran, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 77, 143 C. C. A. 353.

Damages arising from the incidental loss of general business in other commodities are too remote and uncertain, as that loss, if any, the plaintiff might have prevented altogether by purchasing and selling the particular article without profit. Frey v. Welch Grape Juice Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 114, 153 C. C. A. 150.

Damages where required to buy at higher prices.—Damages for loss resulting from the circumstance that plaintiffs were compelled to buy at a price higher than the market value are not recoverable where there is not sufficient evidence of market value from which the specific amount of loss can be calculated. American Sea Green Slate Co. v. O'Halloran, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 77, 143 C. C. A. 353.

Vol. VII, p. 346, sec. 8.

The word "associations" as used in this section has been construed as including unincorporated associations, such as labor organizations. Dowd v. United Mine Workers of America, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 1, 148 C. C. A. 495.

1916 Supp., p. 267, sec. 1.

Construction.—A careful reading of this section of the Act leaves no room for doubt as to what Congress intended. The language is plain, and the court is unable to find any ambiguity in it, which would make it necessary to resort, for aid in its construction, to any source outside the Act itself. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (E. D. Mo. 1916) 234 Fed. 127.

Application.—Where a contract involves and restrains interstate commerce it is not material that the particular acts of restraint alleged to be in violation of the Clayton Act occurred in the state in which the contract was made. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Film Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 398, 148 C. C. A. 660.

"Before the Sherman Act it was the law that a trader might reject the offer of a proposing buyer, for any reason that appealed to him; it might be because he did not like the other's business methods, or because he had some personal difference with him, political, racial, or social. That was purely his own affair, with which nobody else had any concern. Neither the Sherman Act, nor any decision of the Supreme Court construing the same, nor the Clayton Act, has changed the law in this particular. We have not yet reached the stage where the selection of a trader's customers is made for him by the government." Great Atlantic, etc., Tea Co. v. Cream of Wheat Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 46, 141 C. C. A. 594. See also Great Atlantic, etc., Tea Co. v. Cream of Wheat Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 224 Fed. 566.

The Clayton Act applies to contracts made before the passage of the Act. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal Film Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 398, 148 C. C. A. 660.

1916 Supp., p. 271, sec. 4.

Constitutionality.—The constitutionality of this section as applied to leases has been sustained. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (E. D. Mo. 1916) 234 Fed. 127.

Parties.—Where an action is brought under this Act to enjoin the enforcement of certain provisions of leases alleged to be prohibited by section 3 of this Act even if the lessees were proper parties, which is doubtful, the jurisdiction of the court would not be ousted for a failure to join them, as only indispensable parties, and in some instances necessary parties, must be joined. But if any of the lessees believe that their interests may be injuriously affected by the action, they can apply to the court to be made parties, and the court will then determine whether leave to do so should be granted. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (E. D. Mo. 1916) 234 Fed. 127.

Shoe machinery leases.—"Where leases of shoe machinery, although they did not expressly forbid the use of other machines and materials than those of the lessor yet provided for a retention of right by the lessor of canceling the lease in case any other machines than those of the defendant were used in the manufacture of shoes, there was held to be a violation of the statute. U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (E. D. Mo. 1916) 234 Fed. 127.

Motion picture projecting machine.—Where a contract entered into by the owner of a patent for motion picture projecting machine with a film manufacturing company gave to the latter a license to manufacture and sell the machines under certain specified terms and conditions and further provided that each machine should be used solely for exhibiting or projecting motion pictures containing the invention covered by letters patent which had expired, it was void as being in violation of the Clayton Act. Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Universal

Film Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 235 Fed. 398, 148 C. C. A. 660.

1916 Supp., p. 271, sec. 4.

In general.—Courts have jurisdiction to award damages for a violation of the provisions of the Clayton Act as to discrimination in prices although the Federal Trade Commission has made no determination as to the fact of discrimination. Frey v. Cudahy Packing Co., (D. C. Md. 1916) 232 Fed. 640.

"A corporation may be sued under this statute where it transacts business. It cannot escape the obligation to respond because no agent of it, of the rank and character qualified to be served for it, can be there found. Suit may be there brought and process may issue to a district in which it cannot deny its liability to service. The act so construed will for practical purposes usually make it unimportant to consider, in connection with liability to suit and to service, any question except whether the defendant is doing or transacting business in a particular district, for, unless it is, it cannot possibly have any agent who, as agent, is therein." Frey v. Cudahy Packing Co., (D. C. Md. 1915) 228 Fed. 209.

Service of process on agent.—As to service of process on an agent it has been said: "Provided the defendant is suable at all in the district, why not see to it that it shall be summoned in a way to which no possible objections can be made, and which cannot create a dangerous precedent. Whenever upon grounds not obviously frivolous the question is raised as to the authority of the agent upon whom process was served, why cannot the court suspend its answer until the plaintiff has had due process served, as the Clayton Act authorizes, in the home district of the defendant, upon some of its officers whose right to accept service for it cannot be gainsaid? When such service has been made, the question as to whether the earlier one was or was not good will have become so purely academic that there will seldom be an occasion to answer it at all." Frey v. Cudahy Packing Co., (D. C. Md. 1915) 228 Fed. 209.

1916 Supp., p. 277, sec. 12.

"The purpose of the Act was, I think, to give the courts jurisdiction in any district in the United States where a corporation transacts business, whether in the sense of the decisions it is 'found' there or not, and then that service on it may be perfected at its home office in the district whereof it is an inhabitant or wherein it may be found; that is 'found' as provided in the decisions construing that term." Southern Photo Material Co.

v. Eastman Kodak Co., (N. D. Ga. 1916) 234 Fed. 955.

1916 Supp., p. 278, sec. 15.

"All that is necessary to state a cause of action under the Clayton Act is to charge that the defendants committed the acts prohibited by the statute and that they tend to substantially lessen competition or create a monopoly in interstate commerce." U. S. v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (E. D. Mo. 1916) 234 Fed. 127.

1916 Supp., p. 280, sec. 19.

"Specific in terms" and "reasonable detail."—In a suit against an interstate telephone company by patrons of the company to compel the company to repair its lines, etc., and perform its duty to and contracts with the plaintiffs, it was held that an order was not obnoxious to this section which substantially followed the prayer of the bill and concluded by enjoining all persons whatsoever "from doing any acts or things which may interfere in any respect with the performance of the duties and obligations of the defendant company as a common carrier." Stephens v. Ohio State Telephone Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 240 Fed. 759.

1916 Supp., p. 280, sec. 20.

"Case between an employer and employees."—In a suit against an interstate telephone company by patrons of the company to compel the company to repair its lines and other facilities so as to enable the plaintiffs to enjoy their rights, it was assumed by the court, "it being understood, of course, that the court is not deciding the point," that the power to issue an injunction restraining the defendant's striking employees from interfering with the company's cables, or with their repair or with employees repairing them, would be subject to the limitations of this section 20 of the Clayton Act. Stephens v. Ohio State Telephone Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 240 Fed. 759.

"Lawful," "lawfully," "peaceful," "peacefully."—These words were emphasized by the court in holding that in a suit by patrons of an interstate telephone company to compel the defendant to repair its lines, etc., a certain provision in an order following the prayer of the bill was aimed to prevent unlawful acts and acts not peaceful, and was therefore not in excess of the court's power as limited in this section. Stephens v. Ohio State Telephone Co., (N. D. Ohio 1917) 240 Fed. 759.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Vol. VII, p. 384, sec. 8.

Question submitted to comptroller of the treasury.—The salary of a judge who has served and for whose compensation specific appropriation has been made is not such a claim as affords any field for the operation of the Dockery Act.

And therefore disbursing officers are not authorized to submit the question of whether it should be paid to the comptroller of the treasury for decision. Smith v. Jackson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 747, 154 C. C. A. 449.

WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT

Vol. IX, p. 959, sec. 1116.

Nature of enlistment.—Voluntary enlistment rests on a contract between the recruit and the government. The contract is based on his offer of service and the acceptance of it by the military authorities. In making it, the parties deal at arms length; neither occupies a fiduciary position toward the other; each looks out for his (or its) own interest. Whether the contract is binding is determined by the principles of law applicable to contracts generally. Duress, fraud, misrepresentation, avoid a contract of enlistment as they would any other contract. Ex parte Blackington, (C. C. Mass. 1917) 245 Fed. 801.

Effect of contract.—In Ex parte Blackington, (D. C. Mass. 1917) 245 Fed. 801, it appeared that a person enlisted in the National Guard with the expectation that it would soon be drafted into federal service, as it was. He was below the required height, and was not physically fit for military service, but was passed by the medical examiner, acting as a recruiting officer, because of personal bias and hostility toward him. It was held that he was not entitled to a discharge on habeas corpus, since the enlistment was based on a voluntary contract, and the personal animosity of the recruiting officer had no effect.

Vol. VII, p. 960, sec. 1117.

See notes to section 27 of the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134, ante, this volume, title, WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT, at p. 947.

Vol. VII, p. 1017, sec. 1242.

Retention of title by government.—The fact that the title to a pistol is in the government at the time the same was pledged makes the offense complete, and the fact that its value had been charged to the soldier after its loss was discovered, could not affect the guilt or innocence of one charged with receiving it as a pledge. Bolland v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 529, 151 C. C. A. 465, Ann. Cas. 1918B 520.

Evidence.—This section, taken in connection with R. S. sec. 3748 (see PUBLIC PROPERTY, BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS, vol. VI, p. 711) renders the fact that a pistol was found in the possession of one not a soldier or officer of the United States presumptive evidence that it had been pledged to him. Bolland v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1916) 238 Fed. 529, 151 C. C. A. 465, Ann. Cas. 1918B 520.

Vol. VII, p. 1038, sec. 1262.

A contract surgeon is not an officer entitled to have his service as such contract surgeon counted in the computation of his longevity pay. Yemans v. U. S., (1917) 52 Ct. Cl. 388.

Vol. VII, p. 1039, sec. 1265.

Pay during leave of absence.—That an officer of the army is entitled to half pay during leave of absence, granted by competent authority, is expressly sanctioned by this section. U. S. v. Andrews, (1916) 240 U. S. 90, 36 S. Ct. 349, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 541.

WATERS

Vol. VII, p. 1090, sec. 2339.

Subsequent statute limiting this section.—This section, in so far as it is applicable to rights of way for electric power purposes, acquired in accordance with local laws, is superseded by the Act of May 14, 1896, ch. 179, § 2, 29 Stat. L. 120 (title PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 6, p. 510), to the extent that since the passage of the latter Act, such rights can be acquired only by a grant from the Secretary of the Interior. Utah Power, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1917) 243 U. S. 389, 37 S. Ct. 387, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 791, affirming (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 554, 126 C. C. A. 376. See also U. S. v. Utah Power, etc., Co., (D. C. Utah 1913) 208 Fed. 821, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 328, 144 C. C. A. 470, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 230 Fed. 343, 144 C. C. A. 485.

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

1912 Supp., p. 419, sec. 2.

The commanding officer of a cruiser of the Imperial German Navy interned in the United States was subject to prosecution for a violation of this Act, such violation having been committed while the United States was at peace with Germany. U. S. v. Thierichens, (E. D. Pa. 1917) 243 Fed. 419.

Elements of offense—Debauchery.—“The statute is violated, if the intent is to expose the woman to such influences as will naturally and inevitably so corrupt her mind and character as to lead her to acts of sexual immorality, or if the purpose of the interstate transportation is that an already sexually corrupt woman shall, at the place to which she is taken or induced to go, engage or continue more or less habitually in sexually immoral practices.” Van Pelt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 346, 153 C. C. A. 272, L. R. A. 1917E 1135.

The intent of the defendant to subject the woman transported to debauchery need not be consummated by the commission of a specific act of prostitution or debauchery on the part of such woman. U. S. v. Brand, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 847.

Pecuniary gain.—The transportation prohibited by this Act need not be for pecuniary gain. Caminetti v. U. S., (1917) 242 U. S. 470, 37 S. Ct. 192, 61

U. S. (L. ed.) 442, Ann. Cas. 1917B 1168, L. R. A. 1917F 502, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 545, 136 C. C. A. 147; (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 106, 145 C. C. A. 294.

Method of transportation.—A taxi ride from a railroad station to a place of prostitution in the city and state where the station is located does not of itself involve interstate commerce so as to make a person advancing or giving money to pay the fare of a prostitute taking such ride a violator of the White Slave Traffic Act. Heitler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 140, 156 C. C. A. 568.

Indictment—In general.—An indictment following substantially the language of the statute is sufficient. U. S. v. Brand, (S. D. N. Y. 1916) 229 Fed. 847.

Purpose of transportation.—In Van Pelt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 240 Fed. 346, 153 C. C. A. 272, L. R. A. 1917E 1135, the indictment charged that the defendant transported a woman for the purpose of prostitution and debauchery and the facts as stated by the court were as follows: "He and the prosecuting witness were residents of Augusta county, Va. Improper sexual relations between them began when she was 14 and he 35. He had been married, but was divorced before he met the prosecutrix. Their intimacy became habitual and continued for some three years; he having intercourse with her whenever he sought it, which was on the average about twice a week. The relations between them were not known to the community in which they lived. In October, 1913, she realized that she was pregnant. She asked the defendant to secure a place to which, before her condition became such as would arouse suspicion, she could go to await confinement. He made arrangements with a midwife in Baltimore to receive her. In the latter part of January, 1914, she told him that she would like to go. They agreed that she should leave home on the 30th of the month. By arrangement he met her on the train. They spent that night at a Washington hotel, and the next at one in Baltimore. The jury could have found that these stops at the hotels were to afford opportunity for the sexual intercourse which in point of fact took place on each occasion. She bought her own ticket from her home to Washington; he from Washington to Baltimore. He gave and sent her money much in excess of the sum she paid for her ticket. She remained at the midwife's until after their child was born." There was a judgment for the government on these facts which judgment was reversed in the case above cited.

Evidence—Similar offenses.—On the question of whether the transportation was with the intent that the woman transported should engage in prostitution or other immoral practices evidence is admissible of similar transactions had by the defendant with other women. Kinser v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 856, 146 C. C. A. 52.

Testimony of accomplices is admissible in prosecutions under the White Slave Traffic Act. Caminetti v. U. S., (1917) 242 U. S. 470, 37 S. Ct. 192, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 442, Ann. Cas. 1917B 1168, L. R. A. 1917F 502, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 545, 136 C. C. A. 147; Heitler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 140, 156 C. C. A. 568.

It is not necessary to prove that the offense was committed upon the day alleged, unless a particular day be made material by the statute creating the offense. Ordinarily, proof of any day before the finding of the indictment, and within the statute of limitations, will be sufficient. Younge v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1917) 242 Fed. 788, 155 C. C. A. 376.

The court may impose one sentence on a conviction for two or more offenses, provided the sentence is not in excess of the maximum allowed by law for all the offenses of which the defendant has been found guilty. Myers v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 413, 139 C. C. A. 641 (disapproving holding to contrary in U. S. v. Peeke, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 166, 82 C. C. A. 340, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 314).

A wife may be unlawfully transported for immoral purposes by her husband in violation of this Act, and where he is prosecuted she is competent to testify against him. Pappas v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 241 Fed. 665, 154 C. C. A. 423; U. S. v. Bozeman, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 432.

1912 Supp., p. 420, sec. 3.

Section as containing different offenses. — "To engage in the practice of debauchery and illicit sexual relations is a different offense than the offense mentioned in the first clause of section 3. To engage in the practice of debauchery and illicit sexual relations would seem to indicate a continued course of illicit sexual relations, such as living with a woman in a state of concubinage; otherwise there would have been no necessity for using the language in the second clause of section 3, as the language used in the first clause would have been sufficient. The word 'debauchery' is a word of broad signification. It includes all kinds of excessive indulgence in sensual pleasures of any kind, such as gluttony and intemperance; the word is used in the statute with reference to immoral sexual relations." Gillette v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 215, 149 C. C. A. 405.

The management of a house of prostitution comes within the denunciation of this section, and a person may be convicted for inducing a woman to travel in interstate commerce from one state to another, the purpose being to have the woman "manage a house of prostitution and conduct a place where persons of opposite sexes meet and have illicit sexual intercourse." Simpson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 278, 157 C. C. A. 470.

Indictment.—It is sufficient that the indictment charges the offense in the language of the statute, and sets it forth with sufficient particularity to enable the defendant intelligently to prepare his defenses. It need not conform to a state statute. Simpson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 278, 157 C. C. A. 470.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In Simpson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1917) 245 Fed. 278, 157 C. C. A. 470, the evidence was held sufficient to support a verdict of guilty, the charge being that of inducing a woman to go from one state to another to accept the management of a house of prostitution.

1912 Supp., p. 420, sec. 4.

Knowledge by girl of purpose for which she was enticed into another state is not an element of the offense created by this section. If the defendant put her in such a frame of mind that she wanted to go and did go, and it was the purpose on the part of the defendant that she should engage in prostitution—sexual immorality—when the destination was reached, then an offense is committed under the statute. Pordjun v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 237 Fed. 799, 151 C. C. A. 41.

1912 Supp., p. 421, sec. 6.

Jurisdiction of offense of failing to file statement.—Where there is filed with the Commissioner General of Immigration the statement required by this paragraph, the court having jurisdiction of the offense committed is the one sitting in the district where the office of the Commissioner General is located, and not in another district where the offender lives and the alien woman is harbored. The word "file" is derived from the Latin word "filum," and relates to the ancient practice of placing papers on a thread or wire for safe keeping and ready reference. Filing is not complete until the document is delivered and received, and if the document is mailed from a distance this is still true. U. S. v. Lombardo, (1916) 241 U. S. 73, 36 S. Ct. 508, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 897, affirming (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 980.

WITNESSES

Vol. VII, p. 1120. [Act of March 16, 1878.]

This Act renders any of a plurality of defendants on trial competent to testify either in his own behalf, or on behalf of any codefendant, or the government, provided only that he testifies at his own request. Heitler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1917) 244 Fed. 140, 156 C. C. A. 568.

"This statute restrains both court and counsel from comment upon the failure of the accused to testify. If he asks it, he is entitled to an affirmative instruction upon the subject, even in the absence of wrongful comment. But an instruction requested, if not in the language of the statute, should fairly express its thought, so the court may be apprised of what is desired. Stout v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 227 Fed. 799, 142 C. C. A. 323.

Vol. VII, p. 1124, sec. 848.

Voluntary attendance.—"It would appear from the reported decisions that practically all, if not all, the districts in the country, outside of California, allow fees to witnesses who attended voluntarily. The only Circuit Court of Appeals that has dealt with the question, to which the attention of the court has been called, is the case of Marks v. Merrill Paper Co., [C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913] 203 Fed. 16, 123 C. C. A. 380. In this case fees were allowed witnesses who attended from a distance beyond the reach of a subpoena." U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (S. D. Cal. 1916) 230 Fed. 270.

Mileage.—"The other proposition brought to our attention is one which has been before the District Court in this circuit, and even the Circuit Court when the Circuit Court sat on appeal; but it never has been before us in a manner which commanded our attention. We have at times remarked that the practice in this circuit has been to reimburse for the distance actually traveled by witnesses, though in excess of 100 miles from the place of testifying. We have, however, never been compelled as an appellate tribunal to meet the question directly; and we find that finally in the present case the complaint of taxation for travel of more than 100 miles is not insisted on, so we make no ruling about it." The Vera, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 557, 144 C. C. A. 17.

Several causes.—In The Vera, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 557, 144 C. C. A. 17, two libels were tried as one cause of action, the issues being substantially the same. They were heard together at the same time and on the same testimony, the witnesses being sworn and testifying but once, and one decree was entered relating to the two. There was previously an application for a consolidation of the libels but they were in fact never consolidated, the motion for consolidation having been denied by the district judge. It was held by the Circuit Court of Appeals that "only a single fee for the attendance and travel of each witness should be allowed, to be apportioned between the two libels as the libelant may desire."

Vol. X, p. 708, sec. 858.

Criminal cases.—The competency of witnesses in criminal trials in the courts of the United States is not governed by the statutes of the state, but by the common law, except where Congress has made specific provisions on the subject. U. S. v. Miller, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 798, following Cohen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 214 Fed. 23, 130 C. C. A. 417.

A previous conviction of forgery does not disqualify the person convicted from testifying on behalf of the government in a criminal trial in a federal court. Rosen v. U. S., (1918) 245 U. S. 467, 38 S. Ct. 148, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 406.
